But the student body will not care too much. It never has. And not caring gives that student body everything to lose and nothing to gain. Without them, their government can push through a few general improvements like arranging for the growth of a little grass in the lower quad or keeping people off grass already grown elsewhere. But without student body support, the government reaches unhappy stalemates over the really big things needed. Like doing something about spirit; about making "honor code" no longer synonymous with "farce"; about indoctrination of newcomers—a half a dozen orientation booklets or a brace of lectures on the UNC modus vivendi are so often nullified by the "wise" upperclassman who gives the newcomer the "word" on all this stuff.

Keep An Eye Open

Well, it's our school and our government (sez here) and what we make of it is up to us. If nothing else, we can keep an eye on a few things; we can:

See that the newborn "powers that be" lend integrity to the student government by operating as representatives of their constituences; not as members of cliques with "special" interests for "special" people.

See that the things we went to the polls about are not side-tracked, pigeon-holed, and forgotten; but are resolved on the basis of one criterion—best interests of the student body.

No Political Gun

See that the DTH does not turn into a political weapon, but lives up to its promise that it will henceforth be an adequate vehicle for expression of everybody's views.

And if a major complaint of those disinterested ones is that in the past the whole political setup is a muddle of unalterably opposed factions, rather than falling dumbly in line with their water-weak compromise resolutions, let's not merely villify our student government, but let's get behind it. Make those wishes known and make "Student Government" mean just that.

Main Import of 'Innocence' Is Seen in Lawyer's Speech

By P. Paul Rothman

Thursday night I had the pleasure of attending the world premiere of Hans Rothe's Innocence. I am still attempting to recover from the third act, which was the only one that did not drag during the opening scenes.

I gained the impression that the entire import of the play was contained in the lawyer's speech, which was well done by Lois Warnshuis, but it would require a greater knowledge of the French criminal code and a more complete dramatic insight than is had by the average theatre-goer to obtain a complete understanding of the production's significance. Being an average person, I am still attempting to realize just what the play meant.

Best Was First

The first act seemed to be the best act in the play. The opening scene, being slow, gave the play a bad start, but that scene was followed by a comedy relief that seemed to start things on the right track. Patsy Palmer did a nice job of portraying a sexy, but none too intelligent Parisian housewife, and Peter Bucknell gave his best performance of the evening in supporting her comedy. Eleanor Ringer's opening scenes did not foretell the brilliant enactment that she was to give during the rest of the production.

The high point of the first act, and of the play, was the portrayal of Annibale Spaladesco's "dental" treatment of Janine Bonelli; both the lines and their interpretation were excellent. The audience thoroughly enjoyed the attempted seduction and the drugging of the heroine.

Longer Act

The second act took longer to get under way than the first, but the interest of the audience was held by even the slow scenes because of their significance in furthering the plot. Miss Ringer contributed a great deal of life to the second act, which quickened only during the scene between Antonia Bonelli and Annibale Spaladesco. It was quite noticeable that the dentist did not use the red plush beach chair for his treatment of Mrs. Bonelli, as he did for her daughter, but that she still aroused his carnal desires—probably a family characteristic.

Some of the minor roles were excellently portrayed by Madeline Cooley, Gloria Gunn, Frank Groseclose, and Frank Echols.

Smooth Handling

The effectiveness of the play was increased by the smooth handling of the few props and by the general stage arrangement. The audience could easily visualize the transition from one setting to another merely by the movement of a chair or the changing of position by the actors. The clearness of the passing of time was aided by Mark Sumner's handling of the lighting. It was only during the first scene of the second act that there was too much happening on the stage at once to obtain maximum effect.

The vulgarity expressed by one of the detectives while arresting Edmond Ferret in the third act was entirely out of keeping with the tone of the rest of the play.

Although the third act was a slight let down, it can easily be said that the first and second ended with a bang.

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Question

Are you in favor of universal military training?

Answers

Yes, not only as a weapon for possible war, but for the betterment of the health and training of our man power.—Bill Hall, Mt. Ulla.

No, not in the form of a compulsory one or two year period of training. Physical fitness and military science programs throughout the schooling period with several summers of maneuvers would be better.—Dewey Dorsett, Ridgewood, N. J.

No. I don't believe in military training whether compulsory or voluntary. I disagree with the fundamental principle involved. The way to end wars most certainly does not lie in being prepared to fight them.—Mimi Massey, Milledgeville, Ga.

No. It sets a nation's mind toward preparation for combat. I agree that the physical fitness program which accompanies such a plan would be beneficial, but similar programs could be instituted in our educational system. Would it not be better to "protect" ourselves and help others "protect" themselves, if protection is needed at all, through education toward higher and better standards of living whereby necessity for combat is entirely obliterated?—Eleanor Webb, Henderson.

Yes. As long as our nation speaks in terms of war we should remain prepared. Let us not be caught unprepared as we have been during our past history.—Bill Childers, Lenoir.

Yes, not only for the protection of the country, but so high school graduates may have a chance to obtain a broader view of things before they choose a career in life.—Alfred Starling, Albemarle.

Yes, but only in close association with education. Interruption in the education of draft age men breaks the continuity, lengthens, and makes more difficult the schooling period. Military training could, and should, be incorporated into the educational institutions during this unsettled period. In this way the many hours of the day which are usually wasted in the service could be utilized for educational advancement.—Walter Shapiro, Charlotte.

Another Dog Tale

Campus Canines May Replace Boy Scouts With Good Deeds

By Bill Sexton

For weeks people had been trying to tell us to stop talking with and about dogs. One after another—columnists, humorists, The Man in the Street, letter-writers—came up and told us they wanted to hear no more about dogs.

We admitted defeat. There would be no more dogs. It was a hard concession to make, but everybody wanted it, so we would sacrifice ourselves to the public.

That lasted a week. Then came Friday, May 16. Something happened, and we decided that we must relax our rule. Once again—and only once—we would mention a dog.

Thereby hangs our tale, and—if you'll pardon the pun—a dog's tale at that.

It happened yesterday afternoon. A little cocker spaniel was walking down East Franklin street, lost and forlorn among the crowds of cars and shoppers. Frightened and lonely, the poor pup had been deserted by his master, and was dragging its leash behind it.

As often happens the people around the pup saw what was wrong, and stopped to pet and sympathize with the little cocker.

While that futile sympathizing was going on, a large campus mongrel wandered up. The big stray—you know the type: long hair, flea-bitten, hungry, dirty—sidled up to the lost pup, sniffed, and paused there a moment.

The bystanders knew something was going on. It might have been a telepathic conversation between the two canines. Or a supersonic exchange, perhaps, of information. But something was afoot.

A moment of silence passed, suddenly the mongrel grabbed the pup's leash in his mouth and without a word led the pup away from the gaping onlookers.

Not a yelp from the pup. He knew it. He'd found a good Samaritan.

One of the gaping bystanders—not quite believeing what he saw—followed the pair. The mongrel, still holding the leash in his teeth—led the pup three blocks down Franklin street. Up onto what we learned later was the front porch of the pup's home, dropped the leash, and left.

In best Boy Scout fashion the mongrel had rescued the lost pup, and left without waiting even for thanks.

It's true. Ben Rouzie of the AVC among others, swears he saw the whole thing happen.

We might as well believe the tale. After all, it's the leash the mongrel could have done.

WRITE AWAY

Thanks From Eller

Dear Editor:

I should like to thank the voters for their support in the elections. It is necessary that we all be reminded, however, that the election was only the beginning of the task. By mutual cooperation, suggestion, and constructive criticism we must unify our efforts toward a more efficient government. We who were elected must remember that we were elected in the largest vote in Carolina's history. But we shall need the energies of every single leader, whether he was elected or not, and we shall expect the continued interest of the electorate.

TOM ELLER

Election Aftermath

Dear Sir:

The election is over and the men I backed for top positions lost. But strangely enough I didn't write this to air any gripe ,for the men who were elected are qualified and capable and I will back them throughout their term of office. However, let's face one fact squarely. Too much emphasis was placed on the fraternity and non-fraternity question. In fact, almost everyone voted for his candidate because he fell in one of these two categories. The Grail has done much commendable work to breach the gap between these two groups and the "politicians" of all parties did much to undo all the Grail's good work. So in coming elections, let's not have this issue at stake again. Anyone with half a brain will agree that there are fine men in and out of fraternities.

To Success!

Dear Carolinians:

I thank all those who supported me in the recent election. I congratulate Tom Eller and wish him a successful year.

I will concienciously support Tom as a minority representative and hope those who supported me will do likewise.

If half the interest shown in this campaign were devoted to Student affairs in the coming year, we would have an organization second to none in the nation.

Let's make it so,

BILL MILLER

Carolina Qualifies 17 Tracksters For SC Finals Today

Tar Heels Battle Duke In Series Finale Today In Durham

DiLorenzo Set For Slab Duty

Unbeaten Southpaw Seeks Sixth Victory

By Bob Goldwater

The Carolina baseball nine concludes its season's series with Duke this afternoon when the Tar Heels make the 12-mile journey to Durham for a 3 o'clock tilt with the Blue Devils in Coombs park.

Currently resting in third place in the Big Four standings, the locals must win today's contest to maintain any hopes of copping the pennant this year. Win or lose, the Blue Devils have a chance for the flag either way, but must await the results of the three games still left between Carolina and State.

BIG FOUR STANDINGS

	W	L	Pct.
State	6	3	.667
Duke	7	4	.636
Carolina	3	4	.429
Wake Forest	3	8	.273

The choice to handle the pitching assignment for the crucial test has fallen to southpaw Vinnie DiLorenzo. Undefeated in five encounters during the campaign as well as two loop dashes, DiLorenzo turned in a two-hit performance against Wake Forest earlier this week in his last start. Buck Hardee will be his battery mate.

Should a righthander face the Tar Heels, the same lineup that opened Thursday's game against Duke will again take the field. This puts John Gregory, Bo Hackney, Rip Ryan and Jim Hamilton as the inner line of defense and Harry Beason, Whitey Black and Jim Kelly in the outfield. The Blue Devils will be especially careful of how they pitch to Kelly, who garnered four hits, including two homers, in the 15-7 setback.

Righthander Hal Stevenson is Duke's probable starter, although Coach Jack Coombs may use southpaw Paul Karukstis. In the latter event, Coach Walt Rabb plans to insert one or two righthanded batters in the all-portside outfield.

DIAMOND DUST: In addition to the three games with State, the Tar Heels also have one more tussle against Wake Forest on Monday. . . . Frank Robinson will probably start this one.

FRED "RIP" RYAN
. . . cavorts at shortstop.

Folger Pacing Mural Scorers

Jack Folger, vice-president-elect of the student body, is the leading point man in the intramural sports program, according to figures released by the mural department. The standings include all 1946-47 activity up through the winter quarter.

Walt Cottingham, a graduate student, is the pace-setter in the dormitory division, while Folger, a Kappa Sig, tops the frat league.

The individual leaders:

Netters Conclude Season Against Virginians Today

Carolina's racquet-wielders wind up a highly successful season on the local courts today when the Tar Heel netters engage the Virginia Law School, led by former Blue and White net captain Harold Maass. The match will start at 10:30 this morning to avoid conflict with the conference track meet this afternoon.

Today's tussle also completes Coach John Kenfield's 20th campaign as Tar Heel tennis mentor. A victory over the Virginians will be the 267th triumph gained by Kenfield-coached teams during that period, against only 19 losers. This year's outfit sports a 20-1 record.

No sweeping changes are forecast for the Carolina lineup in the final clash. As usual, Vic Seixas will occupy the top position, with Clark Taylor second, Ray Morris third, Jack Kenfield fourth, Don Skakle fifth, and Stan Gruner sixth.

The doubles program will see Seixas and Taylor on the first court, Morris and Charlie Rice forming the second duo, and Skakle and Heath Alexander as the third combination.

Seixas' opponent on the number one court will be either Maass or Bob Kerdasha, former Presbyterian college star. Maass captained the Tar Heels in 1943 and 1946.

Freshman Net Outfit Gains 8-1 Decision

A Carolina freshman tennis team gained an 8-1 decision over Maury high school yesterday afternoon on the local courts.

The yearling triumph was accomplished with wins at the first five singles positions and a clean sweep of the three doubles engagements.

Today's Track Schedule

Maryland, Duke, State in Runner-Up Spots; Seligman Sets University Mark With Discus

By Morty Schaap

A powerful University of North Carolina track team showed the way to 12 other visiting teams yesterday afternoon by placing 17 men in the finals which will be held this afternoon on Fetzer field starting at 3 o'clock.

Maryland was runner-up with 10 men making the last round. Duke had eight, State 7, Clemson 5, Furman and VPI 3, VMI 2, William and Mary 2, and Davidson 1.

The only record that was set in the first day of competition was the University record in the discus, when Big Bob Seligman heaved the platter 149 feet, ¾ inches to beeter his own mark set last week against Duke of 146 feet, 5 inches.

Chunk Simmons, defending his last year's laurels in both hurdle events, led the Tar Heels by winning his heat in both the highs and lows and also qualified for the javelin final.

Doug Ausbon of Duke, who took three titles last year, came through to qualify in the 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash and the broad jump.

Ed Matthews of Maryland, last year's winner of the quarter mile, also finished strong to make the list of six for today's competition.

Roger Neighborgall of Duke also reached the finals in the 880-yard run, which he won last year, and gained a p' ce in the 440.

Norm Rucks of South Carolina qualified for the 440 and 220. Carolina's other qualifiers were Larry Klosterman in the discus, Fred Bauer and Bob Kirk in the javelin, Mark Burnham in the 880, Bob Morrow and Dick Taylor in the highs, Morrow and Heggie in the lows. Len Briley and Laddie Terrell in the broad jump.

One of the best performances of the season was turned in by Don Nelson, who qualified for the finals in both the 220 and the 440 yard runs. Nelson finished right behind Neighborgall in the quarter and nosed out Ausbon in the 220.

Southern Council Supports Student Delegates of ASWA

International Relations Body Endorses University World Affairs Organization

Student delegates at Columbia, S. C., received overwhelming support for the Carolina ASWA by the Southern Council on International Relations. The Association for the Study of World Affairs was represented at the conference by its president, Lincoln Shiao Hing Kan, University student from Shanghai, China.

Kan and Sam Baker, IRC president at the University of South Carolina, presented a series of radio programs on the conference over the three network stations in Columbia, S. C. The Southern Council on International Relations went on record by resolution to support the ASWA.

Dr. Frank Graham was elected to the executive board of directors of the council for the coming year. Prof. K. C. Frazier of the political science department was re-elected the executive director. Col. Gaspar G. Bacon, former governor of Massachusetts, and now visiting professor, was also elected to the executive board. Senator James P. Pope, director of the T.V.A., was named president of the council.

The Council, admitting student delegates for the first time in its history, accepted recommendation of the Carolina delegates and established a permanent student committee on the executive board.

YMCA Plans to Hold Campus-Wide Vespers Wednesday Evening

The YMCA will hold its first campus-wide vesper services of this year Wednesday evening in the Arboretum. The main feature of the program, which starts at 6:30, will be a talk by William H. Poteat on "Faith! So What?".

A period of devotional responses and prayer will follow. The choir for this special service will be under the direction of Gene Stryker.

In urging all students to attend, Joe Giles, chairman of the YMCA Worship committee, said:

The interest shown in this meeting will determine, in part, the future status of vesper services at the University."

In case of rain, Chairman Giles said the service will be held in the small chapel of the Episcopal church.

Philadelphia Offered As Convention Spot

Washington, May 16 (UP) A Pennsylvania delegation has invited the Democratic party to hold its 1948 convention in Philadelphia. The delegation agreed to match at least the financial offer made to the Republicans. The G.O.P. selected the Quaker city for its convention.

Carolina Tracksters Grab Southern Conference Championship

Duke's Ausbon Leads Scorers In Title Meet

Simmons Sets Pace: Moody Gains Record

By Morty Schaap

Carolina annexed its sixth Southern Conference title this afternoon when the power-laden tracksters swept past 12 opponents to score 83 points in capturing the 23rd Conference Track championship at Fetzer Field yesterday afternoon.

A heavy downpour caused the meet to be held up for a half hour and left the track in the form of a sea of mud. This caused most of the running events to be slowed down but even with this handicap some of the best times of the year were turned in.

Only Record

The only record that went out of the books was in the high jump when Freshman Jack Moody of Carolina leaped to a new mark of 6 feet 3 inches. The old mark was set back in 1941 by Stewart of Auburn. The new standard added a quarter inch to the books.

Double winners in this meet included Doug Ausborn of Duke, who was individual high scorer. He took first in the 100-yard dash and the broad jump, also added a second in the 220-yard run and ran on the winning Duke relay team to give him a total of 15¼ points. Chunk Simmons of the Tar Heel squad was second high with firsts in both hurdles a tie for third in the high jump and fourth in the javelin for a total of 14 points. Roger Neighborgal of Duke took wins in the quarter and half-mile events.

The only other double winner was Tar Heel "Snipe" Seligman, who captured honors in the shot put and discus.

The other individual winners were Norm McLeod and Bob Bowles of Duke who tied in the pole vault, Ike Eichorn of Maryland in the javelin, Jack Milne of Carolina in the mile, Chuck Chambers of State in the 220-yard run and Jimmy Miller and Sam Magill in the two mile.

Milne ran off with the mile run finishing about 10 yards ahead of teammate Alvin Smith with Jimmy Miller in the third spot. Milne grabbed the lead at the end of the half mile and never was headed after that.

Princetonian To Be Speaker Here on June 8

Memorial Hall Site For Final Service

Dr. Paul Lehmann, well known religious teacher and editor, who at present is visiting lecturer in social science in Princeton university, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at the commencement early next month.

The sermon is scheduled for Sunday morning, June 8, in Memorial hall. Commencement gets under way Saturday, June 7, and continues through Monday, June 9, when graduation exercises will be held at twilight in Kenan stadium.

Visited Here

Dr. Lehmann visited the University here last winter when he delivered one of the regular quarterly convocation addresses for faculty, students and townspeople. He is associate religious book editor of Westminster Press.

A graduate of Ohio State university, Dr. Lehmann took his B.D. degree in 1930 at Union Theological seminary in New York, and for the next two years was an assistant in the Department of Systematic Theology. Appointed Fogg travelling fellow for 1932-33, he studied with Dr. Emil Brunner in Zurich and with Dr. Karl Barth at Bonn that year.

Upon his return to this country, he taught in the Department of Religion at Elmhurst college, Ill. He received his doctorate in theology at Union Theological seminary in 1936. He was ordained a Christian minister in 1937.

From 1941-43, Dr. Lehmann taught at Wellesley college and was appointed to his present position last year.

Author

He has published "Forgiveness: Decisive Issue in Protestant Thought" and a translation from German of the book, "Re-educating Germany" by Werner Richter.

Dr. Lehmann is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the Haddam House editorial board and the American Advisory commission of the World Council of Churches which is preparing for the 1948 assembly in Holland.

Near East Trouble Will Be IRC Topic For Meet Tonight

"Trouble in the Near East" will be the topic of tomorrow evening's International Relations club meeting at 7:30 in the Graham Memorial Roland Parker lounge.

Andre Salteun, I.R.C. member from Baghdad, will report on the growing nationalistic movement in the Arab countries and on the policies of Russia, Britain and the United States in that crucial area. All students were invited by I.R.C. President John Bristow to take part in the discussion.

Meanwhile, the club's executive committee went ahead with plans for an extensive summer schedule of panel discussions and special speaker program.

Dr. Graham Set To Give Charge

Dr. Frank P. Graham is going to deliver the charge to the new officers Monday night in Gerrard hall. This is the annual inauguration ceremony at which Dewey Dorsett will install the newly-elected officers.

Dr. Graham will tell newly-elected officers about the heritage and traditions of student government at Carolina and will admonish the new officers to give the campus vital and active leadership.

As Inflation Continues

Subsistence Increase Hope Wanes Before GOP Decision

By Earl Heffner

Hope for an increase in GI subsistance took a fade-out yesterday with news from the University Veterans Association President Hugh Wells of a conversation between him and Solon Carl Durham, representative in Congress from the sixth district.

Wells explained that Representative Durham has little hope for the ability of H. R. 870, the increase measure, to get out of committee.

Roughly, the chaotic situation seems to broil down to a divergence of opinion between the Democrats, now a minority party, and the Republicans, recently installed on the legislative throne.

An Order

"The House Veterans Affairs committee wants to read out the measure, place it on the floor," said Wells, "but, reports are that the Republican powers that be have handed down an order that the bill remain in committee until Congress adjourns."

The gagging procedure is being further facilitated by the intricate workings of the Rules committee.

"Representative Durham has indicated," continued Wells, "that the increase probably will be forced to remain in committee until Congress adjourns. Then, when Congress convenes again, the entire program supporting the bill must be begun over again."

Contradictory

This cloudy report contradicts previous optimism resulting from study by the Ramey sub-committee of the veterans affairs group.

Wells pointed out that he and Representative Durham concur in the belief that the only hope for the early passage of the increase lies in pressure on the budget-cutting Republicans.

In a statement to the Daily Tar Heel yesterday afternoon, Representative Durham said, "There is hope for a change of minds before the Appropriations committee finishes its work. But now the present picture on the legislation (the GI subsistence increase) is dark.

He added, "Educational aid under the GI Bill would reap benefits for 30 to 40 years to come. For this reason, I favor passage of the increase measure."

President's Mother Resting Peacefully After Heart Attacks

[illegible], Mo., May 17 [illegible] Mrs. Martha Truman, mother of President Harry Truman, is reported sleeping intermittently but restfully following two heart attacks.

The report was issued by the President's personal physician, Brigadier General Wallace Graham, who added, "It's just a case af a fine old machine wearing out."

President Truman is now at the bedside of his 94-year-old critically-ill mother. His plane landed at the Grandview airport in a thunder storm. The President then hurried through pelting rain to the little yellow cottage where Mrs. Truman had suffered a relapse.

Symphony to Give Hill Hall Concert Next Wednesday

Miss Mary Louise Emery, graduate assistant in the Music department, will be the featured soloist with the University Symphony orchestra when it presents its third and final concert of the quarter Wednesday evening at 8:30 in Hill hall.

The orchestra, under the direction of Professor Earl Slocum, will play the "D Minor Symphony," by Franck; Stokowski's symphonic transcription of "Komm Susser Tod," by Bach; and "Concerto No. 466," for piano and orchestra, with Miss Emery as soloist.

The University Symphony Orchestra has given three previous concerts this quarter, all under the direction of Proefssor Slocum. Admission to the concert will be free.

Dr. Jordan Will Give Sermon This Morning

Dr. G. Ray Jordan, professor of preaching at Candler School of Technology and one of the South's leading Methodist ministers, will deliver the [illegible] sermon at the 11 o'clock service at the Methodist church today.

Dr. Jordan is well known in this section, having served pastorates in Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Charlotte.

Dr. P. H. Epps, professor of Greek at the University, will speak to Wesley Foundation on the credibility of the Bible at its 7 o'clock meeting tonight. Wesley Foundation supper, to which all students are invited, will begin at 6.

Prior to Dr. Epps' talk new officers will be elected. A group of the students from North Carolina State college will lead the worship service.

Delegates to Report On Leaf Strike Study

Students for Democratic Action will hear a report from delegates sent to study the tobacco strike at the R. J. Reynolds plant in Winston-Salem at a special meeting to be held at 8:30 tomorrow night in the Grail room.

Local representatives were Margie Myers, Miriam Silverman, Clarence Barbour, Harold Bock and Ernest Boatman. They visited the scene of the strike yesterday.

DRUMMER BOY—Nelson Benton will be in the feature role of this afternoon's band concert at 4 o'clock on the lawn under the Davie Poplar with a trap drum solo. In case of inclement weather the concert will be held in Hill hall.

Good Question

Five of the seven constitutional amendments have been approved by the student body and according to all reports they will go into effect immediately. However, with the passing of the amendments that were felt needed, several questions have arisen in our minds. Will the year-old constitution go into actual practice and be the final authority on campus undertakings? Is the new constitution flexible enough for a growing campus or will the Student Legislature have to continue making changes at the end of each twelve-month period?

We realize that there never has been a constitution that did not have to be altered somewhat from its paper provisions in order to shape it into actual practice. But it takes much time and action to change major portions of a constitution. The changes have to be hashed out in committee meetings before they are reviewed and revised by the Student Legislature, then they have to receive the approval of two-thirds of the student voters at the polls.

There is more bother and work to the constitutional changes than meets the eye. Probably the main job is the orientation of the Legislature and the student body concerning the merit of the changes. Dewey Dorsett spent much time in arguing, speaking, and writing for the changes. For the week preceding the presentation of the amendments to the campus he attended all meetings on campus to speak in their behalf. He formed a committee to work on the changes last summer and it took no less than 10 months to get the changes adapted and adopted so that they could be inserted in their proper places.

Let us all hope that the constitution as it now stands is adequate and in the best possible form for campus government, and that it is flexible enough so that it does not require change every year. It places a hardship on everyone if the constitution has to be amended each year and it takes 10 months to complete the process.

Roll Up Sleeves

The wining candidates for top-notch campus positions will get their last-minute advice tomorrow and Tuesday nights from the retiring campus leaders. The installation and advisory session that have been concocted by the orientation committee are of vital importance.

Retiring officers in student government will explain the duties of various positions and how they overlap with other campus organizations. The two-day session should pave the way for meetings of the Campus Cabinet during the coming year.

In pre-war years the Campus Cabinet metings proved their merits in that they set up a neutral battlefield where the campus leadership could meet and air their gripes against the manner in which the units of student government operate and at the same time keep the other campus groups informed as to the business that was being carried on in the respective groups.

Easy Money

An easy way to earn five bucks has been proposed by Tookie Hodgson, editor of the new humor mag. All you have to do is to name the latest addition to the publication family at the Unicersity. Editor Hodgson says he wants to stear clear of using the names of the old campus humor mags, Tar and Feathers, and Buccaneer, because of the connotation that the names carry.

Acording to the editor the name should imply that there is humor between the covers and yet there is a definite change from the trends of the former publications that drew much unfavorable criticism from their content.

All entries and ideas for the humor book's name should be scribbled on a piece of paper with your name and address and placed tomorrow in the box provided in the Y.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SALUTE TO JOSEPHUS DANIELS, WHO HAS NEVER LOST COMMON TOUCH—AN INSPIRATION TO HIS NEIGHBORS, HIS FAMILY, AND THE NATION.

Washington.—When the last surviving member of the Woodrow Wilson cabinet achieves the lusty age of 85, and when on that birthday he still writes a daily editorial and keeps his sense of humor and his same sane philosophy on life, and when he is just as great an inspiration to his neighbors and to his family and the nation as Josephus Daniels—then that's news. And it's more important news than anything I could dig out of a cabinet meeting or salvage from the backdoor of a Congressional committee room.

So today—on his 85th birthday—I'm going to write about Josephus Daniels.

One reason I like Josephus Daniels is because, though he's held high position, has "walked with Kings," been flattered by admirals, been taken up on the mountain, he's never lost the common touch. He has remained just the same.

His story is a story which perhaps could happen only in America. His father died when Josephus was two years old, and his mother opened a millinery store to support her three sons. From this Josephus Daniels rose to become Secretary of the Navy in the World War I cabinet and to hold that post longer than any other man in history.

Country Editor At 18

The years between had not been easy. Later his mother was appointed postmistress in Wilson, and put Josephus and his brothers to work in the post office. His job was to light the fires, clean out the building and later to distribute mail. Finally he got permission to set up a little newsstand in one corner of the post-office lobby, and at the age of 18 branched out as editor of the "Wilson Advance." From then until this day, Josephus Daniels has been, first and last, a newspaperman.

This was one of the taunts hurled at him when he was secretary of the Navy. Daniels had riled the admirals by proposing revolutionary reforms. He had banned wine and liquor from the officers mess. He insisted on promotion from the ranks and inaugurated the practice of making 100 enlisted men eligible each year for the naval academy. He also pushed education for enlisted men.

In fact, Daniels was such an enemy of the brass hats that finally they stirred up charges that he was a meddling Sunday-school teacher and political hack whom Wilson was rewarding for past favors. Today, however, fair-minded Naval officers who look back on the Daniels regime admit that on the whole he probably did more for the Navy than almost anyone prior to Franklin Roosevelt.

Josephus has said, with that boyish grin of his, that, as secretary of the Navy, he achieved two of his greatest ambitions: to be manager of a big baseball team and to hear a brass band play every day. The Navy gave him a number of service teams and brass bands galore.

Daniels' Old Love

When Josephus Daniels finally resigned as American ambassador, as he neared the age of eighty, most people would have considered him entitled to rest. He had seen his country go through virtually four wars—the Civil War, which was raging when he was born; the Spanish-American war; the first world war, in which he played a vital part, and the second world war which was just beginning.

UN Considered Two Issues On Question of Palestine

By Ben Perlmutter

Since September 11, 1922 Britain under a League of Nations Mandate has wrestled with the problem of Palestine. During this period, 25 international conferences and 12 commissions of inquiry have sought in vain for a solution. Two weeks ago, for the first time, the core of the problem—the conflicting aspirations of Arab and Jew for ascendancy in Palestine—was debated before a world forum, the United Nations General Assembly.

On Thursday the Assembly ended its special session with a remarkable degree of unanimity—although this comparative harmony was finally achieved on what was primarily a question of procedure. From the time the meeting opened until its close, the debate centered on those two issues:

Two Issues

What should be the function of the special Assembly?

What group should be represented and heard during the discussions?

By a vote of 46-7 an eleven-member, small nation committee of inquiry was established with the power to submit any proposals it desires for the solution of the problem of Palestine. The five Arab states of Egypt. Iraq, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Syria, together with Afghanistan and Turkey voted against the resolution. Although the Arab League States had already reserved their positions on all United Nations proceedings regarding Palestine, they did not repeat their earlier threats to boycott the inquiry committee which is to visit Palestine and submit its report to the Assembly by Sept. 1.

U. S. Influence

The influence of the United States, which opposed the inclusion of the great powers on the committee and fought against giving it any instructions except in the broadcast terms, was decisive. As a result, the terms of refernece do not direct it to bring in recommndations on the independence issue, as demanded by the Arabs, or to take into consideration the problem of Jewish refugees in Europe as demanded by the Zionists.

The two major groups who were not members of the Assembly and applied for hearing before the Political and Security committee, were: The Jewish Agency, a semi-official body recognized by the British Government in Paelstine as the representative of the Jewish Community there. The Arab Higher Committee, a self constituted political body for the Palestine Arabs. It was' first organized in 1936 to represent Arab political parties then active in Palestine. Its organizer and first chairman was the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amir el Husseini, who was exiled from Palestine early in the war because of his pro-Nazi sympathies, and fled to Berlin. He is now directing the committee in Cairo. It was only by a special resolution on the part of the Assembly that both the Jewish Agency for Palestine and the Arab Higher Committee were invited to be heard by the Assembly's Political and Security Committee.

Soviet Support

At the final session, Soviet Delegate Gromyko made it clear that Russia was prepared to support the proposal which the White House itself privately suggested to England last year, the partition of Palestine into Jewish and Arab states. He said that the Soviet Union would prefer to see the creation in Palestine of "one dual democratic Arab-Jewish state," but that the U.S.S.R. was ready to back partition "into two separate states, one Jewish and one Arab if the binational agreement was unrealizable on account of the deterioration of relations between Jews and Arabs."

When he brought down the gaval to close the special session of the General Assembly, Dr. Aranha of Brazil, had this to say: "The ability of our organization to deal with the complexity of international problems has never yet been put to so decisive a test. The only road left open to us now is to meet this challenge—and we have to meet it fully—if we are to survive."

Sweet Charlie Spivak Proves To Be Hot Jivester to Boot

By Ed Joyner

Maybe Charlie Spivak bills his orchestra as a strictly sweet outfit but yesterday he demonstrated that he is also an accomplished master of hot jive to boot.

Playing to an audience of enthusiastic students and imports that filled every seat in Memorial hall and overflowed to the window sills and the steps before the stage, Spivak drew round after round of wild applause with his hot renditions of popular jazz tunes.

Mixing in a few of his famous sweet and smooth numbers to leaven a program of chiefly fast pieces, Spivak presented a concert that only Tex Beneke has matched this year in audience appeal.

No Limits

But Spivak did not limit himself to jive and in his renditions of sweet ballads and semi-classical numbers such as "Begin the Beguine" and "Claire de Lune" he proved conclusively that he is one of the great trumpet masters of the era and fully deserves his appellation of "the man who plays the sweetest trumpet in the world."

Vocalist Tommy Mercer sang with finesse the ballad portion of the program. Despite the versatility the orchestra showed in their hot numbers, probably the most popular piece in the concert was Mercer's singing of "Mam'selle." His listeners liked it so much that after his singing of it in the first half of the program, which was broadcast over radio station WDUK, they made him repeat it after intermission.

Another bright feature of the concert was singer Rusty Nichols who also doubled as trombone soloist. Vocalizing in a throaty, honky-tonk rasp he brought down the house with his renditions of several specialty numbers and jive pieces. He was especially good on Huggin' and Chalkin' and his version of Hey! Ba-Ba-Re-Bop—fitted out with new verses—was a rarity.

From a band in which almost every man is an expert soloist, it is hard to pick the outstanding instrumental performer. But Harry Divito taking the trombone solo in Bulldozer and several other torrid tunes was hard to beat. Bulldozer, incidentally, gave the top men in each section of the orchestra an opportunity to show off their solo skill, and the boys taking the trumpet, saxaphone and clarinet parts did a bang-up job on it.

Bobby Wickey, young drummer with Spivak's band, also turned in a top-notch exhibition of hot skin and brass tapping in his featured drum number. Even the mongrel dog, ever present at Memorial hall concerts, was thumping out rhythm with his tail under the spell of Wickey's torrid licks.

Aside from his excellent music Spivak put on a pleasant show of geniality in contrast to some name-band leaders who have appeared here during the past school year. Dressed very informally in shirt sleeves and loosened tie to counteract the humid temperature, he good naturedly answered wise cracks from the audience and gave credit to every member of his organization right down to the driver of his chartered bus by introducing them on the band stand.

Duke Hands Tar Heels Third Straight Defeat

Two Errors Aid Blue Devils To Score 7-2 Big Four Win

DiLorenzo Suffers Initial Loss of Season; Carolina Nine Eliminated From Flag Chase

By Bob Goldwater

Coombs Park, Durham, May 17—Carolina threw away another ball game here today when two costly errors paved the way for Duke to register a 7-2 victory and allow the Blue Devils to pull into a percentage tie with State for the Big Four flag chase.

The loss completely eliminated the Tar Heel chances of copping the pennant but the Carolina team still figures in the final outcome. The Tar Heels have three clashes remaining with the State nine, who must capture two of the tilts to finish in a deadlock with Duke. The Blue Devil season ended with today's triumph.

It took the Tar Heels only one inning to lose their third straight contest and fourth of the week while also giving Duke its third victory in the four-game series. With one out, the Blue Devils loaded the bases and a walk to Hank Smith pushed one across. Then came the first miscue that provided the winning margin.

Wild Throw

In an effort to nab George Clark at third base, Carolina twirler Vinnie DiLorenzo let go with a wild throw and all three runners tallied. That was all Duke needed to send the Tar Heel southpaw down to his initial defeat of the year.

The next fielding lapse came in the fourth frame, with the bases again loaded. After Duke hurler Paul Karakstis fanned for the first out, catcher Buck Hardee threw high in his return to DiLorenzo and the ball trickled out past second base while the runners advanced. Bakie Palmer's loft to right brought in the second run of the stanza to provide Karakstis with a 6-0 advantage.

He actually didn't need that much of a lead. The Duke moundsman gave up only four hits in the first seven innings while handcuffing Carolina with a row of goose-eggs.

The Tar Heels finally broke through for one run in the eighth on singles by Whitey Black, Jim Hamilton and Jim Kelly. And in the ninth, they staged a brief threat that saw Bob Houghton come in to relieve Karakstis after one runner had spiked the plate and two more had reached base. The Duke ace retired three straight batters for the ball game.

Bo Hackney took the hitting honors for the afternoon, knocking three singles in four trips. Hamilton also garnered a pair of one-base blows for the Carolina cause. While Falwell, Frye and D'Alonzo all collected two hits for Duke.

DIAMOND DUST: John Gregory sat out the last six innings with a pained shoulder and Black came in from center field to handle the first-base job. . .The Tar Heels have three games next week, playing Wake Forest here Monday, State here Wednesday, and the Techmen again Saturday in Raleigh. Frank Robinson will oppose the Deacons.

Netmen Defeat Virginia Law School, 6-2

Tennis Team Ends Successful Season With 21st Victory

By Paul Finch

Carolina's powerful net team concluded the season yesterday by walloping the Virginia Law School netters, 6-2, to gain the 21th victory of the campaign against a single defeat.

In the feature match of the day Frank Guernsey, former national intercollegiate champ, trounced Carolina's Vic Seixas 6-4, 4-6, 6-3 in a grueling battle. The diminutive Guernsey got off to a fast start in the first set, gaining a 4-1 lead before Seixas pulled up to 4-3. Guernsey then held his service twice while Seixas held his once, and Guernsey took the set, 6-4.

In the second set Seixas overcame a 3-1 deficit and went on to take the set at 6-4. The third set produced some brilliant tennis in which Guernsey's experience pulled him through to victory. The final set was won by Guernsey 6-3. The match was closely contested throughout, and the crowd was treated to some spectacular tennis as Guernsey exhibited a beautiful retrieving game against the devastating power of Seixas's overhead smashes and services.

In the doubles encounters Carolina scored a clean sweep as Seixas and Taylor combined to take a 6-4, 7-5 triumph over Guernsey and Maass while the Morris-Rice duo took Feuille and Kerdasha into camp 6-3, 6-4. A third doubles encounter was started but was called off on account of rain.

The summary:

SINGLES

Guernsey, Virginia, over Seixas, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3. Taylor, Carolina, over Kerdasha, 6-4, 2-6, 6-1. Morris, Carolina, over Maass, 6-2, 6-2. Feuille, Virginia, over Gruner, 6-3, 6-2. Kenfield, Carolina over Robertson, 3-6, 6-2, 6-0. Rice, Carolina, over Rosemurgy, 6-1, 6-0.

DOUBLES

Seixas-Taylor over Guernsey-Maass 6-4, 7-5. Morris-Rice over Feuille-Kerdasha 6-3, 6-4.

point.

Magill Leads

In the two-mile run Magill took an early lead and paced the field for seven laps with a lead of about 10 yards, Liddell of VMI was running second until Miller's late spurt brought him up to Magill and they finished together with Liddell third.

One of the noteworthy performances by Carolina men was Walt Francis outkicking Gray of Davidson for fifth place in the two-mile event.

Simmons ran away from the field in the high hurdles and was clocked in the amazing time of 14.6 seconds for a very wet track. In the lows it was nip and tuck and the Carolina lad just nipped Ed McLear of VPI at the finish.

The mile relay went to Duke by about 25 yards with Maryland in second place and Carolina third. State was the third place winner but they were disqualified for pushing on a curve.

Winners Repeat

Most of the winners from last year repeated with Ausbon taking the 100 and broad jump but not being in the running for his last year's high jump crown. Simmons repeated in the hurdles while Mark Burnham of Carolina had to be satisfied with a fifth in the mile. Neighborgall defended his laurels in the half mile and Ed Matthews of Maryland lost to Neighborgall in his bid for defense of the 440-yard crown. Incidentally Matthews finished sixth but when Norm Rucks of South Carolina was disqualified for pushing it moved all the runners up a spot.

Carolina beat off the Duke attempt for the team crown and for the eleventh time since 1922, the outdoor track crown rests at Chapel Hill.

Team Scoring

Carolina 83, Duke 42, Maryland 26½, State 26, VPI 16, VMI 12½, Furman 8, Clemson 8, South Carolina 3.

From Shakespeare to Naval Slang

English Department Head Boasts Manifold Talents as Grid Coach, Military Leader

By Jud Kinberg

When the head of an English department can quote Shakespeare, that's expected. But Dr. Clifford P. Lyons, new head of the English department, can also talk with assured nonchalance about the most complicated aerial navagation problems.

This seeming paradox is accounted for by the blue uniform that hangs in the back of Dr. Lyons' closet. The stocky, sandy-haired Chaucer scholar left Old English behind shortly after the Pearl Harbor attack to go on active duty with the United States Navy. He quickly became one of the service's top men in the important field of navigation training and commanded units at several naval fields during the war.

DR. CLIFFORD LYONS

Rose Rapidly

In the course of three and one-half years in blues, he rose to the gold-striped rank of lieutenant commander, supervised schooling of thousands of Navy pilots. At Norfolk, he tutored aerial anti-sub patrols in the fine art of "getting out to where they wanted to go and getting back to where they started."

His final naval post was on the staff of famed Admiral "Jocko" Clark. At the end of the war in September of 1945, Lt. Commander Lyons once again became Dr. Lyons, with discharge points to spare. He then returned to his academic position as Chairman of the Division of Language and Literature at the University of Florida.

Early last year, Dr. Lyons was invited to Chapel Hill and formaly became head of the high-ranking University's English Department over the fall of 1946. This appointment is the latest high-point in a career in education that has been consistently outstanding. Dr. Lyons started collegiate study at Cornell in Mount Vernon, Iowa. Graduating in the class of 1925, he immediately turend to teaching at Berea College in Kentucky. Three years later he left there to become principal of the Academy of Lincoln Memorial university, just a few miles from Cumberland Gap.

Football Coach

At Lincoln, Dr. Lyons showed the versatility which enabled him to exchange Shakespeare for star-fixes years later during World War II. While principal of the academy, he not only taught English but coached winning football and basketball teams.

"The time when I realized just how split my teaching personality was while at Lincoln was when I had to fail my star half-back and make him ineligible for the season," he recalls.

In 1929 Dr. Lyons started a northeast leg on his academic travels and settled at Johns Hopkins university for a few years of being a student again. Upon obtaining his Ph.D. he became a member of the English Department there, also helped found the Journal of English Literature History of which he is still one of the editors.

"When I came to Carolina, it was something like greeting an old friend. The head of the department at Johns Hopkins while I studied there was Dr. Edwin Greenlaw who did such a fine job at Carolina. At Hopkins. I didn't even daydream about holding the same position that Gleenlaw did here."

From Hopkins, Dr. Lyons went to the University of Florida in 1936 where he was first given the top post in the school's English department. Then came the chairmanship of the Language and Literature division, and, in 1942 the start of the year in service.

Avenges the Murder

Robert Armstrong Portrays Macduff in Playmaker Play

Robert Armstrong is cast in the role of Macduff, who avenges the murders of Macbeth, in the Carolina Playmakers Forest theater production of Shakespeare's tragedy of a tyrant, "Macbeth," to be presented May 23, 24 and 25.

Armstrong is a graduate student in the dramatic art department, receiving his undergraduate training at Howard university in Birmingham. A former football player, he first became interested in the theater through playwriting.

Before Armstrong came to Carolina last year, he had had several one-act plays produced at Howard. His short play, "Egypt Land," the tragedy of a Negro chain gang, was produced in a Bill of Experimentals last year, winning first place.

This past summer Armstrong played the role of John Borden in "The Lost Colony" at Manteo. In addition to roles in Experimentals, he has taken leading parts in Playmakers productions of "Murder in the Cathedral" and "Hear the Hammers Ringing."

Gromyko Gives Russian Views On Atom Power

Reds Cannot Submit To Full Inspection

New York, May 19.—(UP)—Russia's deputy foreign minister, Andrei Gromyko, told the world tonight that Russia cannot submit to unlimited inspection of her atomic resources or to international control of her peaceful production of atomic energy.

Tonight's statement, delivered outside the U.N., clashes more directly with United States proposals than any statement Gromyko has made before the world organization.

Right of Veto

He also reepated that Russia cannot give up its right of veto over decisions taken by an international control authority.

He added that the idea that America can hold its monopoly on the atomic bomb for long is an "illusion."

Then once again he outlined Russia's view that the first step toward international control must be the outlawing of the atomic bomb and other weapons of mass destruction. He said pointedly that the delay of other nations in moving for atomic disarmament—in his words—"causes doubt as to their real intentions."

Gromyko made the policy statement at the annual dinner of the American Russian institute in New York.

Chief Executive Urges National Health Plan

Washington, May 19—(UP)—President Truman has sent a special message to Congress urging immediate legislation to set up a national health and disability insurance program. Mr. Truman said the program is a "logical extension" of our present social security system, and "the American way" of providing greater hospital, medical and dental care.

May Denies Connection With Garsson Combine

Washington, May 19—(UP)—Former Congressman Andrew May has made a vigorous denial of charges that he was bribed by the Garsson munitions combine. May faced his jury today and said emphatically: "I never entered into any conspiracy with anyone to defraud my country."

Greenville Lynch Case Postponed Until Today

Greenville, S. C., May 19—(UP)—The mass lynch trial has been recessed until today. Defense attorneys rested their case without calling a single witness. Earlier, Judge Robert Martin acquitted three of the defendants and reduced charges against seven others on grounds of insufficient evidence.

U. S. Mission Leaves On Trip to Turkey

Washington, May 19—(UP)— A special military and diplomatic mission has left by plane for Turkey. The 22-man group will make a preliminary investigation of Turkish military needs under President Truman's $400,000,000 Greek-Turkish aid program.

Committee Approves Higher Postal Rates

Washington, May 19—(UP)— The House Post Office committee has approved a bill to raise postal rates. The legislation would raise air mail from five to six cents an ounce. Ordinary first class mail would remain at three cents instead of going back to the old two cents rate as scheduled on July 1. The bill also provides for some increases on parcel post, newspapers and magazines.

HENRY L. BRIDGES

Bridges to Speak At Phi-Di Banquet

Henry L. Bridges, state auditor of North Carolina, will be guest speaker this evening at a joint Phi-Di banquet to be given at the Carolina inn at 6:30.

Mr. Bridges was appointed to his position by Governor Cherry on February 14 to fulfill the unexpired term of the late George Ross Pou, which will end in January, 1949. A successful Greensboro attorney in partnership with O. W. Duke, Mr. Bridges was formerly deputy clerk of Guilford county superior court, which position he held for five years. He graduated from Mars Hill college in 1929 and was admitted to the bar in 1933, having attended law school at Wake Forest.

During the last war Mr. Bridges saw lengthy service as officer of the coast artillery, both at Trinidad and Alaska. He is a member of the National Guard.

Robert Morrison, speaker of the Phi, will introduce Mr. Bridges, who has as yet not announced the topic of his address. The Phi-Di banquet, an affair held at the end of each term, was re-instituted last March to bring together the members of both organizations. Chancellor House was featured as initial guest speaker.

COED SENATE

The Coed Senate will meet tonight in Roland Parker lounge, Graham Memorial, at 7 o'clock.

Charge Delivered To New Leaders By Frank Graham

By Chuck Hauser

At 18 minutes before 9 o'clock last night, new student government officers were inaugurated at an informal ceremony in Gerrard hall.

The meeting, which started at 8 o'clock, was presided over by Pat Kelly, chairman of the Orientation committee. Principal speakers of the evening were Dr. Frank Graham, president of the Greater University, and newly-elected president of the student body Tom Eller.

Graham Speaks

Dr. Graham, in his charge to the incoming officers, spoke of the oath of the Athenian youths, who pledged that they would do their best to help make Athens a nobler city than that which their fathers turned over to them. Graham expressed the hope that the recently-elected new officers would take a similar oath to make the University a better place than that which their political predecessors left them.

Dr. Graham concluded by saying, "Let us here resolve to carry high this responsibility in our day and generation."

Tom Eller, after commending the work done by outgoing student government leaders, stressed the fact that a crucial year in student government lies ahead.

Eller Talks

"Unless we, as the elected representatives of the student body, meet the problems that face us adequately," Eller said, "we shall certainly find ourselves office holders in nothing more than name. It is possible to have the name without the government. We must not forget that!"

Speaking of friction between campus groups, Eller stated, "False cleavages between fraternity and non-fraternity men must become a thing of the past. All of us must work together if we are to be proud of ourselves individually and collectively in the future."

President Eller left the new officers with the charge of consistently looking for ways in which to make the government serve the student.

Class of 194. To Organize At Inn Today

A group of seniors with one representative each from all campus fraternities and dormitories, selected by Senior Class President Dotson Palmer, have been invited to confer at the Alumni Office in the Carolina inn this afternoon at 5 o'clock with a view of organizing the Class of 1947 as an alumni class.

The seniors will meet with Alumni Secretary J. M. Saunders and Alumni Field Secretary Luther C. Hodges.

The Class of 1947 will elect alumni officers who will be installed at the Alumni Luncheon on June 9, an annual feature of the Commencement program.

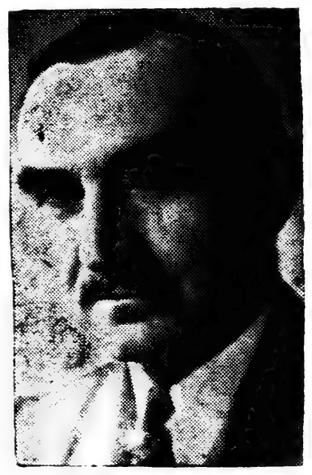
WNC Club Will Hold Last Meeting Tonight

The Western North Carolina club will hold its last and most important meeting of the quarter toinght at 7:30 in room 112 New East, president Earl Woodard announced.

The main part of the program will be devoted to the election of officers for the coming year.

Also at this meeting final reservations for the party to be held at Wrightsville beach next weekend will be made.



The club is planning a dance to be held on June 10 in the George Vanderbilt hotel, Asheville. Tickets for this dance will be on sale for $2.50 a couple.

Oregon Republican to Talk On 'This Is Your Congress'

Dr. Frank Graham Will Introduce Solon; Carolina Inn Reception Follows Address

By Earl Heffner

Senator Wayne Morse, the Republican who yesterday was on opposite sides of the senatorial fence with Majority Leader Senator Robert Taft, will motor into Chapel Hill sometime early today, and will address the student body tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Memorial hall.

SENATOR MORSE

Subject of the Carolina Political union-sponsored address will be "This Is Your Congress," according to a telegram from Senator Morse.

Personal Guest

Retiring Chairman Jerry Davidoff reported yesterday that the GOP solon will be the personal guest of Dr. Frank Graham. The University president is scheduled to introduce Senator Morse prior to the latter's address.

This appearance of Oregon's Senator Morse culminates a long period of waiting by the student body brought about by three cancellations forced when the solon found it necessary to remain on the senatorial floor to participate in major legislation.

Morse yesterday participated in upper house firing over an amendment introduced by him to a proposed bill which would set up a National Science foundation. The Senate voted 42 to 40 to accept the Morse amendment diverting 25 per cent of the foundation funds to state-supported colleges and universities.

In Debate

The Oregon senator had argued during debate that most of the research money would go to a handful of Eastern colleges like Harvard and Yale unless his report was written into the bill.

Ohio's Senator Taft oposed the Morse provision on the ground that it meant "scattering" the funds across the country, according to a United Press dispatch.

Davidoff is scheduled to preside at the address which will be followed by a reception at the Carolina inn.

During the course of the evening, Bill Kemp, newly-elected CPU chairman, will be introduced.

BACON TO SPEAK

Colonel Gaspar G. Bacon, former lieutenant governor of Massachusetts will address the Faculty club luncheon this afternoon at one o'clock in the Carolina Inn.

Lightning Bolt Shocks Student

More than rain hit the campus unexpectedly over the weekend, and one student considers himself unusually lucky to have lived to tell about it. He is Paul Mullinax, Gastonia senior, who was struck by lightning during the sudden thunderstorm Saturday afternoon.

Mullinax was watching the downpour from his room in Aycock when a bolt of fire flashed through the window. The lightning hit him, then burned down along the wall to a steam pipe.

Mullinax was knocked across his room to the floor, dazed. He said "ages" seemed to pass before he recovered from the shock to take stock of his wounds.

That, said Mullinax, surprised him nearly as much as the lightning itself. He had suffered nothing more than minor burns on his left hand, right foot, and chin. And his watch had stopped cold.

Fault-Finding Body

New Student Body President Creates 'Coalition' Council

By Charlie Gibson

Tom Eller, new president of the student body, has chosen a 16-member "coalition" council to search out the faults and to better the inadequacies of student government. To clarify its aims and purposes, the new council is to hold the first of its bi-monthly meetings Wednesday evening at 5 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

The 16 students whom Eller chose to assist him on the council are, in his opinion, among the best versed in student government on the campus. They were selected because of their analytical abilities, their willingness to work, and their strategic positions. Eller's choices tentatively include Margaret Cole, Herman Baker, Annie Ben Beal, Jack Booraem, Winston Broadfoot, Johnny Clampitt, Jess Dedmond, Ernest House, Steve Nimocks, Jim Vogler, James Wallace, Fran Golden, Barron Mills, Charles Long, Bill Mackie, and Bill Miller.

By way of prediction, Eller said, "It is to be hoped that, by such a council, we shall make ourselves aware of mistakes and faults before the student body suffers through newspaper exchanges and rumors. We may be able to anticipate remedial measures in time to act upon them."

Music for Hill Hall

Nina Thomas, Rufus Norris Will Present Joint Recital

By Miriam Evans

Nina Thomas, soprano, and Rufus Norris, baritone, will present a joint recital Thursday evening at 8:30 in Hill hall. Miss Thomas, who is a pupil of Paul Young, appeared in the leading role of "The Bartered Bride," which the Music department presented last quarter. She was also soloist with the Women's Glee club in its recent concert.

Norris, an undergraduate assistant in the Music department, was a member of the Gilbert-Sullivan Opera company and also toured as soloist in the "Desert Song." He appeared in the leading role of "The Gondoliers," "Yeomen of the Guard," and "The Magnificat," which were presented by the University Music department. He is soloist at the First Presbyterian church in Durham and is a member of the Men's Glee club.

The program will include compositions by Casparini, Perti, Steffani, and Schubert to be sung by Norris.

Miss Thomas will sing works by Faure, Bachelet, Lalo, Griffes, Bach, Naginski, and Rummel.

SENIOR LIFE SAVING CERTIFICATES

Students who have completed the senior life saving courses given by the Athletic department may pick up their certificates from Coach Dick Jamerson at Woollen gym.

Well-Known in Music Field

Special Organ Music for 'Macbeth' Show Composed for Production by Wilton Mason

Wilton Mason, graduate assistant in the music department, has composed special organ music for the Carolina Playmakers outdoor production of "Macbeth," which opens Friday at 8:30 in the Forest theater for a three-night run.

Mason is well known in the field of music, having composed numerous concert songs which have been sung by Helen Jepson, John Charles Thomas and others of the Metropolitan Opera company.

As a graduate assistant Mason teaches piano and music history in the department. Last fall he gave a performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 2 with the University symphony. He has also played chamber music with the University String quartet.

WILTON MASON

Before the war Mason was an undergraduate student here. He was an active member of the Carolina Playmakers, taking parts in Paul Green's "The House of Connelly" and experimental plays. Also he was rehearsal accompanist and played in the orchestra for the Playmakers' productions of Gilbert and Sulivan operettas.

Graduating in 1936, Mason went to the Juilliard School of Music in New York where he studied composition and piano. In the Army for nearly five years, he did concert work in the states and abroad, giving recitals in England and Germany.

Freedom of Speech

When Communist Elizabeth Flynn spoke last Tuesday evening, we did not entirely discount the possibility of violent demonstrations against her, but we strongly supported her right to speak, and the non-partisan policy of the CPU in bringing her to Carolina. As it turned out, the affair came off relatively smoothly, but there is no reason at all why any unpleasantness or discourteousness at all should result at a speech of one of a different political creed from most of us.

So joining in with the CPU in today's Write Away column on this page, we roundly condemn the small minority who brought bad light upon our school by their ungentlemanly conduct during her talk. And we trust that in the future, if they must, they will show their disapproval either by their silence, when attending future speeches, or by their remaining absent.

We're not worried about Carolina serving as a breeding ground for overthrow of democracy through allowing a Communist to use the University halls as a ground for dissemination of her "revolutionary propaganda" . . . . We're just confident enough to believe that if students listen closely and politely to Communist harangues and then analyze them alongside of our present economic system they will be that much more convinced of the fallacies of Communism.

Hence we say: Education, not suppression, is the best policy. Let's hear all sides . . . . but as gentlemen.—R. G.

Center of Culture

They say Chapel Hill is a quiet, peaceful little village—a center of southern culture, a haven of the academic life.

Maybe so. But we doubt it, and we think we've got good enough reason.

That reason is Tintop, a colored community adjoining Chapel Hill and Carrboro, nestled in a little valley between the Carrboro Mills and Westwood.

Local police describe Tintop as a "hell-hole of bootleggers and prostitutes"—just far enough outside the city limits of both Chapel Hill and Carrboro to escape rigid law enforcement.

Bootlegging and prostitution is bad enough. But the news that three murders have taken place in the small community during the past 12 months is astounding, then disgusting to any citizen of this "cultured" community.

Few citizens or students have even heard of Tintop. It is nothing more than two streets with a dozen or so cheap, tin-roofed houses. But within that community three murders have taken place since last May. Within an area no larger than Emerson field three Negroes—two men, and, Saturday, a 28-year-old woman—have met violent deaths.

When the stories about the brutal killing of Louise Farrington, beaten to death with the steering post of an auto, hit the big city dailies this morning, they carried a Chapel Hill dateline. They spoke of the three murders there in the past year, of the notorious reputation among law enforcement officers Tintop deservedly holds.

Perhaps Tintop is a place for cultured Chapel Hill to educate. Perhaps there's a training ground for the School of Public Health and Graduate Schools to send social workers. And undoubtedly it is a place for county law officers to stage an intensive clean-up.—W. C. S.

The greatest mistake you can make is to be continually fearing that you will make one.—Elbert Hubbard.

Supplanting Chessmen, Forensics

Intercollegiate Radio Net Now Set Up on 66 Campuses

New York (UP)—The glamor of radio has supplanted the austere debating society and chess club as key extra-curricular activity on 66 progressive college campuses.

Youthful announcers, engineers, directors and actors man the lowpowered broadcasting stations which make up the coast-to-coast Intercollegiate Broadcasting System, with an estimated 125,000 listeners.

Approximately 100 IBS alumni enter the radio profession annually, and the system is looked upon as one of the industry's best proving grounds for talent.

College radio was born 11 years ago at Brown University, where undergraduates George Abraham and David Borst, now IBS executive chairman and technical director, respectively, toyed with the idea of their own intramural broadcast station. WBRU, their brain child, boasts today a technical plant comparable to that of many an independent commercial station.

Late Broadcasts

Most of the campus stations broadcast from 7 to 11 in the evening, although many feature wake-up shows and post-midnight programs for all-night crammers.

A typical night's schedule includes news, sports, popular and classical music, drama, comedy and educational shows. Special events coverage is handled to the envy of many a college newspaper. At WKCR, Columbia, for instance, a wire recorder is used for on-the-scene accounts of spot news happenings, and interviews with visiting celebrities.

Home and away sports events are broadcast by most of the IBS affiliates. WHFV, Haverford; WVBR, Cornell, and WYBC, Yale, are currently vying for top distance honors. Special telephone company lines are rented for the remote pickups.

David Linton, who but a few years ago produced dramatic shows at WSRN, Swarthmore, is the dynamic program director of the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System. Keeping the network coordinated is a full-time job, says Linton, who envisions a nationwide system of 250 student-operated stations.

Fans 'Phone In

While serious music leads all campus popularity polls, the all-request shows of dance tunes are the bane of local switchboard operators; the disc jockeys often elicit a phone call every minute from "hep" listeners.

"Limited area coverage" is the key to campus stations' selectivity of audience. Through low-powered transmitters student programs can be channelled for dormitory and fraternity audiences only.

When a student has finished four years of college radio—writing plays, running turntables, acting, fixing loose connections, staying before a "live" mike continually—it's little wonder he's considered ready for a vital spot in the broadcasting industry.

WRITE AWAY

Gentlemen?

Dear Editor:

In keeping with its policy of presenting to the campus speakers of all political credos, the Carolina Political union recently sponsored an address by Miss Elizabeth G. Flynn, national chairman of the Womens' Division of the Communist party. Most of Miss Flynn's audience including the undersigned, were alike in their opposition to her views; but they were very unlike in their methods of expressing disapproval. Some of the methods chosen, it is felt, were in exceptionally poor taste.

We feel that any speaker, regardless of viewpoint, has a right to express his or her beliefs; and at Carolina, certainly, a right to expect and receive courteous treatment. It might be pointed out that, aside from normal gentlemanly conduct, a good reason for listening quietly to Miss Flynn would be in order to understand, to recognize, and if so desired, to combat intelligently in the future her ideologies.

If a person disagrees with a speaker so violently that he does not wish to listen to his arguments, it might be also pointed out that attendance at such speeches is not compulsory. We should like to request that, in the future, speeches not be spoiled for those who for one reason or another wish to listen.

Politics Should Be Purged From Races for Editorship

By Earl Heffner

There is a "P" in politics and one in publications. Here at this University it seems to be the same "P."

For years the selection of editor of various campus publications has been at the discretion of the voters. Fortunately, this has resulted in the election of many extremely well-qualified editors.

Yet, it leaves publications as a bone of contention, as a portion of the spoils system under our political process. There is no Reno in sight. Nonetheless, a strong move should be made to divorce publications from politics, to insure the student body of having the most capable men in the editorial seats of judgment.

Duke System

Duke has such a system. So does Antioch college, famed Ohio educational institution of national renown for its academic excellence. Columbia of New York also divorces politics and publications.

Tradition should give way for the benefits of the student. With this fact in view, it is time for the student government officials and publications board to reconsider the method of selecting editors.

Since criticism should never be proferred without a suggested solution, here are some recommendations.

First, the size of the publications board should be increased. A new board could consist of four faculty members, two from the English and two from the journalism departments, and seven student members, five men and two coeds. This would give fair mathematical representation to the men and women on campus.

This new board should be empowered to determine the editor of each publication. When elected, each publication editor should receive an automatic ex officio status on the board, should have a voice in the selection of his successor.

Submit Qualifications

Candidates for editorship of a publication should then be required to submit to the board their qualifications, platforms, and samples of their writing. At such time as the board decides, the candidates could be called in for interviews.

Following this process, the board itself then should select the new editor.

This method of selection would not remove the student control from publications. Rather it would remove the political bosses from the control they exercise as selectors of candidates. Hence, in the long run it would give students greater voice as they could still select seven student members of the publications board, would then be certain that their editors would be the best possible qualified men.

One Danger

The one major danger of this selection would be that publications board candidates would be rubber-stamp voters in determining the new editor. However, this could be avoided by not having the candidates for publications editorship officially released until new publications board members are elected. Too, we may count on the individuality of board members to counteract rubber-stamp possibilities.

Ex-Editor Bill Woestendiek, who was swept into office by the popular vote, and I have been discussing this plan for a number of months. It was not brought up prior to the past election since we wanted no complaints of playing politics.

But now that the political firing has ceased, the time for rational thinking and intelligent acting is at hand. It is worthy of consideration by students and leaders on campus.

GI's Have Hard Time Trying to Make Go On Veteran Check

Madison, Wis.—(IP)—"Many veteran students, especially those with families, at the University of Wisconsin will be hard put to stay in school unless living costs go down, government subsidies are raised, or other means of support are found."

That was the testimony of Kenneth Little, director of student personnel services and registrar at the State university, at a hearing recently in Washington of the sub-committee on education, training and rehabilitation of the House of Representatives committee on veteran affairs.

Little Gives Facts

At the request of the sub-committee, Little gave information and statistics on the living expenses of veterans attending the State University. The congressmen wanted to know whether large numbers of veterans were dropping out of colleges because of lack of funds.

About 10 percent of veterans who withdrew from the State university last semester gave purely financial reasons, Little reported, but finances were a partial cause of many other withdrawals.

"What has happened in the past however, is not strictly indicative of what may happen in the future," he testified, "because the veterans' savings are being depleted rapidly and living costs are rising. Many veterans supplemented the G. I. Bill with money saved from their service pay during the war."

Bauer Handcuffs Tar Heels As Wake Forest Triumphs, 5-1

Golfers Close Best Season In History Against N.C. State In Raleigh Today

Locals Seek 8th Win of Year, 2nd In Row Over 'Pack

Carolina's Southern conference golf champions will close their most successful season in the history of the school this afternoon when they tee off against the Wolfpack of State College at the Raleigh country club.

The Tar Heels are odds-on-favorites to defeat the State outfit, as a result of a 17-11 victory over them in an earlier meeting. A second win today will give the locals a record of eight victories against a single loss for the year, coupled with their sweep of conference honors at Winston-Salem a fortnight ago.

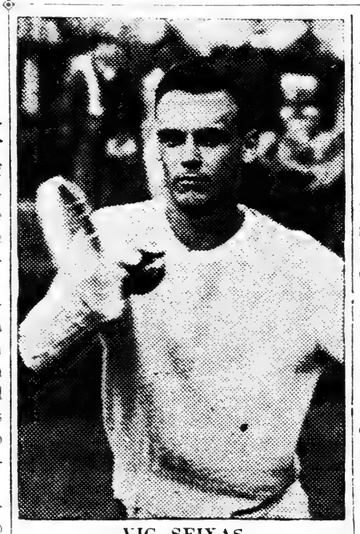
This will put Dick Doeschler, who had a 69 on the Raleigh course last week, at No. 1. Junie Bailey will be paired with him at No. 2, with Harvey Ward at No. 3, and Ray Taylor filling out the second foursome at the No. 4 berth.

The other two Carolina spots will be capably plugged by Mike Nolan in the No. 5 position and the season's surprise, Ed Ashby at No. 6.



Speculation is still high that the Tar Heels may compete in the National intercollegiate tourney which gets underway in Ann Arbor, Michigan on June 22. The University of Michigan is the current champion. The locals defeated the Wolverines earlier this year.

Monogram Elections Set For This Evening

An all important meeting of the Monogram Club will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock at the club house.

President Jim Camp announced that all members are urged to be on hand for the election of officers and the election of the best all-around athlete on the campus who will be the recipient of the Adam Hat Trophy.

Tune in Station WDUK today at 4:20 o'clock for Tar Heel sports.

VIC SEIXAS

Seixas Elected Tennis Captain

Vic Seixas, the top-ranking netter on this year's powerful racquet squad, was elected captain for the 1948 team in the voting of lettermen held yesterday.

A rising senior from Philadelphia, Seixas currently occupies the 16th rank in the 1946 amateur tennis standings and is a former national junior runner-up. Although this was his first year of varsity tennis for Carolina, Seixas was a member of the 1942 freshman team and was the ninth ranking player in the nation that year.

Seixas' record for this season in dual competition shows 16 victories and four setbacks, with two of the defeats coming from higher ranked players. The captain-elect was the runner-up for the Southern conference tennis crown, which went to William and Mary's Gardner Larned.

Roaches Win To Gain Final

By Gil McLeod

The final week of Carolina's intramural sports for the 1946-47 season got underway yesterday afternoon as play in the mural softball tourney continued.

Winners in yesterday's tourney play were the Phi Kaps, Pikas, and Roaches.

Bill Smith, the pitching ace for the Pikas, led his teammates to a 9-2 win over the Delta Sigs. Smith turned in the best pitching performance of the softball season in allowing the Delta Sigs only two hits. The Pikas pushed across five runs their first time at bat and then coasted on to victory.

Meanwhile, the double elimination tourney for the dormitory division got underway, with the Roaches scoring two victories in a row.

In the first tilt, Jim Godwin pitched the Roaches to a 3-2 victory over Steele, and in the second contest it was Godwin again as the Roaches turned in a 9-8 win over Mangum. In tomorrow's play, Steele will face Mangum, and the winner will play the Roaches Wednesday afternoon for the dormitory softball championship.

Yesterday's results:

Carolina Trackmen Head For Virginia

The undefeated Tar Heel track squad, fresh from its triumph in the Southern conference championships, leaves today for Charlottesville, Va., for a dual meet with Virginia tomorrow afternoon.

A win against the Cavaliers will give the Carolina crew an undefeated season in dual competition. The meet tomorrow afternoon will wind up cinder activity except for the handful of men that will participate in IC4A competition and the NCAA event.

The Virginia outfit will stand as a formidable opponent for the men of Fetzer and Ranson. They are particularly strong in the sprints and the hurdles and have an outstanding distance man in the person of Art Traechsel. The Carolinians will go into tomorrow's fracas minus the services of Ted Shultz, ace sprinter, Dick Hollander and Ted Haigler.

Virginia has run up a fine record, and the only blemish on their slate is a loss to the Duke Blue Devils. Two weeks ago the Cavaliers captured the Virginia Big Six meet by doubling the score of their nearest rival, VPI.

A victory in the meet will give the Tar Heels a perfect year in both track and cross country and they will be the only undefeated teams to represent the University in 1947-47.

Home Run With One On Ices Fray For Deacons In Fourth

Hussey Drives In Lone Carolina Marker; State Wolfpack To Play Here Wednesday

By Irwin Smallwood

Lefty Moe Bauer and his Wake Forest teammates concluded their 1947 baseball season with outstanding effectiveness here yesterday afternoon. The ace Deacon portsider limited the waning Tar Heels to three base hits and his masterful hurling combined with errorless fielding netted the visitors a 5-1 triumph over Carolina to even the season series at two games apiece.

Righthander Frank Robinson started on the mound for Carolina, but after yielding eight hits and all five runs in five and two-thirds innings, he was replaced by Vinnie DiLorenzo, the ace of the Tar Heel staff. DiLorenzo in turn gave up two hits in the remaining innings and Robinson was credited with the loss, his second of the season as against one victory.

Wake Forest broke the scoring barrier in the top of the fourth canto after two men were out on infield plays. Shortstop Art Hoch singled past second base, and the next man up—Gene Hooks—belted the ball deep into centerfield for a home run to give the Deacs a 2-0 advantage. The visitors added a third tally in the fifth when Charlie Teague, the Deacon second sacker, stole home when Bo Hackney dropped the ball on an attempted half of a double steal. In the sixth Hoch reached first when he was nipped by a pitched ball, Hooks singled, and both men rode home on Russ Bachelor's one-base blow, ending the Wake Forest scoring for the afternoon.

Carolina's lone score came in the bottom of the sixth when Jack Hussey, Tar Heel right fielder, singled home Kenny Black from second after the latter had drawn a base on balls. Hussey, incidentally, was the only man to solve the twirling of Bauer to any extent, gaining two of the Tar Heels' three safeties. Rip Ryan, who handled five chances without a bobble at short, garnered the other hit, a single through short in the fifth.

The Tar Heels put two men on base in both the fourth and eighth frames, both times on a pair of walks, but they could never get a runner even as far as third.

State's Wolfpack, currently deadlocked with Duke for the Big Four leadership, will come to Chapel Hill Wednesday for the second game of the season with the Tar Heels. Either DiLorenzo or Monk Whiteheart will pitch for Carolina against the visiting State nine, and the Tar Heels need two wins in their remaining three games with State in order to keep out of the cellar in the final league standings. They are at present tied with Wake Forest in percentage points for the last-place berth.

Evans Appointed Chairman

Extensive Clothing Drive Will Continue to Thursday

An extensive clothing drive is being conducted on campus and will continue until Thursday under the auspices of the student division of the local collection group for the Church World service. The student collection division is being handled by the Council for Religion in Life. Ruth Evans, president of the YWCA, has been appointed student chairman of the drive.

Will Solicit

Representatives from the Interdormitory and Interfraternity councils will solicit clothing in all dormitories and fraternities. The group began work yesterday and will gather clothes until Thursday, at which time the overall collection will be made.

Purpose of the drive is to collect old and discarded clothes now for the purpose of sending to European countries in time for the cold winter weather. Clothing collected here will be sent to those countries which remained neutral during the war. All kinds of discarded clothes and shoes will be accepted, but particular emphasis is being placed on woolen goods and footwear. A similar collection in the town of Chapel Hill last weekend netted over two tons of clothing.

Central Depots

Clothing collected this week will be placed in central depots throughout the campus. On Thursday afternoon, 100 students and 25 automobiles representing 25 different student organizations will leave the Y court at 2 o'clock to collect all of the clothes at the various depots.

Chairman Evans announced that the nationally urgent need for warm clothing in Europe before another cold winter sets in makes it urgent that all students give whatever clothes they can afford to discard at the present time. She emphasized that the clothing will go to neutral countries.

UVA Will Play Host To ADPis, Tri Delts

The UVA will hold open house tonight for the Tri-Delt and Alpha Delta Pi sororities in the UVA club house at 8:30.

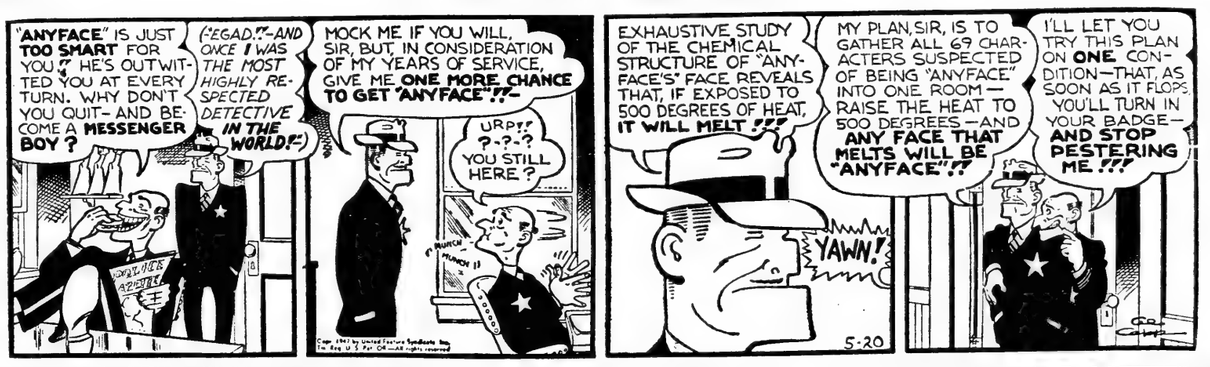
Free Chesterfields will be given away as a courtesy of the Chesterfield company.

All members of the Escort committee are asked to be at the club house by 8:15.

Tryouts Called Today For Cheering Squad

Myrt Sherard, newly-elected head cheerleader, announced yesterday afternoon that cheerleading squad tryouts will continue today through Thursday afternoons at 5 o'clock at the Bell Tower. All interested persons are urged to be present.

Campus Party to Meet For Elections Today



The Campus party will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Candlelight room of Graham Memorial. Members are urged to be present and visitors are welcome. Officers for the coming year will be elected.

ZIONISTS TO MEET

The Carolina chapter of the Intercollegiate Zionist Federation of America will hold a short business meeting tonight at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

Election of officers for the coming year and a report on the recent Zionist convention in Charlotte will be the features of the meeting.

Jackson Scholarship Carrying $2000 Value Goes to Robert Payne

Robert Benjamin Payne, top ranking student in a class of 186 in the Gastonia High school, was awarded the Herbert Worth Jackson scholarship Saturday for the ensuing year.

Payne was selected from among 21 North Carolina boys chosen from a list of 55 applicants to come to the University for interviews Saturday.

Valued at $500 a year for a period of four years, the Jackson scholarship is awarded to a North Carolina boy on the basis of scholastic achievement, qualities of leadership, and promise of future distinction.

The original Jackson scholarship was endowed in 1938 by the late Mrs. Annie E. Jackson of Richmond, Va., as a memorial to her husband, a University graduate, class of 1886, and for 27 years president of the Virginia Trust company. He died in 1936.

The committee on selection was composed of Dr. Cecil Johnson of the general college; Acting Dean D. D. Carroll, chairman of the University scholarship commitee; Earl Johnson, Raleigh, representing the Jackson family; and Ed Huggins, Greensboro, representing alumni.

Elementary Students Show Artistic Works In Gallery at Person

Elementary pupils in 49 North Carolina schools submitted a total of 361 different art works to the 10th annual North Carolina Art exhibit for elementary grades which will continue on view in the Person Hall gallery at the University here through Sunday, May 25.

There are 259 paintings, 61 construction projects and 41 textile designs included in the exhibit, which received high praise from Miss Belle Boas, director of education, Baltimore Museum of Art, who served as judge of this year's exhibit.

Next fall the exhibit will be circulated among public schools throughout the state to acquaint both teachers and pupils with the work being done in other schools.

Miss Boas said of the exhibit: "I am amazed at the over-all excellence of the entries. There is in the work a rich sense of color and great variety of subject matter. I would like to meet the teachers and tell them what good jobs they are doing. I wish other states could see the fine work being done in North Carolina schools."

Graham, House Release List Of Appointments, Absences

Several new appointments, leaves of absence and resignations in the University faculty were announced here today by President Frank P. Graham and Chancellor R. B. House. The changes were recently made effective by vote of the Executive board of the University trustees.

Miss Ruth Gilpin, former member of the Salem college faculty and director of the children's unit of the Family and Child Service agency, Winston-Salem, has been appointed acting associate professor in the Division of Public Welfare and Social Work for the coming colege year.

Case Worker

Miss Gilpin received her A.B. degree from Wilson college, her M.A. at the University of Pittsburgh and her M.S.W. at the University of Pennsylvania. She had experience as case worker and supervisor in Baltimore and Philadelphia before coming to North Carolina.

Also appointed for the coming college year as lecturer in economics is George M. Woodward, who is studying for his doctorate here now. A graduate of Vanderbilt university where he also took his M.A. degree, Mr. Woodward has, during the past year, been an economist with the War Assets administration. From 1942 to 1946 he was a District Price executive of the OPA and before that he was a business analyst for the Spur Distributing Bottling company and, from 1938 to 1942, a professor of business administration at Tennessee Polytechnic institute.

Hans Rothe, playwright, director and former associate of Max Reinhardt, the famous German dramatist, was appointed visiting lecturer in the Department of Dramatic Art for the spring quarter.

Dr. M. L. Jacobs, acting dean of the School of Pharmacy since the death of Dean J. Grover Beard last spring, has been appointed dean for the next five-year period, begining September 1.

Prof. William Madow who had been appointed to the faculty of the Department of Mathematical Statistics for 1947-48 has been granted a leave from that appointment until January 1948 to permit him to complete work he is now doing for the Brazilian government.

T. Ross Fink, instructor in the Education department, who has been on leave in military service, was granted an extension of that leave in order to complete work for his doctor's degree.

NEWS BRIEFS

Verdict Brings SC Lynch Trial To Close Today

Death May Be Penalty For White Defendants

[illegible] May 2.—(UP)—The South Carolina lynch trial is ready for the jury. State and defense lawyers completed their closing arguments today, and Judge Robert Martin is expected to give his instructions in the morning. Then the jury of white mill hands and farmers will retire to consider the case against the 28 men still on trial for their part in the lynching of a negro suspected of attacking a white man with a knife.

Death Demanded

Of the defendants 21 are charged with murder and face a possible death sentence. The prosecution has demanded the maximum conviction although defense council denied that the state had proven any of the men guilty.

Germans Told to Work Without Any Grumbling

Berlin, May 2—(UP)—The American and British military governors of Germany have told the Germans to stop grumbling and get to work if they want more to eat and better living conditions. General Lucius Clay and Marshal Sir Sholto Douglas, in a joint statement, reminded the people that Germany's war of aggression was the direct cause of their present hunger.

House Approves Funds For Next Year's Navy

The House, May 2—(UP)—The House has passed and sent to the Senate the 1948 Navy department appropriations bill. Approval came after the House affirmed a 10 per cent cut in navy funds recommended by the House appropriations committee.

Republicans Propose End to Sugar Ration

The Senate, May 2—(UP)—[illegible] to end sugar rationing immediately has been introduced by Republican Senators McCarthy of Wisconsin and Bricker of Ohio. McCarthy seems confident congress will pass the measure.

Western Electric Sees Last of Phone Strike

Washington, May 2—(UP)—The last phase of the nationwide phone strike ended today. The Western Electric company announced an agreement for an 11 and a half cent an hour pay raise which will be submitted to the rank and file of the association of communications equipment workers for ratification.

Lewis, Soft Coal Men Continue Negotiations

Washington, May 2—(UP)—[illegible] John L. Lewis and representatives of the soft coal industry today continued negotiations on the miners' contract demands today. Lewis refused his hands, shrugged his shoulders and said, "No speak English."

Army Changes Practice About Blue Discharges

Washington, May 2—(UP)—The Army has announced a new policy about its controversial so-called 'blue discharge' practice. Beginning July 1st, Army will substitute a system of releasing personnel either honorably, unsuitable, or undesirable. There was much criticism of the old procedure under which the Army department did not specify whether a man given a blue discharge had a good or bad record. The new rules will conform with those already in effect for the Navy, Marines and Coast Guard.

Plan Permits Initial Phase Of Processing

Students May Avoid Sweating Out Lines

By Ed Joyner

Beginning this morning and continuing through Saturday noon of this week, students now enrolled in the University who do not plan to attend either session of summer school may preregister for the fall quarter, Central Records Director Edwin S. Lanier said yesterday.

Students attending summer school will have an opportunity to preregister for the fall at the end of the second session or at the end of the first term if they do not plan to return for the second.

This marks the first time in the 157 year history of the University that preregistration has been made in the spring for the following fall.

Enrollment procedure will be the same that used last quarter. Students will fill out class schedule forms with the aid of their advisor or dean, then turn them in at the lobby of Memorial hall.

Advantage

Advantage to the system is that preregistered students will not have to sweat registration lines next September. Preregistration receipts received at Memorial hall in exchange for class schedule forms will be an open sesame to the east door of Woollen gymnasium September 23 and 24 while new students are queuing up [illegible] enrollment session.

Inside Woollen gym the receipts will be swapped quickly and painlessly for class tickets and registration will be complete.

In addition to this innovation students will also notice a new feature in the class schedule sheets now available in South building. Instead of the usual one-quarter schedule, the forms are made out to show courses available for all three quarters of next year.

Registration Committee

Speaking for the registration committee, Lanier said that the new form was designed to help students more intelligently make tentative plans for the entire year so as to [illegible]

Louise Emery, Pianist, Will Be Heard Tonight

Miss Mary Louise Emery, pianist, will be the featured soloist with the University Symphony orchestra when it presents its third and final concert of the quarter this evening at 8:30 in Hill hall.

Miss Emery, a graduate of Oberlin conservatory, has been a graduate assistant in the Music department for two years.

The orchestra, under the direction of Professor Earl Slocum, will play the "D Minor Symphony" by Franck; Stokowski's symphony transcription of "Komm, Susser Tod" by Bach; and "Concerto No. 442" for piano and orchestra, with Miss Emery as soloist.

Admission to the concert will be free.

Poteat to Give Talk At YM Vesper Service

William H. Poteat will make the feature address on "Faith! So What?" at the YMCA's evening vesper service at 6:30 today in the Arboretum. Preceding the talk by Poteat a special choir under the direction of Gen. Stryker will sing several hymns and choral responses.

New Yacks on Way

Annual Editor Issues Call For New Business Manager

All former members of the Yackety-Yack staff and all students interested in working on the 1948 staff are asked to meet with Bill Moffitt in the Yack office tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Also any students interested in the position of business manager for the 1948 Yackety Yack must write a letter to Bill Moffitt, editor of the 1948 Yackety Yack, stating his qualifications and experience. The [illegible] must be a person thoroughly [illegible] with [illegible] management, commercial advertising and high finance.

Gene Johnstone, editor of the 1947 Yackety-Yack has announced that the first shipment of 200 yearbooks will arrive May 27. A new system for distributing these yearbooks is being worked out. Students are asked not to come to the Yack office to get their yearbooks. Watch the Tar Heel for further information on when and where you can get your 1947 Yackety-Yack.

'Most Qualified Man'

Eller Picks Clampitt Head Of Orientation Committee

By Bill Sexton

Appointment of Johnny Clampitt as head of the Orientation committee and tentative nomination of seven committee members was announced yesterday by President-elect Tom Eller in his first executive appointments under the [illegible] constitution.

"I believe Clampitt is the most qualified man on campus for this particular task," Eller said when he announced the appointment. Unsuccessful candidate for presidency of the student body, Clampitt had made "stronger, more effective orientation" a major aim.

Tentative

Eller announced what he described as "tentative" appointment of seven of the nine members of the committee, which is responsible for indoctrination of freshmen and campus officers.

The seven are Jesse Deamon, Harry Snowden, Marriote Stewart, Fran Golden, Mimi Massey, Walt Arnold, and Emile Saleeby.

As special advisors to the committee Eller named Charles Berman, Blanton Miller, and George Kenyon.

Much Latitude

The new president said he had given "as much latitude as possible" to Clampitt in selection of the committee he is to head.

"I believe this committee has all the capabilities for carrying out the active, agressive orientation policy the campus deserves," Eller declared.

His appointments are subject to approval by the Student legislature.

Eller announced last night he had scheduled for today a conference with J. S. Bennett, supervisor of utilities, to discuss improvements in the lower quadrangle and quonset hut area.

University Party Will Meet Today

The University party steering committee will meet this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial.

Alex Davis, party chairman, asked that all representatives be present to elect officers for the coming year, among other items of business.

Senator Wayne Morse Says Nation Must Pay for Peace

Republican Notes Alternative As Start Of Decline for Country in CPU Address

By Earl Heffner

"America either must accept the price of peace or history will record the year of 1947 as the beginning of the decline of the United States," Senator Wayne Morse, Republican from Oregon, last night warned a University audience.

Speaking at 8:30 o'clock in Memorial hall, the Northwestern solon alternately flayed the American people and the 80th Congress for the isolationist trend developing today.

"If we follow our present economic course—rapidly becoming a trend of economic isolationism—time will pass us by. We are living in an age that is as distinct from that period preceding the dropping of the first atomic bomb in the New Mexico desert as the depths of the Dark Ages differ from the heights of the industrial period.

Must Think

"Americans must think about the part which the United States is to play in international affairs. This part is to be greatly determined by the Congress during the next six years. It is for this reason that I stress the importance to our nation of the present 80th Congress."

Senator Morse delved further into the future with an assertion that the rest of the world cannot stand another American depression. The nation, he said, cannot stand a period of boom and bust when it is once more in.

Flaying the Congress further he said, the "80th Congress give every promise of adjourning by August 1 without passing on any major legislation of social significance.

"The Congress may pass over presidential veto a labor measure," he said. "But what a measure."

Condemns Pressure

Condemning the pressure of old-fashioned, selfish interest [illegible] face representative [illegible] from all sides on every question, Morse said, "It is this attitude that is the reason for the type of program the public receives today. Congress is a good reflector of public opinion."

Speaking on "This Is Your Congress," Senator Morse told the audience, "I appear before you as a Jeffersonian Republican. If I were to criticize the 80th Congress I would [illegible] Jeffersonian Republicans, but more Jeffersonian Democrats as well."

Continuing on the Jeffersonian line, Morse added, "I agree with Jefferson when he said 'I think by far the most important bill in our whole code is that for diffusion of knowledge among the people'."

Compliments Graham

During his speech, the Oregon solon complimented University President Dr. Frank Graham by saying, "If I were to pick the 25 greatest living Americans I would include Dr. Graham, those very high on that list he may be classified as a civilian general who helped win many a battle on the home industrial front which was an important factor in the successful prosecution of the war."

Senator Morse was introduced to the audience by Dr. Granam. His address was sponsored by the Carolina Political union and was presided over by Retiring Chairman Jerry Davidoff.

Following the address, a reception was held in the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity [illegible]

Pair in Segregation Test Held Guilty; Appeal Filed

The [illegible] four persons accused of participation in the Chapel Hill bus seating incident April 13 were found guilty of violating North Carolina segregation statutes by Judge Henry A. Whitfield in Chapel Hill Recorder's court today.

Bayard Rustin, Negro, was ordered to pay costs in the case. His white companion, Igal Roodenko, was sentenced to 30 days imprisonment in Orange county jail.

The two [illegible] residents of New York City, filed notices of appeal and are free under bond pending trial in Orange county Superior court in Hillsboro.

Trial of the other two defendants in the bus seating case was postponed by Judge Whitfield until June 24. They are Joseph A. Felmet and Andrew S. Johnson, Negr

Johnson had failed to appear for trial today. At request of defense attorneys trial for both himself and his companion in setting up the test cases was continued.

Roodenko had been charged with interfering with an officer in the performance of his duty, but Solicitor C. P. Hinshaw nol prossed the interfering indictment.

May Sound Like Dull Job

Genial Mrs. Harrer Runs Information Booth, Opens All Letters Addressed to University

By Walter Kise

"If Mr. Wadsworth [illegible]" "Which is Mr. Lanier office?" "Have you a Summer Schedule yet?" "Where could I find Mrs. Snedden?"

Sitting at the information desk on the first floor of South building from 9 in the morning until 5 in the afternoon, answering such questions may sound like a dull job to most people but to Mrs. G. A. Harrer, the genial friendly lady with all the answers it is the most interesting occupation on the campus.

Since 1944

"I've only had this job since the beginning of 1944," she explained, "but I've been associated with the University since 1915 when my husband came here from Princeton to act as head of the classics department. So you see I have seen the place grow up, mostly from the faculty side. I'll admit, but with this job I have been learning the business end of university work."

Besides running a question and answer stand Mrs. Harrer also has the interesting job of opening all mail addressed to the University of North Carolina. Considering that many people do not know the exact department their particular problem would come under this alone constitutes quite a task. Once the content of a letter is discovered it is then directed to the proper office.

MRS. HARRER

"Sometimes though, we get some plain quack letters and into the wastebasket they go," Mrs. Harrer said, "every once in awhile we will get a letter from Alcatraz or even an insane asylum. For example, here is a card that came in today."

Addressed to: "stewgents-faculty, univ of noth carolina chapel hill, n. c." the card read as follows: "Rockefeller (symbol in Grand manner of capitalism) builds the crypt-mausoleum of western civilization in N. Y. for the commissar; the soap box yogi (space-time continunity) shall erect the incubator of Springtime (orioxidental) civilization here in Pariske, technospohically. Einstein Spengler Bergson Buddha Dirac, unlimited. Co. S. F. Chamber of Commerce." (Sic.)

As if cards like that aren't enough to keep her busy, or perhaps entertained, Mrs. Harrer sometimes thinks of herself as an advisor for the entire student body. "I get all sorts of questions every day but especially during registration times. New students, unaccustomed to our lines, often come to me and say, 'Well, here I am, what do I do first?'"

Hardly had Mrs. Harrer finished when a gentleman approached and asked the $64 question. "Have you any sort of pamphlet relative to the University?" "You see," he explained, "my son is five years old and I want to select his school now so that he will be sure to get in."

GRADUATION INVITATIONS

Senior invitations have arrived on campus and are now available at the Y. Dotson Palmer announced yesterday.

Major Victory

The newspaper has scored a major victory in its fight to gain complete freedom. The Supreme Court has approved the right of the press to criticize the judiciary just as long as it does not obstruct justice. The case in question that was decided by the Court attracted much national attention following a contempt of court case filed against Corpus Christi newsmen for writing editorial and news matter against a judge's decision.

This decision is not just a far-away thing that does not come within our realm. It is applicable to Chapel Hill and the Daily Tar Heel. Although we have not been threatened with a contempt of court case we have received much criticism and comment on several occasions.

We refer particularly to the case brought in the local courts by Martin A. Watkins against three cab drivers on an assault charge. The judge stated that the DTH had made too much ado about nothing. And when this publication made a reply to the statement in its editorial columns much controversy was raised and it was stated by many individuals (not the court of the judge) that charges could have been brought against the Daily Tar Heel for contempt of court.

The new ruling by the highest court of the land puts a new slant on newspaper etiquette and the press will have a free hand in criticising the judiciary in so long as it does not stand in the way of justice.

Devoted Servant

The University has been recognized throughout its many years for its devoted faculty members, and the work of Dr. Archibald Henderson has greatly helped build up this reputation. It will be extremely difficult for a man that has been so active in the life of the University to settle down from his daily grind as head of the Mathematics department to ration out his time between the various fields that he has shown much interest in during his lifetime.

In fact it would be hard to list all the activities in which Dr. Henderson has been interested. Probably one of his main enjoyments and talents has been in the field of writing, but as head of the Mathematics department he has not had all of the time he would like to have devoted to his manuscripts. After this term he will be able to realize his dream, and try his hand at another field.

Dr. Henderson will be greatly missed as a faculty member of the University since he has devoted 49 years to its development, but the Mathematics department's loss will be a gain to the field of Journalism.

Assorted Bits

At this time of year most of us usually find that we have in our possession various and assorted bits of old clothing which we can do without very easily. Particularly when the time comes for students to start packing for the summer vacation is the desire to get rid of old clothes strongest.

Taking advantage of this situation to obtain discarded clothes for use this winter by suffering Europeans, the CRIL, an alert and progressive campus group, has stepped forward to organize a campus collection of discarded clothes in conjunction with a national drive for the same purpose.

The collection started Monday and will continue through Thursday with representatives from all dormitories and fraternities canvassing each dormitory and fraternity. When the canvasser in your dorm approaches you, think for a moment of the many innocent sufferers in Europe who will not live through another severe winter unless they receive warm clothing. Take stock of your old clothing and make whatever contribution you can.

Many veterans on campus are somewhat skeptical of giving clothes for use in Europe, but the CRIL has been given the right to denote the countries in which the clothing it collects may be used. And the chairman of the drive has assured us that all clothing collected on this campus will be shipped to neutral countries.

In Order to Keep Gridiron Greatness

Students to Receive Same Stadium Seats this Season

BY CHARLIE CRAWLEY

We will gather, brethren, behind the goal line.

That's the sad truth behind the increasing tide of professionalism being intermingled with football at Carolina. Having chosen this course, the immediate year should go a long way toward settling the question of whether college spirit and big business mix.

Athletic Association officials, who ducked behind a barrage of student protests toward the reserved seating arrangements last fall, have seen fit to continue in large part the seating distribution plan adhered to last season.

No student will sit on the fifty-yard line during the grid season of 1947. Students need not contemplate perching themselves along the mid-field strip so long as North Carolina holds its position among the reigning powers on the gridiron.

It is conspicuously evident that football at Carolina bears the monetary burden of practically the entire athletic program. Most of the money is derived from the Educational Foundation and alumni, where ticket preference must first and always be shown if the present calibre of football is to remain.

The question rises whether or not the shunting of students to various parts of the stadia to make room for those who bear the financial brunt is to be considered first of all. But the trend nowdays is for alumni everywhere to determine a school's prestige by its football while the college aspect dwindles.

According to a fact-finding committee of the student legislature, headed by Charlie Long, the magical communication system between the student body and its football team will prevail comes September 27. It is understood that the seating distribution will comply with the following plan:

1. Cement sections 17, 16, 15, 14, 13 and 270 seats in section 18 have been allocated to students. The remainder of section 18 is reserved for the faculty.

2. Back bleachers will be installed behind sections 18, 17, 16, 15 and 14 with a per section capacity of 540 seats.

Capacity of cement stands (5)	5,400
capacity of bleachers (4)	2,160
Extra in section 18	270
Total	7,830

Granting the opinion of Athletic Director Robert A. Fetzer that his ticket scramble last year couldn't be unscrambled beyond the partial remedy of temporary stands, it stands to reason also that so long as football is representative of the University in lieu of the student body, existing conditions will prevail.

Director of Admissions Roy Armstrong estimates that the student enrollment next fall will hinge around 7,300. The 7,830 seats set aside for students seems adequate enough, however, it still leaves us in putting distance of the goal posts.

It is to be noted that all three campus political parties included in their spring elections platforms points aimed toward better student seating at football games next fall.

Campus politicos who wailed in unison for "improved seating arrangements at football games" have one of two alternatives to choose from: Will college football at Carolina remain purely a business matter, or should the pigskin be converted into a vital, living sport?

Quieter Soals

Dear Editor:

In the editorial "Center of Culture," (DTH, May 20) granted that the Tintop situation is serious enough, but why not stay right in the center of the "Center of Culture" to find your reason for deploring undesirable conditions? In your Olympian retreat you're so close, apparently, to the campus and its immediate fringes that all you can see is Tintop or Windy Hill. Come in closer, editor, say around the area of the northwest corner of the campus. In this area this academic year has been punctuated on week ends that begin Friday noon and end Sunday ayem with inexcusable racket and disorderly conduct. This past weekend was the pay-off. Men walking about with drinks in their hands; obscene language, drunk [illegible] of doors until dawn, ungentlemanly behavior, loud talk, throwing and breaking of bottles, insistent sounding of automobile horns, wreckless driving on the campus. Maybe there is no murder committed in this section, but it soun like murder. This year we quieter souls in this area have had, among other diversions, fireworks at our doorstep and heaven-rending reactions en masse to the witticisms (sic) of a grave-yard-shift radio announcer in a nearby city.

The war's over boys! I've got a lot of academic catching up to do—and I like to sleep occasionally, too. How about some restraint?

In view of the above, which I daresay isn't restricted to our corner of the campus, how can any student, Editor, take any kind of attitude toward deplorable conditions in [illegible] orges of the "Athens of America?"

Credit Due

Dear Editor:

Recently we were glancing over the 1946 edition of The American Mathematical Society Yearbook. We came across the following information concerning a former professor of ours at this University, Dr. A. T. Brauer.

Every four years the American Mathematical society awards the Cole Prize in the theory of numbers for the best research paper published in the preceding four years. The prize for the past four years was awarded to H. B. Mann, associate professor at Ohio State university. Dr. Mann gives considerable credit to Dr. Brauer, a former professor at NYU in 1941, for the basic concepts contained in his paper.

Upon further inquiry, we obtained the following information: In 1941, Mann was a post graduate student at NYU. At that time, Dr. Brauer was lecturer on Modern Additive Theory of Numbers at the aforementioned school. The aim of this class was to interest the students in a certain unsolved problem in the density of sums of sets of positive intergers—a field in which Dr. Brauer has published several papers.

At the end of the term, the aim of that class was obtained. Under Dr. Brauer's direction, Dr. Mann was able to solve the problem and his results won for him the Cole Prize.

We at Carolina are most fortunate in having Dr. Brauer—a man well versed in higher mathematics as a member of the teaching staff in our mathematics department.

Class Meeting

Dear Editor:

Senior Class President Dotson Palmer has called together a group to organize the Class of 1947. This group of seniors includes 24 representatives of fraternities and sororities, 11 representatives of dormitories, and no representatives of town students. If this were equal representation we might conclude that two-thirds of the senior class live in fraternities, one-third in dormitories, and negligibly few live in town.

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Question

Do you believe the editors of the campus publications should be elected by the students, or appointed by a competent board composed of faculty and students?

Answers:

I wholeheartedly agree with the system now in effect—the election of the editors of the campus publications. I do not, in all sincerity, believe that any board of any size can as fully comprehend the desires of the student as well as the students themselves.—James Shumaker, Durham.

I think they should be elected by the students. The publications are for the benefit of the students and the students should be the judges of who is to edit their work.—John Westbrook, Birmingham, Ala.

They should be elected because it is more democratic, and allows everyone to participate in choosing editors.—F. T. Mackernan, Boston, Mass.

In view of the large student body I believe the person best suited for editor should be selected by a board of faculty and students. Such a board could spend more time in considering the abilities of the candidates and would be in a better position to do this than the average student voter.—Bill Pope, Mt. Mourne.

I think they should be elected by the students. The students know what they want and who can best give it to them.—Bill Moore, Greensboro.

With the assumption that these are student activities and that the publications are for the expression of the student, I certainly believe the student body should elect the editors.—Bill Koch, Chapel Hill.

PHI BETA INITIATION

The Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity will hold initiation this afternoon at 5:30 in Gerrard hall. A banquet will be held in Carolina inn following the initiation.

Want a Mudball?—Be an Editor

Faults in Publications Seen To Lie Mainly with Students

By William Lane

(Ed. Note: This article was written at the request of the editor. Mr. Lane, NOT a member of any publications staff, has written solely his own impression.)

To most impartial observers it is evident that there has not been, this year the close rapport between Carolina publications and the student body that is necessary to the useful functioning of the Mag and the DTH. It is also evident that the main fault for this lies with the students. The regrettable rule at present so prevalent throughout the campus is especially apparent as regards publications: being elected to a position of any importance is synonymous with receiving a generous scoop of mud right square in the eyeball.

The DTH, being the only daily organ of campus news, comes off slightly easier than the Mag. The average eight o'clock scholar, (if there is such a thing) may vent his pre-coffee spleen upon the Tar Heel, but he reads it all the same. However, it must be admitted that his reading is pretty well confined to the Sports Page, the Crossword Puzzle, and L'il Abner.

Editorial policy is vehemently criticized by many, though most of these seem to have some difficulty in describing just what that policy is. DTH columnists fall into two general categories of opinion: Communists and fools — neither of whom are read. However, most students seem to be willing to put up with these supposed editorial vagaries, if only for the sake of Li'l Abner.

The Mag comes in for a much rougher time. With a certain amount of justice, it has come to be considered by many as existing solely as an organ through which budding surrealists may see their works in print. The amazing frequency with which its name has come to be linked with that of Danziger's has given it a reputation which it will not soon live down. It is not the purpose of this article to examine the literary merit of the material presented in the Mag this year, especially in the first issues, but it does seem a safe assumption to say that the average student is not particularly interetsed in the esoteric writhings of undergraduate souls, no matter what literary merit those writings possess.

It is simply not fashionable for the red-blooded young American college student to understand these things. The point is that a stigma has become attached to the Mag from which even such excellently balanced issues as the last one are not likely to be able to save it.

One student, when asked what he thought the Mag should be, gave a very good description of the last issue. It was not necessary to ask if he had read it. The recent decision of the Legislature gives evidence of the willingness of the student body to bear the expense of another magazine which it thinks may serve its needs more adequately.

This article is full of generalities, some of which may be specious. But it is undeniable that an absurdly disproportionate amount of student criticism is being brought to bear upon the DTH and the Mag and that much of that criticism is patently unfair. Regardless of any considerations of right or wrong, it is imperative that publications and student body be brought closer together and that the notion that they exist in mutually unintelligible spheres be corrected. How this is to be done is the problem of the publications themselves. It is to be hoped that the new editorial staffs will make some adequate solution and make it soon.

Roaches, Steele Clash to Decide Dorm Crown Today

By Gil McLeod

Phi Kappa Sigma's unbeaten intramural nine captured the fraternity softball championship yesterday afternoon by downing a fighting Delta Sig combination, 3-1. The Phi Kaps will meet the winner of today's dorm finals tomorrow afternoon for the campus softball crown.

The Roaches will face Steele, winner over Mangum yesterday, this afternoon at 4 o'clock to decide the dorm championship. The contest will be played on diamond 10 of the Navy field.

In winning the fraternity softball crown, the Phi Kaps had to overcome a lead held by the Delta Sigs during the first five innings of their contest. The Delta Sigs went ahead, 1-0 in the first frame when they collected two of their three hits of the afternoon. The Phi Kaps, who gathered only four hits themselves, got two of them in the fifth inning to knock in three runs, which turned out to be enough to give them the fraternity crown.

The winning pitcher, who will handle the tossing duties for the Phi Kaps in tomorrow's finals, was Tony Jones. Bob Callahan turned in an impressive four-hit pitching job for the Delta Sigs, even in losing.

Leonar Littlejohn was the leading slugger for the Phi Kaps in banging out two of their four safeties. Bubba Austin and Dick Atkinson followed with one each. For the Delta Sigs it was Callahan, Collins, and Culbertson with one hit each.

Another intramural sports, horseshoes, will get into the semi-finals this afternoon at 4 o'clock when Beta No. 2 meets Chi Psi, and Delta Sig No. 2 faces Psi Delt No. 2. The winners of these matches will play tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock to decide the fraternity championship.

Taylor Fires Record 67 As Golfers Crush State

Tar Heel Links Crew Completes Campaign With Eight Victories in Nine Encounters

Raleigh, May 20—Led by the sizzling, five-under-par shooting of Ray Taylor, Carolina Southern conference golf champions closed their 1947 campaign here this afternoon by drubbing N. C. State 23½-3½ over the Raleigh Country Club fairways.

The second 67 round turned in by a Tar Heel during the season, Taylor's was all the more sensational coming on an unfamiliar course.

Taylor's card:
Par out	534	545	435—38
Taylor out	433	434	544—37
Par in	435	345	435—36
Taylor	445	344	32—31

Taylor, who was ... under par on the last four holes, on which he shot three birdies and an eagle.

Dick Doeschler and Harvey Ward, playing at the number one and three positions respectively, both fired par 72 rounds during the afternoon. But where Ward's performance was enough to defeat Bob Turnbull, 2-1, Doeschler's score only brought him within one of State's top linksman, Wes Dixon, who turned in the afternoon's second best round of 71 to eke out a 2-1 win over the Southern conference co-medalist.

Playing in the number two spot, Junie Bailey fired a 75 to nip State's Al Bearstyn, who had a 76. Mike Nolan, at number five, registered a 78 to top Sonny Hamm, and Ed Ashby rounded out the Carolina scoring with a 77 that gave him a triumph over Bill Furr.

The victory was the eighth of the season for the Tar Heels and gave them a final record of 8-1.

The summaries:

Dixon (S) defeated Doeschler, 2-1; Bailey (NC) defeated Bearstyn, 2½-½; Best ball to NC, 3-0; Ward (NC) defeated Turnbull, 2-1; Taylor (NC) defeated Gibson, 3-0; Best ball to NC; ...ol Nolan (NC) defeated Hamm, 3-0; Ashby (NC) defeated Furr, 3-0; Best ball to NC, 3-0.

Len Szafaryn Named Monogram President

Len Szafaryn, retiring vice-president and a starting tackle on the Carolina football team, was elected president of the Monogram club last night in the regular meeting of the lettermen this quarter.

At the same time, Jesse Greenbaum, co-captain of the swimming team, was named vice-president. Morty Schaap, Daily Tar Heel sports writer, was chosen secretray-treasurer, and John Dillon, 1946 All-American basketball player, was made Monogram club representative to the athletic council.

Voting was close in all positions, and these new officers will remain in office for a six-month term. President Jim Camp, who retires, presided over the meeting. Other retiring officers include Charlie Tietjen, secretary-treasurer, and Jimmy Miller, representative to the athletic council.

Szafaryn, who has been active in Monogram club activities for some time, was the only officer to make a repeat performance in getting elected.

Other business taken up at the meeting included a financial report by Tietjen and the selection of the recipient of the Jack Dempsey Adam Hat "most outstanding athlete" award. Announcement of the winner of the trophy will not be made immediately.

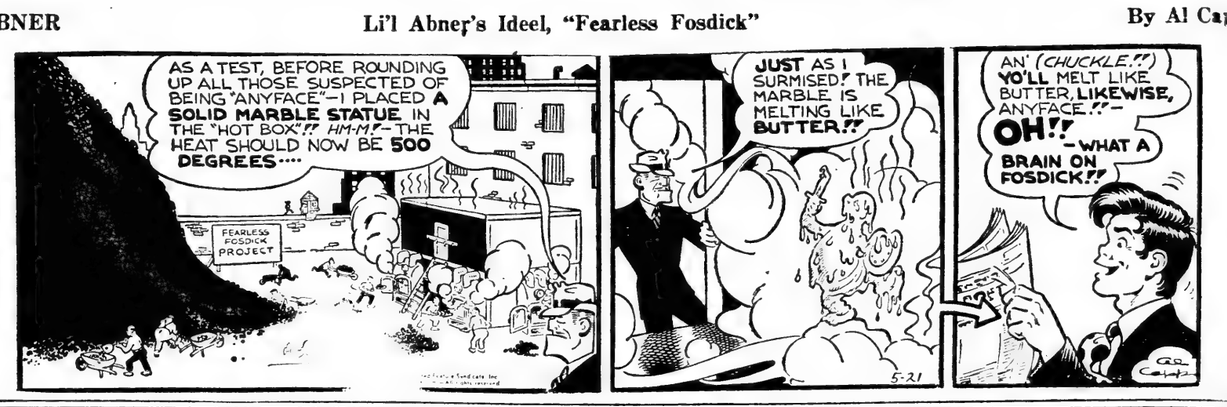
Graham Memorial Plays Host During Entertainment Week

Graham Memorial will begin a week of entertainment by playing host to the campus tonight at 8:30 when a free bingo party is held in the main lounge. On Friday night, also beginning at 8:30, the student union will offer a dance in the "Y" court with informal dress stressed



Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock the most recent portraits and charcoals of Betty Warren Jones will be on exhibition with a reception lasting until 5 o'clock, at which time a band concert will be presented on the lawn in front of the student union.

The bingo party will feature a prize for every winner, smokes and refreshments for everyone and a cake drawing for the holder of the lucky number.

The prizes, now on display in the main lounge of Graham Memorial, include a Zippo lighter, a compact, a record album, cards, stationery, glass sets, a stapler, towels, handerchiefs, a cake and many more valuable items.

Play will begin at 8:30 and last until the more than 40 gifts are won by players.

1946 Yacks Available For Last Time Today

Copies of the 1946 Yackety-Yack will be available for the last time today to students who were in school last year but did not receive their edition of the publication. Jean Huske, business manager of the Yack, announced that the books may be picked up in the Candlelight room of Graham Memorial between four and six o'clock today.

For students who were not in school during the full year a charge of $1.50 will be made for each quarter missed to cover the publication fee for that period.

Hay-Ride, Barn Party To Be Sponsored by Y

A hay-ride and barn party will be sponsored by the YMCA next Friday, Booby Overcash, chairman of the Y's Recreation committee, announced yesterday.

Scheduled to begin from Y court at 4 Friday afternoon, activities will include a weiner roast and an evening's informal dancing. Only couples are invited to participate.

Free tickets for the event will be available to couples at the YMCA during the coming week, Overcash said.

Federalists Will Hold War Prevention Panel

The student chapter of United World Federalists will meet tomorrow evening in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

President Dave Andrews will lead a group discussion on "What Can I Do to Prevent War?" Officers for the summer quarter will be elected and students who plan to attend summer school are particularly urged to be present at the meeting.

CICA to Meet Today To Form Party Plans

The Carolina Independent Coed association will hold its final meeting of the quarter this evening at 7 o'clock in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

At the session plans will be formulated for a hot dog roast to be held at Sparrows pool on Saturday.

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB

Fern Hughes, assistant business manager of the Women's Glee club requested yesterday that all members of the Glee club bring in their money and unsold tickets to the Glee club box in the office of Hill hall immediately.

REGISTRATION

avoid conflict in getting the subjects they need.

The registration committee hopes that in late September of next year the forms can be used in preregistering all students for both the winter and spring quarters at the same time. Ultimate goal of the committee is to have a system which will register students for the entire year in September of 1948.

On the committee which has worked up the rgeistration changes are Dr. Raymond Adams of the English department, Dr. William Wells, Dean of Arts and Sciences, Dr. John W. Lasley of the Mathematics department, Dr. Edwin C. Markham of the Chemistry department, Dr. Earl H. Pegg, History and Social Sciences, Dr. A. G. Engstrom, Romance Language, Richard E. Jamerson, physical education, M. A. Hill, General College, and Dr. Hedgepeth, health service.

This committee was appointed in January 1946 and in March of that year first revisions were made in the old registration system, which was breaking down under the load of a heavily increasing enrollment. Since that time the old system has been completely revamped and the committee is still seeking further improvements.

When you graduate, you will have one of the finest opportunities to learn to fly ever offered young men in peacetime.

The Army Air Forces' Aviation Cadet Training Program gives you that chance. It cannot be duplicated anywhere at any price. Leader in new things for aviation – in jet and rocket propulsion, far-ranging heavy aircraft, improved navigation facilities, and many other of the latest developments in a fast-moving field – the AAF can help you begin a brilliant future.

The Air Forces have reopened Aviation Cadet training to qualified civilians 18 to 26½ years of age. Men selected for training as pilots under the terms of the program must be single and have had at least two years of college education, or the equivalent, in an accredited institution. Upon successful completion of the course, graduates will be commissioned Second Lieutenants, Army of the United States, and assigned to flying duty with the Army Air Forces.

Reactivation of the Aviation Cadet program is typical of the AAF's continuing effort to provide selected young men every opportunity to earn advancement. Cadets who win their wings as today's pilots will be the same kind of men who, in wartime, built and manned the world's mightiest air arm.

Make your plans now to get in at the start! By applying immediately after graduation, you can take your qualifying examinations and enter the July 1st class, or – if you want a summer vacation – you can take your examinations now and be ready to enter the class beginning October 15th. Further information is available at AAF Bases, U. S. Army Recruiting Stations, local Civil Air Patrol headquarters, or by writing to the Commanding General, Army Air Forces, Washington 25, D. C.

Reach Verdict In Lynch Trial

All 28 Defendants Found Not Guilty

Greenville, S. C., May 21—(UP)—

BULLETIN

All 28 defendants in the Greenville lynch case were acquitted by the 12-man jury.

The 12-man jury began deliberating at 3:20 this afternoon and announced it had reached verdicts five hours and 15 minutes later. But when the jurors were released from the small room in which they had been locked, Judge J. Robert Martin, Jr., was still at dinner. When he returned at 7 p. m. the 28 prisoners were returned from their cells to the courtroom, and Clerk T. E. Christenberry read the individual verdicts.

This morning Judge Martin, in his charge to the jury, repeatedly emphasized that neither racial prejudice nor the possible guilt of the lynched Negro be considered in deliberating the case. Previously he had rebuked defense attorneys when they sought to bring up the fatal stabbing of a Greenville taxi driver which touched off the lynching.

Twenty-six of the twenty-eight on trial admitted their part in the crime in statements obtained by local officers and the F.B.I.

Judge Martin directed verdicts of not guilty for three of 31 original defendants after ruling that the individual statements could not be used to implicate anyone besides the person making the statement.

AMG Bans Radio Talk On Cigarette Shipping

Berlin, May 21—(UP)—The American Military Government in Germany has ordered a ban on all radio messages mentioning cigaret shipments. The order has gone out to all commercial radio companies. It is a follow-through punch at the black market in cigarets. The first move came when the War Department stopped private importation of cigarets in the American zone.

Foreign Relief Bill Passes Both Houses

Washington, May 21—(UP)—Congress has completed action on the emergency $350 million general foreign relief bill. The Senate passed the bill soon after the House reversed itself by restoring the $150 million it had cut from the program.

President's Mother Shows Improvement

Grandview, Missouri, May 21—(UP)—The White House physician, Brigadier General Wallace Graham, reports a general improvement in the condition of the president's mother, Mrs. Martha Ellen Truman. Graham says its too early to tell whether the trend will continue, but he "believes she has a chance to recover."

Agricultural Budget Receives Major Slash

Washington, May 21—(UP)—A big 37 per cent cut in the Agriculture Department's 1948 budget has been approved by a House appropriations subcommittee. The group trimmed $450 million from the agriculture budget in one of the sharpest economy cuts so far. The action must be ratified by the full committee which meets Friday.

New Legislators To Take Campus Reins Following Special 'Lame Duck' Session

CP Elects Dedmond, Vogler As Chairman, Vice-Chairman

Charles Britt, George Grizzard Chosen As Secretary and Treasurer at Meeting

Jess Dedmond, sophomore from Cliffside, and Jim Vogler, Charlotte, were elected chairman and vice-chairman respectively of the Campus party at its first post-election meeting.

Other new officers elected at the meeting were Charles Britt, secretary, and George Grizzard, treasurer. Steve Millikin was re-elected business manager.

Following the election, Retiring Chairman Johnny Jones commended the party members for their untiring efforts in the past campaign, and expressed the hope that all will contribute the support necessary to carry out the party program for the ensuing year.

President Tom Eller was on hand at the meeting. He spoke to the party and pointed out that the successful CP candidates have a major task in helping to bring practical student government to the campus.

Other items of business consisted of appointments to the executive cabinet and the planning of a party for May 30. Members of the party committee include Walt Arnold, Vogler, Dusty Leonard, Millikin, and Miles Smith.

Next meeting of the party will be held in the Candlelight room Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Old Members Will Elect Delegates To National Student Organization

By Bookie Jabine

Following a special session of lame duck lawmakers who will meet at 7 o'clock in Di hall to discuss the National Students organization, the newly-elected Student Legislature tonight will formally take over the legislative reins of campus government.

New Vice-President Jack Folger will preside at the opening meeting during which 27 solons will take the oath of office.

The 7 o'clock session will be a carry-over of the debate which started last Thursday over the NSO. After voting to join the nationwide student group, the assembly came a cropper over who should go, and how the delegates should be instructed.

The legislature, however, agreed on one issue. It was expressed almost unanimously that Carolina delegates to the next session of the NSO to be held in Madison, Wisconsin, in the fall, would be instructed to oppose the inclusion of any Communist front organizations in the governing body of the NSO.

Before anything more definite could be decided the debate became involved as to how the instructions should be worded and it was moved that the whole matter be referred to a special committee, headed by Johnny Clampitt.

This group has been in session all week and will report tonight. It is expected that the report will contain the anti-Communist clause, plus a note to the fact that UNC delegates will also oppose any attempt of non-student groups to sit on the NSO executive council.

Speaker Charlie Warren also stated that the delegates would be elected at tonight's special meeting.

Chiefly Formal

The meeting of the new assembly is slated to be chiefly a formal one, with no important business scheduled to hit the floor. Warren announced, however, that he would address the new body, and Student Body President Tom Eller has indicated that he will speak.

New legislators who will sit at this evening's meeting include, from dorm men, James Kelly, Steve Milliken, Dick Owen, Gilbert Burnett, Jim Fort, Herman Baker, Pete Dobbins, Miles Smith, Jack DeVore, Cam West, and Pete Gerns.

From town men, Steve Nimocks, Charles Berman, Bill Porter, Ernest House, Jim Fox, Earl Somers, Jack McGinn, Benson McCutcheon, Vinny DiLorenzo, Ted Young, Ted Fussell, and Benbury Wood.

From dormitory women, Jo Fishel, Mary Moulton, Lynn Blanchard, Joyce Carraway, and Margaret Allred.

From town women, Jane Rogers and Joyce Peterson.

In Line with Platform

Eller-Bennett Conference Brings Improvement Plan

In line with the campus improvement plank in his campaign platform, Student Body President Tom Eller yesterday released an announcement of improvements promised for the near future by Supervisor of Operations J. S. Bennett.

The changes were agreed upon after discussion by Bennett, Eller, and Improvement committee members Jess Dedmond and Walt Arnold, appointed by Eller to investigate conditions in the lower quad and quonset hut areas.

Eller stressed the fact that if students are to receive and benefit from improvements and changes brought about by Mr. Bennett's office, they must give him complete cooperation. The president seemed to be more specifically directing his remarks at the present to the first improvement listed, planting of grass in the lower quadrangle.

The improvements promised by Mr. Bennett are as follows:

1. Grass to be planted in lower quad; areas wired off.
2. Quonset study hut telephone to be provided with telephone booth, and outside bell installed.
3. More chairs to be furnished for quonset study huts.
4. Additional horseshoe pits to be placed in the upper quadrangle, locations not yet determined.

Eller expressed his appreciation for the complete cooperation of Mr. Bennett in the matter of campus improvements.

Newsprint Shortage Forces DTH to Set Date of Last Issue

"Shortage of newsprint," the mania which has dogged metropolitain and small town newspapers since the war began, has struck at the Daily Tar Heel.

As a result, decision has been forced to terminate this quarter's publication with the May 28 issue next Wednesday.

Publication will continue during the summer sessions twice weekly. Next September, with the beginning of the fall quarter, the DTH again will resume its daily schedule.

Federalists to Hold Afternoon Conference

The student chapter of the United World Federalists will meet this afternoon in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial at 5 o'clock. Students who plan to attend summer school are requested to come at 4:30 to elect officers for the summer session.

President Dave Andrews will lead the group discussion on "What Can I Do to Prevent War?"

New Immigration Looms

Victory Village Expansion To Include 96 Apartments

New immigrants to Victory Village will begin occupying the last twelve buildings to be erected here tomorrow and next week. Large barrack type army units, the new buildings will add 96 four-room apartments to the 252 Victory Village apartments already occupied by student couples and families.

Composed of living room, combination kitchen and dining room, two bedrooms, and a bath, the living units are equipped with oil heat and oil cooking ranges. The buildings are divided into eight apartments each.

Furniture was moved into the buildings yesterday.

Another improvement to Victory Village, announced yesterday by Supervisor of Operations J. S. Bennett, is that work will begin on the Village roads June 10. The roads will be treated with oil, stone, and asphalt.

Singewald Will Speak In New East Tonight

Dr. Joseph P. Singewald, Maryland state geologist and geology department head at Johns Hopkins University, will present an illustrated lecture on Argentine mineral deposits tonight at 8:15 in Room 112, New East.

Dr. Singewald, co-author of a standard text on South American minerals, will exhibit color films made during a wartime research mission in Argentina.

'Y' Court Dance To Be Tomorrow

An informal dance in the Y court, open to the entire campus, will be presented tomorrow night from 8:30 until 11:30 by Graham Memorial. Music will be furnished by the GM dance band, the "Dream Serenaders" under Ned Reap's direction.

"Meal or a coating of sawdust will be sprinkled in the Y Court to make for better dancing," announced Student Union Director Martha Rice, "and if it rains, we'll roll back the rugs in Graham Memorial's main lounge and throw the dance there."

On Sunday afternoon, from 3 until 5 o'clock, an exhibition of works by Betty Warren Jones will be held in the main lounge. More than 30 of her portraits and sketches will be on display. Following the exhibition there will be a concert on the lawn in front of the student union, again featuring the Dream Serenaders.

SENIOR INVITATIONS

Senior invitations may be picked up now in the "Y" lobby. Today and tomorrow will be the last days for seniors to get their invitations.

In the Forest Theater

Three-Day Run of 'Macbeth' To Open Tomorrow Evening

The Carolina Playmakers' outdoor production of Shakespeare's "Macbeth," featuring a cast of over 40, opens in the Forest theater tomorrow evening at 8:30 for a three-night run. In case of rain the production will be held the next fair night.

The production is directed by John W. Parker, associate professor of dramatic art, who has adapted "Macbeth" into a new acting version. Instead of the traditional five-act division with 28 scenes, the production has been so designed that there will be only one intermission in the action.

Lynn Gault, technical director of the Playmakers, has designed one of the most elaborate sets ever to be constructed in the Forest theater. In the courtyard of Inverness castle, on the main stage, ramps and stairways of the castle spread over the expanse of the 80-foot acting area. The towers of the castle rise 34 feet in the air.

On the two side stages will be the Witches' cave and the army assembly ground at Birnam.

Colorful 12th century costumes are designed and executed under the supervision of Irene Smart, costume director, with the assistance of Peter Bucknell. John O'Steen will play Wilton Mason's special organ music for the production. Lighting is designed by Wayne Bowman; stage manager is Bill Ayers.

Pearl Harbor Classes To Hold June Reunion

Commencement at the University of North Carolina June 7-9 will be an occasion for a reunion of the student body in Chapel Hill as it was constituted just prior to Pearl Harbor. The classes of 1941, 1942, 1943 and 1944 are scheduled to hold a joint reunion get-together supper on Saturday, June 7.

Hundreds of members of the four classes were in military and naval service during the war. Their first class reunions after the war will be events of significance.

NROTC Graduates To Hold Reunion At Carolina Inn

Members of the Naval Reserve Officers Training corps graduating class of February 1945 will hold their first reunion since the end of the war at a banquet Thursday afternoon at 6:30 in the Carolina inn.

Special guests at the banquet will be Capt. E. E. Hazlett, who was in command of the NROTC unit here when the class graduated; Capt. D. W. Loomis, present commander of the local unit, and Maryon "Spike" Saunders, director of the alumni office. Members of the Naval armory staff will also attend.

Attempts to contact all members of the class of '45 have been made by John Gambill, Dick Elliott, and Jesse Greenbaum, who are on the arrangement committee for the banquet. However, Gambill urged all members of the class who have not yet been notified to get in touch with him at 101 Whitehead.

Curtailing of Service Announced by Laundry

The University Laundry has announced its program for curtailing services this term until it resumes operations in the summer.

The accounts of dormitory students will be closed as of this Saturday and those of town students, stopped as of next Wednesday. All unused balances of student deposits are to be forwarded to the cashier's office in South building to be refunded.

After the dates set for clearing of accounts, regular laundry pick-ups will continue as usual until May 31. However, to get their finished bundles back, students must come to the downtown office of the University Laundry at 132 East Franklin street.

Latest Fad

Fads come and go with the seasons. Some of them are sane, some strictly commercial, while others are foolish and have no reasons behind their origin. The latest fad that seems to be hanging on indefinitely is to tag organizations with the term Communistic.

Certainly there are Communists in many organizations. They are active and continually on the move. They infiltrate everywhere. It is something that we must keep our eyes and minds alert to and try to combat. But it seems that the fad is becoming a little too popular and it tends to act as a decoy to distract public opinion away from the main issues at stake.

One of the organizations that has been tinged as red is the National Student Organization that had its beginnings in Chicago last December. This group has yet to adopt its constitution and decide on its policies and yet in many circles it has been termed Communistic.

If there is any question in our minds that the NSO caters to the Left then it should be our particular duty to send a large and active delegation to the Constitutional convention next fall—the Student Legislature should select delegates that will not take a back seat in the undertakings at the convention, but will combat any Communistic policies that certain individuals may propose. This is the only way that we can discourage the latest fad. It is up to the University to help the NSO get on its feet and get it headed in a direction that will fade out whatever red tinge the organization may have. If all attempts of the Carolina delegation are of no avail, then would be the time to sever our relations and join in the fad.

Registration Again

Mass production has its advantages and Mr. Ed Lanier and the board that devised the registration methods are still looking for them. The new system that was given its trial period last term has proven that it was not as bad as the howls from certain students indicated, and the system will be used again in registering for next fall and the rest of the next school year.

The members of the registrar's staff may find that the system of registering for three terms in advance may have its difficulties. We sincerely hope not. Lines around the University have become notorious and long. If the new system of registering proves to keep the many lines at a minimum then we are in favor of it.

The system of registering for a complete year in advance will place a great burden on the faculty advisers and deans during the registration period, but in the long run it should facilitate matters for the rest of the school year since the process will be completed with one sweep.

Cut the Lines

The "Jeffersonian Republican" from Oregon, Senator Wayne Morse, gave us new heart in American politics with his hard-hitting comments on "Your Congress" Thursday evening. We hope he also gave a few newly-elected student legislators inspiration with his observation, "what we need in American poitics today are men who say they will vote on the merits of an issue irrespective of party lines." We need men to stand first for principles, and only second for reelection."

Throughout his talk hard-hitting Senator Morse lashed out at the myriad traditional inefficiencies in government today—then gave facts for the solution to these problems. For bringing such fine calibre statesmen as Morse, Senator Taylor, and Representative Kennedy to the campus this year, the CPU, and especially retiring Chairman Davidoff, is to be heartily congratulated—for bringing the people the facts, as Senator Morse put it.—R. Exclusive Interview

Beller Bellows from Throne In His New Regal Splendor

By Tookie Hodgson

Now that the campus elections are over, it seemed particularly fitting that I should seek an interview with the new president of the student body—B. Burlingham Beller.

Therefore, without further ado, I mounted my faithful steed, "Rudolph, the Rhinoceros," and in a very few moments, lumbered up to Stacy dormitory, the new presidential palace.

Liveried footmen, immaculate in their T-shirts and faded khaki, met me, and led off my noble mount, and one P. Augustus Flappy, the palace major-domo, conducted me into the throne room where President Beller and hundreds of his Lower Quad retainers sat enthralled in regal splendor.

President Beller, at the time of my arrival, was dictating a letter of pressing importance to Dr. Frank Graham.

Says Burlingham

"Dear Frankie," quoth B. Burlingham, "let's have no more small talk! When I say I want them tap rooms down here in the Lower Quad, I ain't meanin' I want 'em down here next Fourth of July. Either git on the ball or git out! Signed, Your buddy, B. Burlingham."

"Ah!" I thought, "A man of action. Here is what student government has been crying for—Beller, the Man!"

Having finished his correspondence, the Majestic One turned his radiant countenance in my direction. Unused to being confronted by such omnipotence, I cringed in my most amiable fashion.

"Who the hell are you?" boomed Beller. "A UP spy?"

"No, Excellency," I quavered, "merely a humble representative of the Board of Publications, the Daily Tar Heel."

"By gar!" answered His Imperial Majesty, "I was wonderin' when you guys was gonna to come down here and take my pichoor. Hell, I been on the throne almost two weeks now, an' I ain't a one of you showed up, not even at my coronation! If you don't watch out, I'll git Frankie to leave you outta this ferm!"

"My sincere apologies, B. Burlingham Beller," I began.

"Don't take my name in vain, scum!" rejoined His Eminence.

"When you want to speak to me, refer to me in the third person, as the 'Man'."

Withered by the blast engendered by my unwitting faux pas, I nonetheless summoned up courage to ask the new president how he came to be elected.

Explains All

"That's easy, bird-dog," replied he, "I jest spread the word that UP meant 'Union Party' and SP stood for 'Southern Party.' All these boys down here would as soon shoot a yankee as look at him. Besides that Confederate Memorial Day weren't far off and all the fellers were a gettin' mad. Finally, when I let loose a thousand mockingbirds, all trained to sing 'Dixie' and 'Maryland, My Maryland,' the votes started rollin' in. Then when I petitioned Old South to change the school colors from blue and white to grey and white, a Beller landslide started. The best trick I done though, was to spread the word that my opponent was a fifth cousin of Gen. Sherman's. Why I even had 14 folks come up from Georgia to vote for me!"

"A remarkable campaign," I ejaculated, "But tell me, Sire, what are your plans for next year?"

"First of all," answered the Noble One, "I'm gonna hush up this talk about a new water plant. Hell, ain't nobody in Chapel Hill drunk WATER in years! Then I'm gonna abolish classes and institute seven-day weekends. Next, I'm gonna have a pipeline run down here from Ruppert's Brewery in New Yawk, and have beer acomin' out of the dormitory water spigots. For a while I thought about fillin' up the Old Well with beer, but my friends told me that too damned many folks would jump in and drown themselves!"

"That's a fine platform," I replied, bowing and taking my leave. "It has been an honor speaking with you, sir."

"To hell with that! I want my pichoor took! Where are all the photographers?"

On this irascible note, I took leave of the new president confident of the destiny of our noble student body. Exeunt omnes.

Scribe Gives Latest Flashes From Feminine Side of Campus

By Ruth Evans

Yep, another animal is being added to the DTH editorial pages, but this time not of a canine variety. Let's call it the strangest of all animals, a Carolina Coed. Today we're launching the first of what is planned as a weekly feature giving that body of students better known as coeds a little representation on the edit page. We don't know how it'll all work out, but anyway, fellows, don't be scared away, we might even conceive some plan for a DTH sponsored Dorothy Dix, or Woman's World, or "how to get a date in three quick lessons."

But all kidding aside, lots of DTH politicoes have agreed with us that coeds (like everybody else who wants a good excuse) and their activities are left out a little. So here we go. . .

Best Yet

Best thing we've seen all week happened, believe it or not, at one of those eternal meetings. We hereby want to commend Women's Government on its hopeful outlook for '47-48. The occasion for all this praise was the first session of the Coed Senate Tuesday night. Under the swift and capable presiding of newly-elected Speaker Barbara Cashion the 21 Senators got a good bird's-eye view of the work of this body, its committee structure, its responsibilities and its opportunities. Problems posed for next year's work included a study of mass coed meetings, coed elections, coed study facilities, representation in the Legislature, and an increasingly effective orientation program resulting in better understanding and application of the Honor and Campus Codes. Best of luck to Barbara and her group of outstanding and well-chosen Senators. Now all they need is the support of the coeds they represent and the cooperation of the men. Gentlemen! Step to it!

And here while we're cooperating how about a little plug. Look in your closet for old clothes today. The big collection will be this afternoon, and we really want to round up every thing we can find! We can't overemphasize the need of the people overseas, and we'd certainly appreciate your help in supplying them some relief. Don't forget! Today!

With another view toward next year we've looked over coed orientation plans. They sound real fine. Pat Lane and her committee with Jo Benton as student adviser chairman have completed careful plans for the week before classes when new women will be put through lines and lessons on the how and why of Carolina. Beginning September 18, it will all be climaxed by the Coed Ball the first football weekend of the year.

As for the calendar of final things this quarter, we could go on forever. The biggest events are the CICA party Saturday, the WAA awards banquet tonight, the final YWCA membership meeting Thursday for all girls, the Senate's leadership training program just completed, the last big sorority functions, and finishing touches to the work of smaller organizations. We'll be in fine fettle for finals. Are we complaining? Nope. Our motto: "Just don't ever think it hasn't been". . . .

Federal Agent Tells Why F.B.I. Aided In Probing Greenville Lynching Case

By Bill Sexton

"The most interesting part of the Greenville lynch case hasn't been tried yet." That statement—which preceded by five hours last night's announcement of the Greenville jury's verdict—was made by an agent of the Federal Burau of Investigation.

The F.B.I. has held a much-criticized, little-understood role in the trial of 31 taxi-drivers for the abduction and murder of Willie Earle. To attorneys defending the lynchers, it was "northern interference" of the sort that, according to Defense Attorney Thomas Wofford, causes "all our troubles in the South."

Neither the F.B.I. nor the press have attempted yet to explain why U. S. Attorney General Tom Clark ordered the F.B.I. into the case. There is, as yet, no federal anti-lynching law, and at first glance the F.B.I. overstepped its legal jurisdiction in assisting state and local officers in prosecuting the lynchers.

But, says the previously-quoted federal agent, Clark had an interesting—and probably valid—reason for putting the F.B.I. on the lynchers. And what he says hints that the F.B.I. isn't through.

"When they abducted Willie Earle from the Greenville jail," the agent declared, "they violated his civil rights under the Constitution—the federal Constitution."

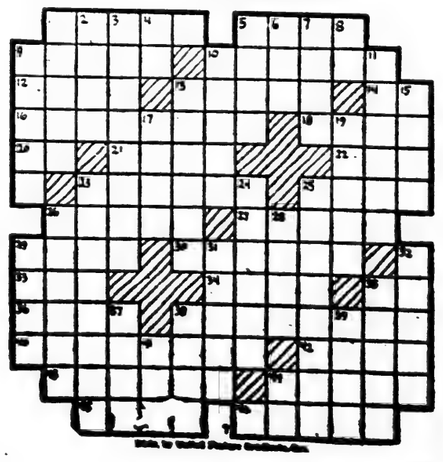
Earle at that time had not been tried for attacking the white taxi-driver, and the driver was not yet dead from his knife wounds.

Clark's stand on the Greenville case establishes an interesting and important precedent. It strongly suggests that action may—or at least should—be taken against the jailer who released Willie Earle into the hands of the lynchers, admittedly without resistence.

That's what the F.B.I. man meant when he said the best part of the Greenville case might be yet to come. For it's been a long time since a southern law officer has been held responsible in court for failing to resist "to the death, if necessary," any unlawful attempt to harm a prisoner, as every officer is sworn to do.

In light of the action of the faithless and perhaps even conspiratory jailor, it's fortunate that the F.B.I. is in on the case, since local law enforcement agencies are justifiably reluctant to investigate their own.

And it is important that public opinion not lose interest in the Greenville case until the action of the jury or be tested in court.



Only then will the case be closed.

"My sincere apologies, B. Burlingham Beller," I began.

"Don't take my name in vain, scum!" rejoined His Eminence.

"When you want to speak to me, refer to me in the third person, as the 'Man'."

Withered by the blast engendered by my unwitting faux pas, I nonetheless summoned up courage to ask the new president how he came to be elected.

Explains All

"That's easy, bird-dog," replied he, "I jest spread the word that UP meant 'Union Party' and SP stood for 'Southern Party.' All these boys down here would as soon shoot a yankee as look at him. Besides that Confederate Memorial Day weren't far off and all the fellers were a gettin' mad. Finally, when I let loose a thousand mockingbirds, all trained to sing 'Dixie' and 'Maryland, My Maryland,' the votes started rollin' in. Then when I petitioned Old South to change the school colors from blue and white to grey and white, a Beller landslide started. The best trick I done though, was to spread the word that my opponent was a fifth cousin of Gen. Sherman's. Why I even had 14 folks come up from Georgia to vote for me!"

"A remarkable campaign," I ejaculated, "But tell me, Sire, what are your plans for next year?"

"First of all," answered the Noble One, "I'm gonna hush up this talk about a new water plant. Hell, ain't nobody in Chapel Hill drunk WATER in years! Then I'm gonna abolish classes and institute seven-day weekends. Next, I'm gonna have a pipeline run down here from Ruppert's Brewery in New Yawk, and have beer acomin' out of the dormitory water spigots. For a while I thought about fillin' up the Old Well with beer, but my friends told me that too damned many folks would jump in and drown themselves!"

"That's a fine platform," I replied, bowing and taking my leave. "It has been an honor speaking with you, sir."

"To hell with that! I want my pichoor took! Where are all the photographers?"

On this irascible note, I took leave of the new president confident of the destiny of our noble student body. Exeunt omnes.

Yep, another animal is being added to the DTH editorial pages, but this time not of a canine variety. Let's call it the strangest of all animals, a Carolina Coed. Today we're launching the first of what is planned as a weekly feature giving that body of students better known as coeds a little representation on the edit page. We don't know how it'll all work out, but anyway, fellows, don't be scared away, we might even conceive some plan for a DTH sponsored Dorothy Dix, or Woman's World, or "how to get a date in three quick lessons."

But all kidding aside, lots of DTH politicoes have agreed with us that coeds (like everybody else who wants a good excuse) and their activities are left out a little. So here we go. . .

Best Yet

Best thing we've seen all week happened, believe it or not, at one of those eternal meetings. We hereby want to commend Women's Government on its hopeful outlook for '47-48. The occasion for all this praise was the first session of the Coed Senate Tuesday night. Under the swift and capable presiding of newly-elected Speaker Barbara Cashion the 21 Senators got a good bird's-eye view of the work of this body, its committee structure, its responsibilities and its opportunities. Problems posed for next year's work included a study of mass coed meetings, coed elections, coed study facilities, representation in the Legislature, and an increasingly effective orientation program resulting in better understanding and application of the Honor and Campus Codes. Best of luck to Barbara and her group of outstanding and well-chosen Senators. Now all they need is the support of the coeds they represent and the cooperation of the men. Gentlemen! Step to it!

And here while we're cooperating how about a little plug. Look in your closet for old clothes today. The big collection will be this afternoon, and we really want to round up everything we can find! We can't overemphasize the need of the people overseas, and we'd certainly appreciate your help in supplying them some relief. Don't forget! Today!

With another view toward next year we've looked over coed orientation plans. They sound real fine. Pat Lane and her committee with Jo Benton as student adviser chairman, have completed careful plans for the week before classes when new women will be put through lines and lessons on the how and why of Carolina. Beginning September 18, it will all be climaxed by the Coed Ball the first football weekend of the year.

As for the calendar of final things this quarter, we could go on forever. The biggest events are the CICA party Saturday, the WAA awards banquet tonight, the final YWCA membership meeting Thursday for all girls, the Senate's leadership training program just completed, the last big sorority functions, and finishing touches to the work of smaller organizations. We'll be in fine fettle for finals. Are we complaining? Nope. Our motto: "Just don't ever think it hasn't been". . . .

Federal Agent Tells Why F.B.I. Aided In Probing Greenville Lynching Case

By Bill Sexton

"The most interesting part of the Greenville lynch case hasn't been tried yet." That statement—which preceded by five hours last night's announcement of the Greenville jury's verdict—was made by an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The F.B.I. has held a much-criticized, little-understood role in the trial of 31 taxi-drivers for the abduction and murder of Willie Earle. To attorneys defending the lynchers, it was "northern interference" of the sort that, according to Defense Attorney Thomas Wofford, causes "all our troubles in the South."

Neither the F.B.I. nor the press have attempted yet to explain why U. S. Attorney General Tom Clark ordered the F.B.I. into the case. There is, as yet, no federal anti-lynching law, and at first glance the F.B.I. overstepped its legal jurisdiction in assisting state and local officers in prosecuting the lynchers.

But, says the previously-quoted federal agent, Clark had an interesting—and probably valid—reason for putting the F.B.I. on the lynchers, And what he says hints that the F.B.I. isn't through.

"When they abducted Willie Earle from the Greenville jail," the agent declared, "they violated his civil rights under the Constitution—the federal Constitution."

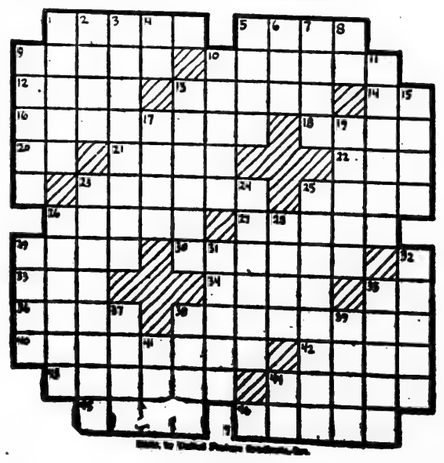
Earle at that time had not been tried for attacking the white taxi-driver, and the driver was not yet dead from his knife wounds.

Clark's stand on the Greenville case establishes an interesting and important precedent. It strongly suggests that action may—or at least should—be taken against the jailer who released Willie Earle into the hands of the lynchers, admittedly without resistence.

That's what the F.B.I. man meant when he said the best part of the Greenville case might be yet to come. For it's been a long time since a southern law officer has been held responsible in court for failing to resist "to the death, if necessary," any unlawful attempt to harm a prisoner, as every officer is sworn to do.

In light of the action of the faithless and perhaps even conspirative jailor, it's fortunate that the F.B.I. is in on the case, since local law enforcement agencies are justifiably reluctant to investigate their own.

And it is important that public opinion not lose interest in the Greenville case until the action of the jailer or be tested in court.



Only then will the case be closed.

Late Tar Heel Rally Fails As Ramsey Bests DiLorenzo

By Bob Goldwater

Carolina came up with an outstanding pitching performance and brilliant play afield yesterday for the first time in a week, but the result was the same as in the past four games, the Tar Heels dropping a tough 5-4 decision in 11 innings to the league-leading N. C. Sate nine on Emerson field.

For 10 innings southpaw Vinnie DiLorenzo hurled almost faultless ball in limiting the West Raleigh lads to four blows. Then came the fatal eleventh which saw the Wolfpack garner another quartet of hits, producing the runs that meant the ball game.

Fatal Eleventh

It all started with a routine infield out, but the next batter, Bill Stanton, who had fanned four times previously, doubled to left field and was followed by Charlie Richkus, who singled off Hamilton's glove.

DiLorenzo regained control momentarily and fanned the next hitter, only to have two of his following offerings battered into center field by Evans and Garner to produce two runs and a 5-3 lead for the visitors.

Tar Heel Rally

The Tar Heels came to bat and it looked as if they were out to win the contest when pinch-hitter Jim Hayworth led off with a blazing double to center. Beason then lined to Ramsey, who threw wild in an effort to double Hayworth at second, and the latter moved on to third. Next Kelly walked, and stole second while Hussey was coming in to hit for Gregory. Hussey grounded out on the next pitch, scoring Hayworth with Kelly moving to third. Bo Hackney, with a single, a double, and a triple to his credit, followed Hussey to the batter's box and after looking at a couple, plastered one of Ramsey's tosses in the direction of the center field fence.

The crowd rose, but fell several seconds later—as did Carolina's victory chances — when centerfielder Willie Evans raced back to grab the diving missle and end the ball game.

Early Lead

The visitors scored first in the game, picking up a pair of tallies in the second, which the local lads matched and added one to in the fifth and sixth frames.

It was in the eighth the State boys t[illegible] the encounter back up again by coupling a walk and a triple, and after a scoreless ninth, the game was forced into extra innings.

Curt Ramsey pitched well for the State outfit, having little trouble with the Tar Heel hitters, with the exception of Bo Hackney. It was his fifth win of the season against one loss.

Face Phi Kaps In Playoff Tilt

Campus Champions To Be Decided Today

By Gil McLeod

The Roaches won top honors in the dormitory softball division yesterday afternoon by effectively shutting out Steele, 5-0, and they will face Phi Kappa Sig's unbeaten nine this afternoon at 4 o'clock on diamond seven of the Navy field to decide the campus softball championship.

Jim Godwin, who hurled a brilliant two-hit game for the Roaches yesterday, will handle the mound duties for them again this afternoon when he will face the Phi Kaps' ace, Tony Jones.

The Roaches wasted no time in taking the lead in yesterday's tilt as they knocked out five hits in the first three innings to score four of their five runs. The other tally came in the fifth stanza when Pete Brown clouted a homer into right field.

Leading in hitting for the Roaches was Tom Cleary, with two for three, and following him were Bill Sprigel and Tom Gorman, who each got one for two. Bob Reynolds and Bob Mitten collected the only two hits off the slants of Godwin.

Horseshoe Finals

The horseshoe finals in both the fraternity and dormitory divisions will be held this afternoon at 5 o'clock at the pits beside Woollen gym. Phi Delta Theta will pitch against the Betas in the fraternity bracket, and the Locals will face the Independents in the dorm division.

Basketballers End Spring Drills Today

Carolina's basketballers will complete their spring cage drills this afternoon, as Coach Tom Scott puts his stalwarts through their paces in a final scrimmage session on the Woollen gym hardwoods.

Today's workout completes three weeks of practice for the White Phantoms, primarily devoted to fundamentals of shooting, passing and dribbling.

Coach Scott is well pleased with the turnout he has had for the practices, considering the weather which makes the main gym floor somewhat torrid.

Cindermen Conclude Season With 74-52 Dual Meet Win

By Morty Schaap

Charlottesville, Va., May 21. — Carolina's only undefeated spring team finished its dual meet season here this afternoon in winning style as the Tar Heel tracksters scored an impressive 74-52 win over a strong Virginia cinder aggregation in the rain and dampness of Scott stadium.

It was a real team victory for the locals as 16 performers figured in the scoring column for the men of Coaches Fetzer and Ranson.

Floyd "Chunk" Simmons was the individual high scorer of the meet as he compiled firsts in the high and low hurdles, coupled with a second in the high jump and a third in the javelin to tally a total of 14 points.

Jimmy Miller, Don Nelson, and Jack Milne were the big guns for the Carolina lads in the running events, while Len Briley, Bob Seligman, and pole-vaulters McLeod and Russell turned in outstanding performances in the field events.

The wet conditions of the track kept record-smashing to the barest minimum, with the home discus mark being the only record to fall.

The weather did not, though, effect the quality of the competition. The 220-yard dash developed into the top show of the day with the Cavaliers' Tommie Galliford nipping Don Nelson in what was almost a photo finish.

Top Tar Heel win of the afternoon was in the one-mile race which saw Jimmy Miller breeze to victory over teammates Smith and Burnham in the fine time of 4:33.3.

Caravan of Cars to Feature Last Day of Clothing Drive

Volunteers from Various Campus Groups Participating in CRIL-Sponsored Effort

A caravan of 25 cars and 100 students will feature the final day of the campus clothing drive when they collect all discarded clothing at every dormitory and fraternity, starting at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

All dormitories, fraternities, and sororities have been asked to place their piles of old clothing on the first floor at some easily accessible place where the collectors can find them without undue difficulty. The collectors are volunteers from 25 different campus organizations helping with the drive, under the sponsorship of the CRIL.

All of the clothing collected today will be delivered to the central depot at the YMCA. Any students who have not had an opportunity to contribute to the drive, or who have forgotten to do so, may bring their clothing to the Y any time before Monday.

The clothing will be packed for shipment to Maryland Monday afternoon. From Maryland it will go to neutral European countries as part of a national drive sponsored by the Church World service.

Purpose of the clothing collection is to provide clothes for suffering Europeans this winter when cold weather will kill numerous persons unless clothing is received to supplement the present inadequate supply.

Ruth Evans, campus chairman of the drive, has issued a call for volunteer workers to help pack the discarded clothing Monday afternoon. The 25 organizations carrying on the collection today include sororities, fraternities, the UVA, AVC, SCHW, Di, Phi, Valkyries, Order of the Grail, and Town Girls association.

U.N. Signals Green Light To 'Watchdog'

Russians Lose Vote On Balkan Question

Lake Success, N. Y., May 22—(UP)—The United Nations gave the green light to its current Balkan watchdog tonight to use its own discretion in looking into trouble spots.

The Security council beat down a Russian resolution that would have restricted the activities of the subcommission now stationed in the area.

Controversy Not Closed

Soviet Delegate Andrei Gromyko immediately announced that the controversy over the subcommission's powers is not closed. He says he will bring up the issue again when the Security council debates the full commission report on Balkan border incidents.

U. S. Delegate Herschel Johnson countered by criticizing delegates who challenge decisions they find "inconvenient."

The cause of the entire argument is the United Nations Balkan commission, which is at work in Geneva drawing up a report of conflicts along the borders of Greece, Yugoslavia, Albania, and Bulgaria.

Truman's Mother Is 'Holding Her Own'

Grandview, Mo., May 22—(UP)—The White House physician, Brigadier General Wallace Graham, said this evening that President Truman's mother was "holding her own." Her temperature was normal and she was resting comfortably.

Five Persons Dead As Result of Crash

Dayton, Ohio, May 22—(UP)—Five persons were killed and two others injured when a transport-type B-29 superfortress crashed on a farm near Wright field. A half hour after the giant four motored plane crashed a gas tank exploded and several persons were hurt while running from the wreckage.

Communist Declared Guilty on 11 Counts

Washington, May 22—(UP)—Carl Aldo Marzani has been found guilty on all 11 counts of an indictment charging the former State department employe with concealing his Communist party activities and membership in order to stay on the federal payroll. The 12-man jury deliberated two and a half hours.

Andrew May Finishes Defense Testimony

Washington, May 22—(UP)—Former Congressman Andrew May has ended three days of direct testimony in his own defense, insisting he is innocent of all fraud and conspiracy charges against him. Out-of-town defense witnesses are scheduled to testify, after which May faces cross examination.

Senator Criticizes Potato Destruction

Washington, May 22—(UP)—Democratic Senator Edwin C. Johnson of Colorado has criticized the destruction of surplus potatoes as a "revolting display." He has asked the Senate Agriculture committee to see if some use can be found for them.

Former Italian Head Says Attempts Failed

Rome, May 22 —(UP)— Italy's World War One Premier announces tonight that his efforts to form a new government have failed. The 87-year-old Victor Orlando admitted he could not cope with the Italian political crisis after his third conference with President de Nicola.

UP Chooses New Officers

Party Elects Elwood Mixon as Chairman; Perry, Beale, Ripps Take Other Offices

Elwood Mixon, rising junior from Rocky Mount, was elected chairman of the University party at a steering committee meeting held late yesterday afternoon.

Mixon, a member of the Elections board which handled the past spring elections and a resident of Old West dormitory, took over the reins from Alex "Zero" Davis, retiring party chairman.

Bob Perry, Greensboro rising senior, received the position of vice-chairman of the party. Perry is a former member of the Student Legislature, has worked with the Daily Tar Heel and his freshman class baseball team.

Norman Ripps was elected to the treasurer's post, while Annie Ben Beale, secretary of the rising senior class and a member of student body President Tom Eller's coalition cabinet, was chosen as secretary.

In the publicity department, Howard Merry and Chuck Hauser were elected as co-chairmen of the publicity committee. Merry has worked on the Publications board, news and sports staffs of the Daily Tar Heel, while Hauser is now working as night editor and reporter on the DTH.

Newly-elected Chairman Mixon requested that all groups belonging to the University party whose representatives will not attend the summer sessions of school appoint an alternate representative for the summer.

Shakespeare Play in Forest Theater To Feature Hirsch in Leading Role

Sam Hirsch, a dramatic art student, plays the tyrant and murderer Macbeth in the Carolina Playmakers forest Theater production of Shakespeare's immortal tragedy, which begins its three-night run this evening at 8:30.

Last spring in the Forest theater, Hirsch gave an outstanding performance as Sganarelle in the Playmakers production of Moliere's "The School For Husbands." This year he was cast in the role of Black Piet in an Experimental play.

In addition to acting Hirsch has proved himself a capable playwrite, winning two first places in Experimental programs this year with "Give Us Pause," a lyrical drama, and "Subway Rhapsody," a fantasy laid in a New York subway car.

General admission to "Macbeth" is $1.00 or by Playmakers season ticket. There are no reserved seats in the Forest theater. In case of rain, the production will be held the next fair night.

Impressive and Novel

Valkyrie Sunrise Ceremony Initiates Five New Members

By Charlie Gibson

In an impressive and novel ritual before sunrise this morning, the Valkyries, the major coed honorary society on campus, initiated five new members.

Eerie gongs tolled all the while when black-gowned figures invaded dormitory rooms, surprised five coeds, and instructed them to dress hurriedly. Those so mysteriously awakened included Barbara Cashion, Chapel Hill; Jo Fishel, Vaughan; Bill Lloyd, Chapel Hill; Julia Ross, Burlington; and Marshall Spears, Rocky Mount.

Admission into the Valkyries is the highest recognition given to coeds. With its membership limited to no more than two percent of the coed enrollment, this society taps girls on the basis of their outstanding character, leadership ability, scholarship, service, and soundness of judgment.

An active clan, the Valkyries encourage University advancement through such programs as their annual sing with vocal competition among fraternities, sororities, and dormitories. Current Valkyries officers are Anne Cutts. president; Tommie Holden, secretary; and Nancy Laird, treasurer.

Additional Valkyries are Jeanne Driscoll, Jerry Atkins, Fran Golden, Nonnie Morris, Kit Coleman, Sybil Goerch Powe, Janet Johnston, Mrs. Inez Stacy, Mrs. Kai Jergenson, Mrs. Robert Swain, and Miss Ruth Duncan.

Chi Phis Choose Girard President

John W. Girard, Jr., rising junior from St. Petersburg, Fla., was chosen president of the Chi Phi fraternity at an elections meeting. Other officers elected for the coming year are Floyd G. Hudson of Cherry Point, vice-president; Harold A. Morris of Fayetteville, secretary; Edward K. Anthony of St. Petersburg, Fla., treasurer; Richard L. Simpson of Chevy Chase, Md., historian; and Dale M. Evarts of Meriden, Conn., house manager.

Commerce Majors Make Board

Eller Appoints Landreth Chairman of Audit Board

Monroe Landreth, special commerce student and former accountant, was named chairman of the Student Audit board by Student Boby President Tom Eller yesterday.

Landreth, who served as a commercial bookkeeper before entering Carolina, is treasurer of the Charlotte Carolina club. Before enrolling as a special student he was secretary-treasurer of the Charlotte Batchelors' club.

Eller, in his second list of executive appointments, named Dick Culberson, Ralph Hodges, Jack Swanner, and Roy Moose as members of the board. All four are commerce majors.

Swanner, a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, is a recent Phi Bete initiate, and Moose is past president of the University Veterans association. Hodges is manager of Mangum dormitory.

Under the Student Constitution the Audit Board has the responsibility of supervising the work of the Student Activities office and the expenditure of all funds appropriated by the legislature.

The Constitution requires that all members "have experience or training in business methods."

Roland Parker Lounge Site of Last Service

Sabbath services for the Hillel Foundation will be held for the last time this quarter at 7:30 this evening in the Roland Parker lounge. The topic of the sermon will be "Commandments."

Following the services there will be an "Oneg Shabatt," when refreshments will be served and Hillel Honor keys awarded to Hyman K. Cohen, Daniel E. Daum, Albert J. Jacobson, and Elaine Pearlstine.

Sideline Sidelights

Football Seating Problem To Be Discussed on Monday

Student seating at football games is scheduled to receive a complete airing Monday afternoon when a group of students meet at 2 o'clock with Coaches Bob Fetzer and Chuck Erickson.

In a statement to the DTH yesterday, Charlie Long, head of the legislature fact-finding board said, "In light of previous statements that have appeared on the editorial pages of the Daily Tar Heel, and after special consultations with Coaches Fetzer and Erickson, arrangements have been made for a special meeting to discuss seating arrangements and to clarify policies of the athletic association."

Members of the committee of students will include Student Boby President Tom Eller, DTH Editor Barron Mills, DTH Sports Editor Irwin Smallwood, and Chairman Long.

Long added, "It is hoped that this conference will reach a solution, so far as possible, to make a fair distribution of the seats available with all interest factions considered."

Ned Reap to Play For Dance at 'Y'

The last 'Y' Court dance of the quarter under Graham Memorial's sponsorship will get under way tonight at 8:30 with Ned Reap and his GM Dream Serenaders providing the music. With dress strictly informal, the dance will end at 11:30.

"The rough Y Court will get a coating of sawdust or meal to make it right for dancing," said Martha Rice, Student Union Director, "and if the rains come we'll move to the main lounge of Graham Memorial and carry on there."

Sunday's entertainment schedule will include an exhibition of more than 30 works by artist Betty Warren Jones in the main lounge from 3 until 5 o'clock, a lawn concert by the Dream Serenaders at 5, and a voice recital at 8:30 in the main lounge presented by students of the Music Department.

Campus Organizations Should Clear Accounts

Yack Business Manager Jean Huske has issued a request that all campus organizations clear up their accounts with the annual as early as possible.

The 1947 Yacks are to be released soon and accounts must be closed prior to the end of the quarter.

Name of Humor Mag Will Be 'Tarnation,' Says Editor Hodgson

First Buccaneer, then Tar and Feathers, and now—Tarnation.

That, says Humor Mag Editor Tookie Hodgson, will be the title of the new campus publication, chosen yesterday from a "shoe-box-full" of entries.

"Tarnation" was submitted by Special Student J. L. Hall of 510 North Street. A committee including Hodgson, DTH Editor Barron Mills, Yack Editor Gene Johnstone, and Peter Gerns, selected it as top entry.

Tarnation rates one of the shortest definitions in Webster's Unabridged dictionary. It is, Webster says, simply "euphemistic for damnation."

Hodgson agrees.

Mangum Residents Set Afternoon Picnic Plans

Residents of Mangum dormitory will celebrate the "almost-end" of an arduous Spring term this afternoon with a picnic to be held at Hogan's Lake. The affair, of which Pete Gerns is in charge, will be the second one had by the dorm after a successful get-together during the latter part of April.

Newest Solons Take Control Of Assembly

Clampitt, Miller, Baker to Go to NSO

By Bookie Jabine

The old gave way to the new last night as the recently-elected Student Legislature was seated and duly sworn in after the 1946-47 vintage of lawmakers had finished discussion of the National Students Organization.

After adopting the report of Johnny Clampitt's NSO committee, which in effect instructs UNC delegates to the next meeting of the NSO, the assembly overwhelmingly named Bill Miller, Herman Baker, and Clampitt as representatives. These men will go to Madison, Wisconsin, in the fall.

The instructions which the delegates will follow embody two main points: (1) They will oppose the inclusion of any religious, political or other groups on the governing bodies of the NSO, (2) They will discuss the race question sensibly, remembering that they represent a southern university.

With the completion of the NSO affair, the 1946-47 assembly had finished for the year. One final motion was passed, however, to appropriate funds to present the retiring speaker, Charlie Warren, with a key.

Warren then rang down the gavel and declared the body adjourned. No sooner had he ended one meeting, however, than he opened another, bringing the first session of the 1947-48 assembly to order.

After swearing in Jack Folger as new speaker, Warren addressed the Legislature, reviewing the chief work accomplished by their predecessors.

He pointed out that the retiring solons had "often been too slow in responding to campus conditions."

But he commended the outgoing group by enumerating the vast amount of work which was done.

Warren concluded by saying, "I can't help but feel that the outlook is bright if we all pull together. I predict that an unprecedented year for student government lies ahead."

Following Warren's words, Student Body President Tom Eller spoke briefly. He warned the new lawmakers not to make mistakes, "of which I've been guilty."

He urged them to exercise maturity, decorum, and training while carrying out their duties.

Eller also named his committee appointments for the coming year but an atempt to suspend the rules to consider the names last night was defeated, and a special session has been called by Folger for "early next week."

PARTY PICNIC

The Student Party will have a picnic this evening at Sparrow's Pool. All members of the party and their friends who expect to attend the affair are asked to meet at 6 p.m. in front of Graham Memorial.

More Advantages

The latest crop of student government leaders should have a successful year ahead of them. One of the main advantages that they will have over the former officers will be the new student government office that is to be established in Graham Memorial around July 1.

Office space and equipment have been secured in the Student Union building to house the complete archives of the Student Legislature, correspondence, and committee reports filed for future reference.

A private stenographer to prepare the correspondence, type committee reports, and carry out the general office duties will be employed to aid the leaders.

The student officers can thank the Graham Memorial Board and Director for the latest addition to the efficiency of student government. The Board agreed at a recent meeting to furnish these services for the next year or at least until they could be provided for in the student government budget.

Heretofore the files and archives of the Student Legislature and committee reports have been very incomplete and inadequate for reference. They have been kept in the rooms of individual students and a complete archive is not available. The assemblage of the reports under one roof should greatly facilitate the action of the Legislature and committee groups in preparing their material and in expediting matters of importance.

Anti-Lynch Laws

A large segment of American public opinion—from parading students at Wofford college to New York Times editorial writers—is sadly surprised at the not guilty verdicts in the Greenville lynch case.

To many the Greenville decision represents nothing more nor less than a repudiation of the civil rights of an American citizen. A growing reaction is that withholding punishment or even the feeling of guilt from the 26 men who admitted their part in killing Willie Earle in effect legalizes such violation of a basic American right—the right to fair trial.

Such a reaction—which for once happily transcends even the Mason-Dixon line—is to many a healthy indication of a healthy American conscience. In fact, the popular shame over the Greenville verdicts goes far to alleviate the sense of guilt many feel over that decision by twelve fellow Americans in the Greenville court house.

Unfortunately, all the popular shame we can muster will not alleviate one damaging result of the case. That is the inevitable hurt the decision will wreak upon American prestige abroad. The full facilities of the Communist press will be turned upon showing up this "example of American democracy." And, as in other miscarriages of American justice, the world will hear about it.

Immediate passage of federal anti-lynching laws by congress will be more than ample evidence that the United States as a whole does not condone such a violation of democratic rights. It will help convince the world that most of us do believe in our civil rights. And it will go far to prevent more embarrassing, shameful crimes as the brutal murder of Willie Earle. —W. S.

No More Beach

From South building comes word that the University has decided to sow grass seed in the lower-quadrangle court and let nature take its course—behind a stretched-wire enclosure. Now we ask you, "What is to become of the 'beach'?"

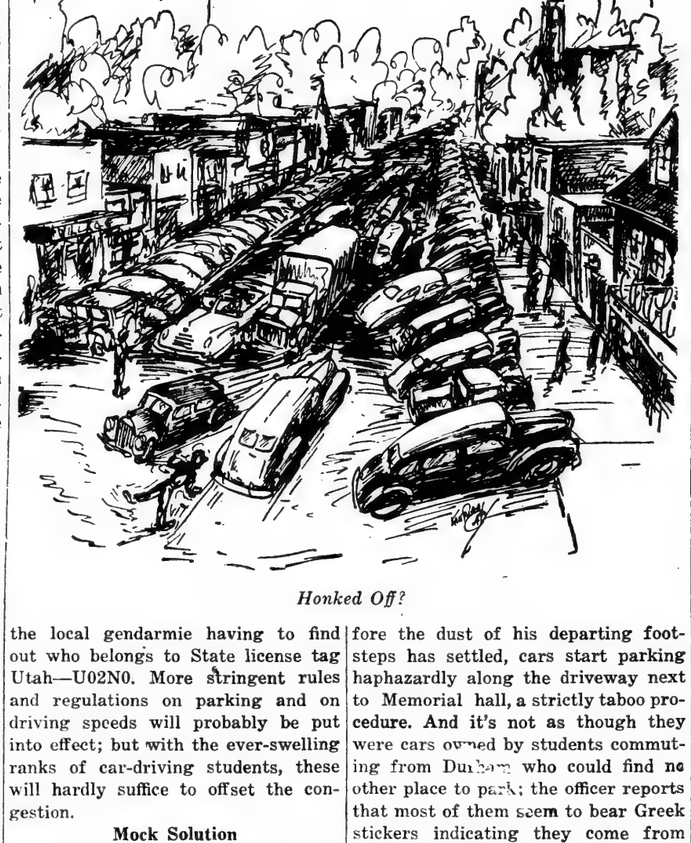
Sunbathers galore have been encamped on the lower-quadrangle court, which has been aptly named the "beach", since the first signs of spring. At almost any hour of the morning or afternoon, weather permitting, you can see the prostrate bodies of lower-quad residents basking in the sun.

Sun lovers will have to find new headquarters and establish a new "beach" if they wish to continue their basking.

Registration, More Automobile Space, Stringent Rules Are Being Considered as Remedies of Parking Situation

By Dave Boak

As the DTH pointed out a while back and as any unwary pedestrian will quickly discover, the traffic situation has become critical in our overloaded little town. Cars whip past the "Y" court in such numbers during between-class rushes that coeds observe their only moments of silence from dawn to dusk while concentrating on crossing Cameron avenue.



Parking or unparking in any of the inadequate areas allotted reminds one most of those state fair dodgem outfits. (You know, where enjoyment gained is directly proportional to the number of other little cars you can hit with your little car.) And leave it be a warning to lower quad car owners that rare are the cars with fenders intact if they are left parked on both sides of the street there. It's a question of there not being quite enough room.

Look Twice

If anything, it's worse down town. Within a hundred yards of any corner, you have to look twice to see whether the cars ahead are waiting for a light or are merely double parking while she tries on "that cute dress." And by the time you find a parking place, you wish you had walked—and it might be better to walk at that.

The Administration, realizing that the problem will soon get out of hand, is beginning to investigate causes and effects. The Traffic committee has received an expert's report on the situation and is drawing up rules, regulations, resolutions, and what-have-you for the consideration of "those men," the Board of Trustees. They figure they can rearrange the layout of the big space behind Memorial hall so it can accommodate another long row of cars; better marking of other parking areas will help too. Incidentally, a tip to those students who live so far out that they must drive in, the parking space behind Graham Memorial is not fully used.

Since April 5, you may remember, the campus has been under the jurisdiction of the State of North Carolina; so with the State Legislature behind it, the administration can wield a pretty big and dogmatic stick to lessen congestion. Despite the mighty howl which will inevitably arise, some form of student car registration may be put into effect so that rules passed can be enforced without the local gendarmie having to find out who belongs to State license tag Utah—U02N0. More stringent rules and regulations on parking and on driving speeds will probably be put into effect; but with the ever-swelling ranks of car-driving students, these will hardly suffice to offset the congestion.

Honked Off?

Mock Solution

Well, they can pass all the rules they want to, but if anything more than a hollow mockery of a solution is to be arrived at, it's up to those of us who own cars to use them with more discretion. The policeman you see standing near the "Y" each morning has been taking pretty careful mental notes on automotive trends.

". . .and then there's the guy, he says, "who every day at 10 o'clock takes his car from its parking place near Old East, drives it a few hundred yards to the big space behind Memorial hall, then walks back up to his class in psych building.

And people come barrelling down Cameron until they see him, then slow down to the prescribed fifteen per until out of whistle range. While he stands there, people drive in and park in "an orderly manner"; but before the dust of his departing footsteps has settled, cars start parking haphazardly along the driveway next to Memorial hall, a strictly taboo procedure. And it's not as though they were cars owned by students commuting from Durham who could find no other place to park; the officer reports that most of them seem to bear Greek stickers indicating they come from place no more remote than fraternity court.

All this is not to imply that anytime someone wants to use his car, either to go up on campus or down town, he must drive with a guilt complex unless he's got a very legitimate laundry bundle or something with him. But during class breaks, particularly in mid-morning, the problem would be cut in half if a little of yo olde "is this trip necessary?" attitude were applied. The Townspeople seem to have a pretty legitimate gripe too. Housewives have a habit of wanting to get their groceries and things in the morning; their tax-paying husbands are apt to wax a little bitter if sweetie pie hasn't brought home the bacon because she got lost in the crush of student automobiles parked down town while their pilots indulged in the morning coke.

If we who drive cars use a little more discretion, consideration, and leg power, we can by restricting ourselves a little, prevent much more stringent restriction in the near future; and we can make this campus a safer and less confused place. A word in parting to the pedestrians: they are not wholly exempt. About two in five (makes 2000) cross the street with the gay yet complacent abandon of a sacred cow on Chowringee avenue, Calcutta, thus engendering snarls in traffic and from drivers, and complicating the situation just that much more.

Independence of Indonesian Nations Is Now Seen as Accomplished Fact

By John Bristow
President of International Relations Club

Imperialism is dead in Indonesia. The rule of the Tuan Besar (big white master) ended on March 19, 1942 when Java fell to the Japanese.

Contrary to American public opinion the Nationalist government of Indonesia is not striving now for minimum recognition. The Indonesians already have a large measure of sovereignty. They got it by simply taking it. They now are trying to prevent their newly-won rights from being whittled down by the returning Dutch Colonial forces.

By the terms of the agreement between the Nationalist forces and the Dutch government, which was finally ratified March 25, 1947, the Republic of Indonesia was granted de facto authority over Java, Madura and Sumatra.

Many Dutch conservative die-hards at home, especially the Army and Navy, do not like this agreement. It will mean ending forever the incomes of 15 to 25 percent of the Dutch people, which came to the mother country from her large investments in the islands before the war.

Die-Hard Attitude

One result of this die-hard attitude on the part of the Dutch Navy has been the interference with Indonesian trade. Indonesian vessels have been sunk on sight; Chinese vessels have been interfered with; even British ships have been nudged out of port before they could unload cargoes.

Despite these interferences and the huge problems facing the new government, the Nationalists are determined to end the old order, by which Indonesians were employed at starvation wages—in most cases less than $50 per year—while the profits were drained off into the pockets of absentee share-holders in Holland.

In their struggle to maintain their government, the Indonesians have turned to India. This habit of looking to India dates back to the thousand year period up to about 1800 A.D. when the civilized parts of Indonesia were colonies of Hindu India. Everyday Indonesian life still retains customs and institutions dating from that occupation.

The arrival of Indian troops with the British forces in September, 1945 was the first contact between the two civilizations in modern times.

Mutual sympathy was immediate and spontaneous. Indian troops fraternized with the local population, like blood brothers, sported the "Mareduka" (freedom) colors, and openly sympathized with the cause of the Republic.

Rice Agreement

The most important expression of this rediscovered sense of kinship was the rice agreement of last July, under which 350,000 tons of rice are being supplied by the Republic of Indonesia in return for textiles and other consumer goods. The treaty has had a significance far above its immediate object.

When K. L. Punjabi, food secretary to the government of India, arrived to negotiate the rice treaty (which was opposed by the Dutch government) he was greeted during his tour of the rice-producing areas of Java as the symbol of Indian nationalism.

By inviting the representatives of all nationalist parties and governments in Asia to a Pan-Asian Congress at Delhi in March, Indian leader Pandit Nehru has shown that India intends to celebrate her majority by assuming the vacant leadership of all the new nationalist states on her doorstep in the far east.

Whether the European states like it or not, independence for their former colonies is an accomplished fact. In solving their seemingly insuperable problems, Indonesia stands together with the other nationalist states of south east Asia in holding off her former overlords.

Phi Kaps Top Roaches, 4-1, To Gain Campus Softball Title

Jones Pitches Two-Hit Game

Beta, Independents Horseshoe Victors

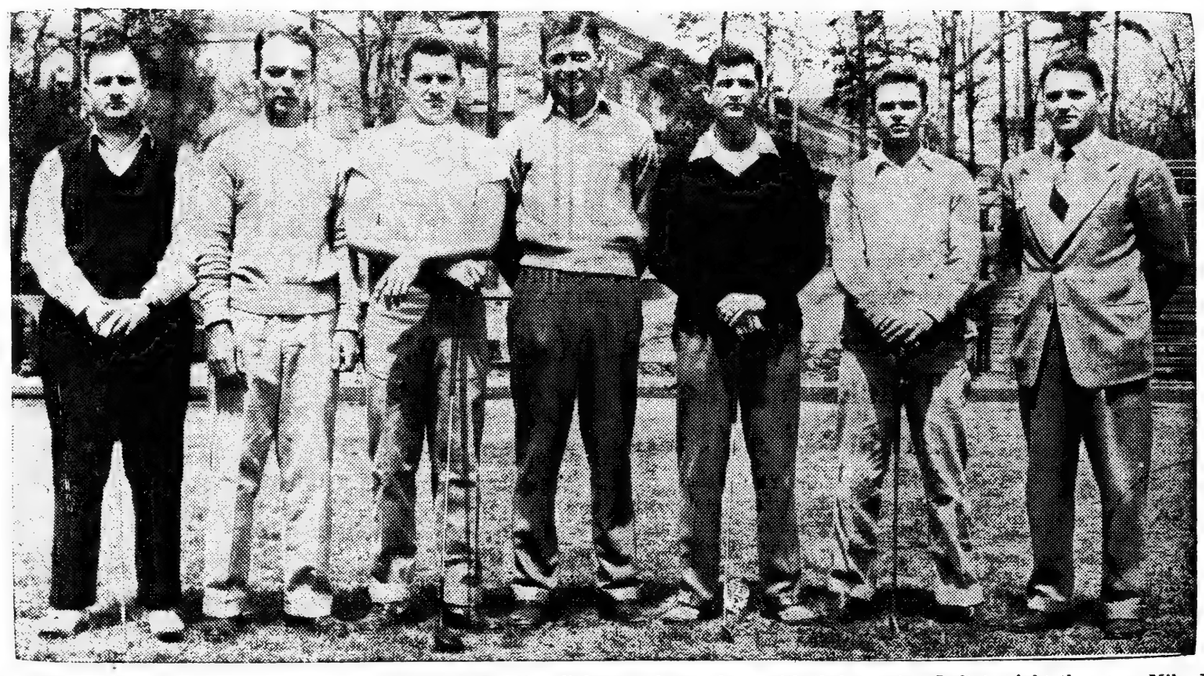
By Gil McLeod

Phi Kappa Sigma's mural nine showed true championship form yesterday afternoon when it won the campus softball crown by stopping the Roaches, 4-1.

Tony Jones, whose two-hit pitching last Tuesday gave the Phi Kaps the fraternity crown, made a repeat performance in yesterday's contest when he and his teammates made the Roaches' sluggers look ineffective for the first time this season.

The Phi Kaps scored three of their four runs in the first inning when they lined out four safeties off the slants of Jim Godwin. After Bubba Austin had won a free trip to first, Don Ward beat out a bunt and Bud Stanbach followed with a single to score Austin from second.

Johnny Richardson then received a walk, and Don English came up next to belt out a line single scoring Stanbach and Ward. The other Phi Kap score came in the third inning when Stanbach tripled and English singled into center field.



The Roaches scored their single tally in the fourth when big Max Spellman caught one of Jones' floaters on the nose and sent it flying into left field for a home run.

In winning the campus softball crown, the Phi Kaps went through both the regular season and tourney play undefeated. Besides having several dependable hitters, they easily have the outstanding infield combination to grace the local diamonds this year.

Meanwhile, the horseshoe champs in both the fraternity and dormitory division were being decided in the pits beside Woollen gym, with the Independents and the Dekes grabbing the honors. The finals will be played the first of next week.

Two Tilts Left For Local Nine

Tar Heels Currently Occupy Loop Cellar

The prospect of having to win both remaining tilts with the league-leading N. C. State nine in order to escape the Big Four celler faced the Carolina baseballers yesterday as they went through a short drill on Emerson field.

A look at the standings shows the Tar Heels currently acting as the doormat to the other three teams. Two wins for Carolina will give the locals undisputed possession of third place while a split will result in a dead-lock for the position with Wake Forest.

A pair of victories for the Techmen will give the West Raleigh crew its second straight Big Four crown. In the event that State drops both games, Duke will back into the title, having completed its slate last week.

Looking ahead to tomorrow's contest, Coach Walter Rabb opined that either Vinnie DiLorenzo, who lost Wednesday's overtime clash, or Monk Whiteheart will receive the starting nod. "I hope Vinnie will be able to work again," he stated. "We have a better chance with a southpaw."

Rabb also emphasized that the team played well Wednesday, despite suffering the fifth loss in a row. Bo Hackney was especially outstanding in the fray, collecting three hits and playing a brilliant game afield.

'Mr. Rebound' Paxton Elected Captain Of 1947-48 Tar Heel Basketball Team

Dillon Registers 17, Nearman 16 to Lead Point-Getters in Concluding Spring Drill

By Irwin Smallwood

Ham-handed Bob Paxton, Mr. Rebound of the White Phantom basketball team for the past three seasons, was named captain of the 1947-48 Carolina cage team yesterday afternoon in balloting which took place at the conclusion of the final scrimmage of the spring practice period.

Coach Tom Scott, who will begin his second year as prexy of Carolina basketball next season, sent his spring squad through a final game-like scrimmage yesterday afternoon, revamping the lineups twice in an effort to get a good look at several combinations. In both games the Whites were victorious, but the members of the teams were interchanged between the contests.

Nearman High

In the first game, Nemo Nearman paced the Whites to a 21-14 victory with 10 points, with Paxton leading the way in his usual brand of driving floor play. Taylor Thorne, Roger Scholbe, Dick Hartley and Johnny Dillon teamed to register the Red team's buckets.

The second half of the afternoon's scrimmage activity, which saw two entirely different aggregates playing together, turned into a much closer and interesting fray, and this time it was Dillon, with his hook shot of old pacing the way. Dillon, who failed to fit into the Scott system all last season, appeared on the road to recovery as far as Carolina basketball was concerned. He dropped in seven field goals to score 14 of the victorious White team's 34 points, with Paxton adding six, Coy Carson six, Dick Hartley six and Thorne two.

For the Blues in the second game, it was Art Weiner with six, Nearman with six, Sandy Foft with six, Kokey Kohler with four, Fred Swartzburg with four, King Cole with two and Marx Nathan with two that provided the points. That final score was 34-30 in favor of the Whites.

Dillon was overall high man for the afternoon with 17 points, but Nearman was right behind with 16. Hartley had 10, Carson nine and Paxton eight.

Yesterday's activity officially ended spring basketball work, and Coach Scott termed the undertaking as very successful. The two and a half weeks were spent improving the team in general fundamentals, passing and shooting.

Missing from the drills were White, Hamilton and Jim Hayworth, a trio of Phants who will be missed no little with the ushering in of the new season next winter.

Mural All-Star Nine Opposes ECTC Today

Carolina's All-star softball nine will see action again this afternoon when it will play a double header against the Eastern Carolina Teachers' college outfit, starting at 3 o'clock on diamond seven of the Navy field.

Handling the mound duties for the locals will be Tony Jones, who paced the Phi Kaps to their campus softball crown yesterday afternoon.

The Tar Heels and ECTC have played twice previously this season, with each winning a single contest.

Acting as coach for the Tar Heels will be Carolina's swimming tutor, Dick Jamerson.

Running Wild....

Tracksters Close Season With Undefeated Record

By Morty Schaap

The Tar Heel tracksters returned to Chapel Hill yesterday in high spirits after their win over the Cavaliers of Virginia, up in Charlottesville on Wednesday afternoon, as the win gave them a clean sweep in dual competition for the year.

However it was no new feeling for the distance men as they had swept through the rigorous hill and dale season last fall without tasting defeat.

Two possible tests lay ahead for the men of Fetzer and Ranson with the IC4A competition scheduled for Franklin field in Philadelphia on May 30 and 31, and the NCAA championship at Salt Lake City, Utah, in the middle of June.

As yet no definite plans have been made for men to be sent to these stellar meets but definite word is expected any day.

The win against Virginia had a sad note however, as Big Snipe Seligman lost his undefeated skein in the discus when he was beaten by Bill McBrackney. Billy Joyner, freshman high jumper, also had a rough break when he sprained his ankle on his second jump and was forced to spend the rest of the afternoon in the company of the team manager at the Virginia hospital. However, the ankle is much improved and he will be ready to go when the next season rolls around.

Virginia also managed to break up the Carolina two mile domination when George Trachsel came in on Jack Milne's heels for second place, besting the other two Tar Heels by a good margin. It was the first dual meet of the year that the opposition has been able to score a point in that particular event.

With the covers of the record book being closed for dual competition in the track sports the boys brought in a total of ten straight victories, six in cross country and four in track, to give them the best athletic record for the school year.

"Everybody is invited," Boody Overcash, in charge of program arrangements for the Y said. "All you need is a date. Tickets may be picked up at the Information desk in the "Y" building."

Informal dancing will be the feature of the evening, and soft drinks, weiners, and other refreshments will be available.

University Students To Travel to Europe

University students Lester N. Hill and James N. Waldron will "vacation" in Europe this summer, when they make a two month cruise with U. S. Naval Academy midshipmen as part of the Navy department's summer training program. The European cruisers will make stops in Sweden, Denmark, Cuba, and will call at five ports in England.

Officials at the Naval armory also said that some 40 freshmen members of the NROTC unit here would make the eight-week cruise through the Caribbean, while 16 contract juniors will board the carrier Leyte for a three-week trip to Argentia, Newfoundland.

Scholarships Offered To China Theatre Vets

Two cultural service scholarships are now available to American veterans who served in the China theatre during World War II according to an announcement made by the China Institute of America.

Amounting to $1,500 a year, the stipends are open to veterans who are college students or graduates, and are pursuing courses on Chinese culture. Information may be obtained by writing the China Institute of America, 125 E. 65th St., New York, N. Y.

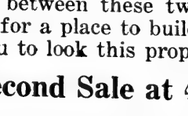
Chairman Rogers Expects GI Subsistence Increase

"Veterans in colleges soon may find themselves with a bigger expense account", says a United Press dispatch from Washington.

This statement was prompted by a statement from Chairman Edith N. Rogers of the House Veterans Affairs committee that her group will approve a bill increasing subsistence allowances for ex-GI's attending school.



Under the bill, which has been in subcommittee for the last several months, allowances for single veterans will be raised from $65 to $75 monthly and from $90 $100 for married veterans, plus $15 for each child.

The increase has been largely advocated and pushed by the American Veterans committee. Aiding in the drive on this campus has been the Chapel Hill chapter of AVC under President Ben Rouzie and the University Veterans association of President Hugh Wells.

N.C. Governor Blasts Action Of Mask Mob

Issues Statement On Jackson Case

Raleigh, May 23—(UP)—Governor Cherry has issued a strong statement of denunciation of the mob action at Jackson where masked white men broke in the county jail and seized Buddy Bush, young negro prisoner.

Cherry said, "North Carolina will not tolerate lynchings and mob violence."

The governor stated that he had ordered the state bureau of investigation to spare no effort in bringing the mobsters to justice.

Meanwhile, authorities have guessed that Bush was lynched and that his body is floating somewhere in the Roanoke river.

John L. Lewis to Meet With Production Heads

Washington, May 23—(UP)—Mine Union Chief John L. Lewis and the Southern Coal Producers association will meet next Wednesday to begin separate contract negotiations. The Southerners refused to join in industry-wide talks already underway.

Conference Committee Agrees on Labor Bill

Washington, May 23—(UP)—A Senate-House conference has agreed that emergency labor legislation is needed before July 1 in the event of a coal strike at that time. Some parts of the proposed bills as they now stand would become effective too late to cope with such a walkout.

Refugee Vessel Seized By British Destroyers

Jerusalem, May 23—(UP)—Two British destroyers have intercepted a refugee ship carrying about 1,500 uncertified Jews to Palestine. The British say they boarded the vessel without opposition and are escorting it to Haifa.

French Premier Fears Underground Activity

Paris, May 23—(UP)—Premier Ramadier of France charges that left and right wing underground movements are trying to undermine the French republic. He told the French assembly that they are attempting to exploit social unrest.

Trial of Andrew May Continues in Capital

Washington, May 23—(UP)—Former Congressman Andrew May has admitted under cross examination that he paid personal bills with a $1,800 check supposedly given him for operation of the Cumberland Lumber company. The former Kentucky Congressman is being tried on charges that he accepted $53,000 in bribes for wartime services to the Garsson munitions combine.

Student Union Cancels Concert by 'Serenaders'

The lawn concert by the Graham Memorial "Dream Serenaders" under the direction of Ned Reap, originally scheduled to follow the Betty Warren Jones art exhibition from 3 until 5 o'clock on tomorrow afternoon, has been cancelled, according to Martha Rice, director of the student union.

DELTA SIG DANCE

Delta Sigma Pi, international commerce fraternity, will give a dance in the Carolina inn tonight honoring new members. The Bull City Nighthawks will play for the affair.

Faculty Club Requests Razing Of Wooden Barracks Building

At a meeting of the Faculty club it was resolved that the two-story wooden barracks structure in back of New East be razed.

One of the many of temporary buildings being erected about the campus this year, the clapboard shack has been objected to by the professors "because of its bad appearance."

The resolution has been presented to the administration, but what South building officialdom will do about it still remains a moot question.

Biggest bone of contention is what FPHA authorities in Atlanta will say about the plan. The building was part of 2 emergency structures given to the University to be used as temporary classroom space.

Yackety Yacks to Be Issued Tuesday in Graham Memorial

Lady Macbeth (played by Marion Fitz-Simons) in the sleep-walking scene from the Carolina Playmakers' outdoor production of "Macbeth" now playing in the Forest Theatre, 8:30, through tomorrow evening.

Students Must Bring Identification Cards

By Bookie Jabine

Gene Johnstone, editor of this years' white-bound Yackety Yack, announced yesterday that a limited supply of books will arrive Tuesday and distribution will begin that afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Baby lounge of Graham Memorial.

Since the shipment is expected to number only 2,000, Editor Johnstone requested that all students who will be in summer school this year not pick up their annuals Tuesday. Additional books will arrive the following week.

"All students must bring their identification cards in order to secure their Yack," Johnstone stated.

He further emphasized, 'No person may pick up a Yack for any other student."

The 1946-47 Yackety Yack is dedicated to the gridiron Tar Heels who carried the football fortunes of the University from Baltimore to New Orleans. Johnstone explained that the editors felt that "this year we could dedicate our work to a group representing the return of normalcy at the University."

Following custom, two pages of the book are given to outstanding professors here. Johnstone indicated that they were chosen because of their "popularity among the students."

For the first time since 1942, individual pictures of seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen have been published.

Aside from this energetic undertaking, twelve pages are filled with a photographic review of important campus functions during the school year.

Marshall to Be Fishery Head

Dr. Nelson Marshall, associate professor in the Zoology department, has been appointed Director of the Virginia Fisheries laboratory, sponsored jointly by the College of William and Mary and the Commission of Fisheries in Virginia. He will assume his new duties next month.

The Laboratory, which carries on fisheries research and educational activities, is located with a field laboratory at Yorktown and has offices on the campus at William and Mary.

Dr. Marshall, as director, will have the rank of full professor on the faculty of the college, and will teach several courses in marine biological sciences.

Dr. Marshall received his B. S. degree at Rollins college, his M. S. at Ohio State and his Ph.D. at the University of Florida. From 1941 to 1944 he was assistant professor at the University of Connecticut and during the summers of 1943 and 1944 he was a research fellow at the Woods Hole Oceanographic institution. In 1945-46 he was fisheries biologist at the University of Miami Marine laboratory.

At a recent meeting of the North Carolina Academy of Science, Dr. Marshall presented two papers on work being done here at the University.

Absent Lawmakers Will Name Proxies For Summer Term

At Thursday evening's session of the Student Legislature, it was decided that lawmakers who do not expect to attend summer school will appoint proxies to serve in the assembly.

Introduced by Charlie Long, the bill provides that if legislators do not name their own substitutes, the Speaker will.

This will mark the first time since last summer that the use of proxies has been legal in the lawmaking body.

To Face Firing Line

Legislature Will Consider Presidential Appointments

By Ed Joyner

Appointments to six boards and committees submitted by student body President Tom Eller to the first meeting of the new Student Legislature Thursday night will be acted upon in a special meeting of the assembly early next week. The special session has been tentatively set for Tuesday evening.

"I don't expect to have opposition to more than two or three of the appointments," Eller said yesterday. "I have tried to represent all parties adequately on the committees, and it has been my policy not to name to a committee any student who is already overworked."

Ten-Man Slate

The ten-man slate of the Orientation and Indoctrination committees submitted to the Legislature by Eller contained the names of John Clampitt, Chairman; Jess Dedmond, Harry Snowden, Marriote Stewart, Marvin Hogan, Walt Arnold, Mimi Massey, Caroline Warren, Emile Saleeby, and Bob Dulin.

Five other unofficial members to this committee—who will not have to be confirmed by the Legislature—are Bill Patterson, Bianton Miller, George Kenyon, Charlie Berman, Larry Berry, Sara Buchanan, and Fran Golden.

Shropshire Heads Elections

Don Shropshire was named by Eller to head the elections board. Although absent from school at present due to illness, Shropshire will return next fall and assume his duties. Al Winn will serve as acting chairman until Shropshire's return.

Besides Shropshire and Winn, the Elections board will consist of B. J. Strong, W. B. O'Neal, John York, Bill Feuss, Chick Slack, Bill Sexton, Ralph Sherrill, and Pete Beaudary.

To the Student Audit board Eller named Monroe Landreth as chairman, with Dick Culberson, Jack Swanner, Ralph Hodges, and Roy Moose.

Daniels Automatically

On the Budget committee Sam Daniels will automatically serve as chairman under the Constitutional provision that the Secretary-Treasurer of the student body shall also be chairman of the Budget committee. Along with Daniels on the committee will be Jim Vogler, John Surratt, Wayne Johnson, Jim Lilly, Martha Whitaker, Mary Swann, Charles Britt, Jim Deane, Tom Smith, and Chuck Barton.

Last committee appointments facing consideration by the Legislature are those to the Student Entertainment committee. This has John Martin as chairman and is made up of Coline Smith, Billy Carmichael, and Blanton Miller.

Following his appointments Eller stated, "If any member of the student body or faculty has serious opposition to any of the appointments submitted, he should make this known to a member of the legislature who will be able to bring it out at the meeting of the group Tuesday, at which time the appointments are to be confirmed."

Graduates May Obtain Grades During Commencement Period

Students who expect to receive degrees on June 9 may learn their spring quarter grades as soon as the instructors have reported them to the Central Records office by inquiring at 302 South building between the hours of 9 to 12:30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m. during the examination and Commencement week.

Students receiving academic degrees are again reminded that they will receive blank dummy diplomas at the Commencement exercises and the sheepskin diploma will be mailed to them as soon as it is received. However, degree candidates now enrolled in school must be present at Commencement unless excused by their Dean.

Candidates should be certain that all academic requirements have been met, required courses passed, and incompletes, and E's all removed.

Alumni Files Are UNC 'Family Bible'

Full Address List Maintained at Inn

Files of the Alumni Office, located in the Carolina Inn, may well be called the "family Bible" record about alumni of the University of North Carolina.

In the Alumni Office are kept address lists, class lists, biographical folders and other data about former students of Chapel Hill. The lists afford a connection link between the University and its alumni. Every former student—whether graduated or not—has his or her name and address on an adressograph mailing stencil maintained in the Office. The list is frequently used for purpose of mailings, meetings, reunions, and the like.

Letters to 15 Classes

Last week, for instance, letters were mailed from Chapel Hill to members of 15 classes, giving information about plans for reunions at Commencement, June 7, 8 and 9; the reunion classes are Old Students club, (members of classes graduated more than 50 years, '97, '03, '04, '05, '06, '22, '23, '24, '25, '37, '41, '42, '43, '44, and '46.

Another use of the Alumni Office mailing list is in connection with alumni priority in ordering football tickets for next fall's games. This week the Athletic Association is mailing sets of "alumni priority" order forms to 33,950 alumni as that many alumni have known addresses on file in the Office.

Receive Review

Dues-paying members of the Alumni Association receive as part of their membership benefits copies of "The Alumni Review" issued as a monthly magazine ten times a year and weekly during the fall as special reports of the varsity football games. The "alumni priority" order forms have been addressed to all alumni, not just those who are dues-paying members of the Association, on the other hand the 'Alumni Review' is mailed to those who pay dues.

Annual dues are three dollars, however, for members of the present senior class dues are set at one dollar as a special inducement to new alumni during their first post-college year. Both graduates and those who do not receive degrees are eligible for membership.

Veterans Warned About Insurance Transfer Plans

Veterans in school under the Servicemen's Readjustment act (G. I. Bill) who plan to transfer to another out-of-state school at the end of this semester should make sure their future National Service Life Insurance payments are mailed to the proper Veterans Administration insurance office, VA said.

If an ex-G. I. moves to another section of the country, his insurance records will be transferred to the VA branch office having jurisdiction over his new place of residence. Before he moves, he should inform the present VA branch insurance office of his change of address, listing both his old and new address and including his policy number and full name.

A veteran can learn the location of the VA branch office serving the area to which he intends to move from the nearest VA office.

Group to Sponsor Smith Scholarship In Commerce School

The Marvin B. Smith, Jr., Memorial scholarship, valued at $350 a year for four years, will be awarded again this year to a North Carolina high school student entering the University commerce school next fall, it was announced today.

Applications have already been received by the University Scholarship committee and the winner will be announced soon after June 1.

The Smith Scholarship was established at the University by Mr. and Mrs. Marvin B. Smith, Sr., of Burlington, in memory of their son, who was graduated in the class of '26 and who had made a fine reputation as a business leader. He was president of the Library Hosiery Mills at the time of his death in 1943.

The first award was made last spring to Hugh McArver of Gastonia. The first provision was made for a four-year scholarship of $300 a year to the deserving high school student who planned to educate himself for a business career. This year Mr. and Mrs. Smith raised the scholarship to $350 a year.

The award is based on "1. ability, as indicated by a good scholastic record which ranks the winner in the upper fourth of his class; 2. character, as attested by recommendations of at least two citizens of standing in his community, and 3. need, as demonstrated by the necessity of the student having to earn part of the cost of his education."

New Coed Senators Are Indoctrinated

At a recent meeting of the Coed Senate Barbara Cashion, newly elected Speaker welcomed the following new members:

Chee Bryson, Elaine Patton, Joyce Carraway, Mary Locke Craig, Katie Guion, Joyce Jones, Bootsie McWilliams, Mary Murphy, Bettie Robinson, Julia Ross, Emily Von Borries, Lucy Hill Baxter, Estelle Boyce, Helen Compton, K. D. Durham, Liz Hazlett, Venitah Sanders, and Bonnie Thrash. All were elected by popular Coed vote unsupported by any political party.

Following a speech by Sybil Goerch Powe, outgoing Speaker of the Senate, the following officers were elected: Speaker Pro-tem, Katie Guion; Secretary, Sue Everett; Treasurer, Doris Harrill. Elaine Patton was appointed publicity chairman.

Grumman Goes Home After Hospital Stay

Russell M. Grumman, head of the University's Extension division, who suffered a severe concussion in an automobile accident in Virginia May 9, has returned to his home here from a Fredericksburg hospital.

"He seems to be recuperating nicely," said Charles Milner, who is directing the Division's activities in Grumman's absence, "But he isn't able to receive many visitors yet, and we don't know when he will be able to return to his post.'

Esthetic Sense

The esthetic sense of the human race is a peculiar thing. It is hard, and in some cases almost impossible, to visualize the appearance and esthetic beauty of a structure until it begins growing on its location.

So it is with one of the new temporary, government-donated structures that is being slapped together behind New East. According to an article in yesterday's Chapel Hill Weekly, the faculty grounds committee is quite concerned with the appearance the building is giving to the campus and would like to move it. It all boils down to two alternatives. If there is a definite need for the building in the locality it is being placed then continue with the construction. The time for selecting the cite for a building is before it is assembled and not after it is nearly constructed.

No matter where the buildings are placed they are not in keeping with the tone of the campus and the present location of the New East annex is not any more aggravating to the eye than it would be on another part of the campus.

The University accepted the gift, and the government has gone to much expense in moving the structures from Tennessee and assembling them here for our use. It would be a very different situation if the buildings were placed on wheels and could be moved around at will. A building is an anchored object and it is an expensive and difficult process to move them. The government has more than upheld their part of the bargain, it seems that the least the University could do would be to live up to its past decision.

Seats of Learning

This past week the Technician at State college published a special edition and devoted its entirety to the college centers throughout the state. Undoubtly the 12 centers that have been established in strategic localities have proved their merits and have more than compensated for their expense.

The educational centers were brought into existence out of necessity. Last fall all of the 41 institutions in the state were enrolled to the hilt and some method had to be devised for the overflow that sought admission. The 12 college centers was the resulting plan.

Some of the facts concerning the centers' progress are not surprising to us. The grades of the students attending the centers compare quite favorably with those of students here at the University. Classes are quite small and much attention can be given to individual students.

The organizers and directors of the college center program solved a perplexing problem—that of educating the "overflow" in a time of crowded classroms, and living and eating conditions.

Summer Service Project

Summertime will soon be here and with it will begin the several summer service projects sponsored by many organizations. The projects range from holding conferences to assisting in San Antonio, in combatting health problems. At the Washington Student Citizenship seminar, students from the nation over will be placed in governmental offices to work and observe their government in action.

Several institutes will be sponsored in this state for conference in International relations and in Christian teachings.

The summertime institutes have gained wide popularity in the last few years, and have greatly aided students in many fields.

Students interested in the fields of international relations and government will find a golden opportunity offered them during the summer.

This Year's Yackety Yack Termed Best Yet Published

By Paul Rothman

In the years to come, the members of the class of '47 will proudly haul out their Yackety Yacks. They'll have a right to do so, for it is the best edition thus far printed. After enough years, our graduating class might have a hard time lifting their year books, though, for it is much larger and contains more material than previous editions.

When we test the strength of our arms by seeing how many times we can press our annuals, we might look at the binding, too, because it is well bound in a plain, but effective, cover. The footprint in the blob of tar is an indication of the theme around which the edition is built.

Print Feet

Most of the sections of the Yack are covered with footprints which tell the stories of the various phases of campus activity. The utilization of the footprints lends some personality to the edition—which is quite a feat for the type of publication.

The freshman and sophomore classes will be glad to note that this year they have individual pictures entered. All students will probably like the breaks between classes provided by campus scenes that are humorous and familiar and the novel introductions used for the class and the extra-curricular activities sections.

Happy Groups

Another group that will probably be happy with this year's edition is the Public Health school, for this is the first time that they have been in the year book.

When looking through the campus scenes, it can be noticed that they are not dominated by any particular groups, but that they represent what they should—all students on the campus. We won't have to rack our brains attempting to place the campus activities, either, for they are listed by the months of the year.

All in all, the members of each class and campus organization should be well satisfied when they pick up their copies. Gene Johnstone and the other members of the Yackety Yack staff should rightfully feel proud of the job that they have done.

Washington, May 23—(UP)—Republican Senator Morse of Washington has opposed any income tax cut this year. But Republican leaders are confident of putting through the program without his support.

POPPY SALE TODAY

The annual sale of poppies for the benefit of crippled war veterans and their families will be held today by the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion. The little red paper flowers, made by hospitalized veterans, will be sold in the business section by members of the auxiliary.

Next Wednesday will be the annual University Awards night, with several sports honors to be given in accordance with perennial policy. Names of the winners will not be announced in advance of the program.

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Question

Do you think there should be some form of registration for students' automobiles as a possible means of easing the present congestion?

Answers

Everyone who has a car should use his common sense, good judgment, and intelligence in the present difficult situation. If it is necessary to enforce safety for the good of one and all, there should be some form of registration as an aid in carrying out full enforcement.—T. Crittenden, Chapel Hill.

Yes, I think an effective registration of students' automobiles, in order to check against the needless use of parking space by those living near the campus is a fair and necessary solution to parking congestion.—Charles Foley, Charlotte.

I definitely think that there should be some means by which the situation can be alleviated. It would not only help the pedestrians but the drivers as well. Everyone would be able to get to class easier and faster. In this way everyone would profit.—Howard Wainer, Winston-Salem.

Yes, I think there should be some form of registration. Such a move would alleviate the problem some, but more and better means of parking should also be provided.—Fred Martin, Greenwood, S. C.

No, it would be a good idea if there were enough cops to enforce traffic and parking regulations, but without the police registration wouldn't help any.—O. S. Waldrop, Kinston.

House Finance Group Cuts New Farm Fund

Washington, May 23—(UP)—The House Appropriations committee has voted to cut the Agriculture department's budget for the new fiscal year by 32 per cent, or nearly $383,500,000. The report says more farm aid functions should be left up to states and communities.

PI PHI CEREMONY

The Pi Beta Phi senior farewell ceremony originally set to be held at the home of Mrs. Hugo Giduz next Wednesday evening, has been shifted to the chapter house at 4:15 in the afternoon it was announced, due to the awards night being held during the evening. All old Pi Phis, whether members of the Club or not are invited to attend the ceremonies, which will be over by 5:15.

The Romans considered the month of May unlucky for marriages because the festival of the unhappy dead was celebrated at that time.

WRITE AWAY

Palmer Not to Blame

Dear Editor:

H. C. Turnage's letter in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel suggested criticism of Dotson Palmer, Senior Class President, in selecting seniors who were asked by the Alumni Office to meet Tuesday afternoon to talk about the Class of 1947 as an alumni class.

The disproportion of representatives of dormitories and fraternities in attendance at the meeting was the responsibility of the Alumni Association. I had asked President Palmer to select the name of a representative of each dormitory and fraternity. The persons named were invited by the Alumni Office to meet yesterday afternoon. Some 30 or more were present.

These seniors were told about membership in the General Alumni Association and particularly how invitations might be distributed to seniors in the dormitories and fraternities. Those present agreed to take the names of their seniors and extend to them an invitation individually to join the Alumni Association at the special first-alumni-year rate of one dollar. (The usual membership fee is $3.00 annually.) Individual membership carries with it a subscription to The Alumni Review, monthly magazine.

The Alumni Association hopes that all seniors will join. For seniors who live in town or who happen not to be seen by the special canvassers, membership application forms may be secured by writing or calling by the Alumni Office in the Carolina Inn. There is no desire to exclude from any senior the privilege of joining the Alumni Association.

I hope that the Class of 1947 will organize as an alumni class, elect alumni class officers, and have them ready for installation at the time of the General Alumni Luncheon on June 9 during Commencement. The University needs the strength and support which an active alumni Class of 1947 can give it.

J. MARYON SAUNDERS,
Alumni Secretary

Exercising Right

Sir:

Exercising the right recently guaranteed by the United States Supreme Court of criticizing courts in newspapers, I wish to say that in two trials (April 22 and May 20) in Chapel Hill Recorder's Court I cannot understand the reasoning behind Judge Henry A. Whitfield's decisions, and that therefore the decisions seem to me to be incorrect.

In the trial of Martin Watkins, who, by admission of the prosecution witnesses, was provoked by vague and insulting words, and was struck first, Judge Whitfield found Mr. Watkins guilty of entering into an affray. He referred to the law which states that a person who leaves a safe place of haven and (I quote the Judge) "moves into the arena where the fight is going" is guilty of voluntarily entering the affray. He said that Mr. Watkins did exactly that. But Mr. Watkins did not do exactly that, for there was no fight going on outside the bus when Mr. Watkins left it. He himself stated that he left the bus to find out who spoke the provocative words and what they meant by them.

In the cases of Bayard Rustin and Igal Roodenko, members of the Fellowship of Reconciliation testing bus segregation laws which defy the Supreme Court ruling in the Irene Morgan interstate commerce case, Judge Whitfield found that although the defendants held tickets from Durham to Knoxville, Tennessee, they were not interstate passengers because they did not complete their trip to Knoxville and because they made stopovers of various lengths along the journey. I do not understand the Judge's reasoning. Who, by this logic, would be an interstate passenger?—apparently only one who had completed his trip and arrived in another state.

These men held interstate tickets. Do not interstate tickets entitle one to the provisions of the laws of interstate commerce? Their tickets were bought on April 12, 1947, and by the testimony of a representative of the bus company are good for 60 days; therefore they are still good and these two men, if they desired, could now continue on to Knoxville. Are they not, in effect, interstate passengers, now if they choose to continue their journey, even if they stop over in a town for a period of time? The defense read from legal precedents which established that a commodity moving in interstate commerce continued to be in interstate commerce despite delays and changes of hand.

Judge Whitfield pointed out that there was no evidence that the defendants proceeded from Chapel Hill to Greensboro by bus or that they intended to complete their trip to another state. One of the reasons they didn't might have been that they were arrested and taken off the bus; in effect, then, they were arrested for not being interstate passengers before they had the opportunity to become interstate passengers.

The case of Mr. Roodenko, a white man, was decided upon the same testimony which was given in the case of Mr. Rustin, a Negro, and yet Judge Whitfield ruled that the Negro pay only the costs but sentenced the white man to 30 days in jail. Because I do not understand why the Judge made these diverse sentences on the same charge I say in jest that it looks as if a man has been discriminated against because he is white. I deplore discrimination against anyone on account of his race, whatever it may be.

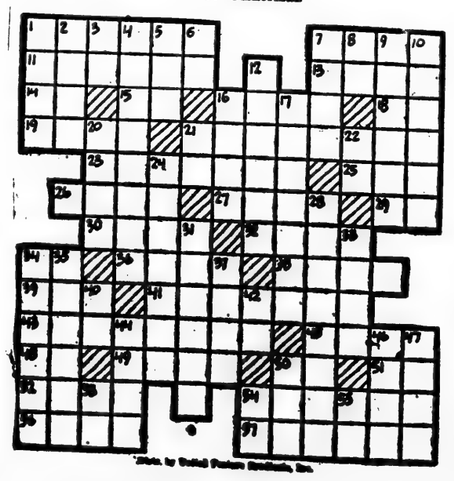
Watch the Sun

To All Sun Bathers:



Watch your color. According to two recent court decisions society becomes stricter in its regulation as your color darkens, and in inverse ratio lessens its protection. Albinos, according to this trend, have absolute protection under the law and may do just as they please at all times. To the contrary, well sun-tanned persons have little or no protection under the law, and their actions are closely regulated by the law. This is no complaint. The law is the law, the Judge is the Judge, and the Jury is the Jury—Allah be praised! With men that know their justice best it seems to be color, two to none. "No sah, I don't want none of that sun. People is just naturally over thoughtful about your legal rights when you happens to be a little sun-tanned."

Carolina Nine Faces N. C. State At Raleigh This Afternoon

Mural Softball Stars Split With ECTC, Taking Nightcap

Locals Triumph 2-1, After Losing, 5-3; Arniz, Pupa, Gibbons Star For Home Team

By Billy Carmichael

Carolina's mural softball all-stars repeated their performance of several weeks ago yesterday afternoon when they split a double-header with Eastern Carolina Teachers College, dropping the first game 5-3, then winning the night-cap, 2-1. The contests were played locally on Navy field.

The Tar Heels got off to a bad start in the first game, spotting the visitors a run in the second and another in the third. They came back to tally one of their own in the bottom of the fourth, but a three-run uprising in the sixth frame put the tilt on ice for the Greenville lads.

Pete Arniz, on the mound for the Carolinians in the opener, gave up a meager four hits, but received little support from his teammates who were busy committing five errors.

The locals got seven hits in the first contest, but were unable to garner more than three tallies.

In the second game, Arniz returned to the mound for the men of Coach Dick Jamerson in effort to salvage the other end of the twin bill—and that he did.

Tar Heels Score

He received a little support this time, with his teammates giving him a run to work with in the very first inning. P. A. Lee led off with a walk, and went all the way to third when Julian Smith was safe on an error at short. Lee scored on the next play as Ike Carr flied out to center and the Tar Heels led 1-0.

The Teachers got the tally back in the fourth, but the Carolina boys rallied to produce the winning run in the last of the sixth when Walt Pupa tripled and scored on Lem Gibbons' line drive to left field.

Pupa was the individual star for the home team, playing a stellar game at third, while Gibbons was performing well behind the plate.

Another fine performance was that of Pete Arniz, who allowed only nine hits in the fourteen innings he pitched during the afternoon.

The game ended the season for the mural stars. They won four games during the campaign while losing a like number. The line scores:

Lettermen Name Versatile Head In Len Szafaryn

When the dust had cleared and the ballots had been counted last Tuesday night Len Szafaryn had been elected new President of the Monogram club.

Len, a rising junior, from Ambridge, Pa., was the stellar right tackle of last year's fine Sugar Bowl football team. He has been Vice-President of the lettermen's organization for the past year.

Szafaryn won his first football letter in 1945 when he was only 17 years of age and last season when he captured his second monogram, he was one of the most dependable and hard-hitting lineman on the Tar Heel squad.

He is also a member of the Grail and has contributed a great deal to the success that the Monogramers have had this year. He succeeds Jim Camp, who steered the club through a very difficult year and brought the campus a stellar spring football game.

Besides being a football star, Szafaryn finds time to engage in Mural activities. He led his Everett dormitory team into the finals of the basketball play and also was a member of the winning horseshoe pitching team.

Feminine Athletes Receive Trophies at Annual Banquet

As a grand finale to women's sports for the school year a banquet was held by the Women's Athletic association at the Carolina Inn.

Pi Beta Phi sorority was presented with the all-sport trophy for being the outstanding women's organization in athletics for the past year at Carolina.

The Pi Phi's annexed the cup as a result of first place points in volley ball, basketball, and archery; they also placed second in spring archery and third place in swimming.

Blazers were awarded to Jean Driscoll, Judy Swain, Kath Rankin, Margaret Martin as the most outstanding senior women athletes.

Girls receiving monograms for scoring over 150 points were: Bill Lloyd 185, Katherine Rankin 160, and K. D. Durham 153.

Numerals were awarded to women scoring over 75 points, the recipients were: Butch Goodwin 138, Judy Swain 125, Jean Driscoll 113, Margaret Martin 105, Betsy Ann Barbee 100. Elizabeth Eadie 90, Janet Krinkley 81, Carolyn Driver 81, Fran Miller 80, Kit Coleman 80, and Nina Mosely 80.

Local Outfit Needs Victory To Pull Out of Loop Cellar

Club Out to Snap Five-Game Losing Streak; DiLorenzo, Johnson Set to Clash on Mound

By Bob Goldwater

Full of the old "do or die" spirit, Carolina's baseball crew will seek to pull out of the Big Four cellar this afternoon when the Tar Heels journey to Raleigh to oppose State's high-flying Wolfpack on the Devereux meadow diamond starting at 3 o'clock.

Having already dropped two tilts to the Engineers, the locals need both of the remaining games in order to climb into third place over the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest. A loss in one game will give the Tar Heels part share of the doormat position they held last year.

Vinnie DiLorenzo, who went 11 innings against State Wednesday before dropping a 5-4 decision, is Coach Walter Rabb's choice to handle the mound duties again today. The slim southpaw has become the workhorse of the pitching staff, having hurled in five of the last six contests. His Big Four record is 2-2.

DiLorenzo's probable opponent will be Ernie Johnson, the righthander who set the Tar Heels down with four hits in a 12-2 rout last week. The league's leading hurler, big Curt Ramsey, will also be available should Coach Vic Sorrell need him.

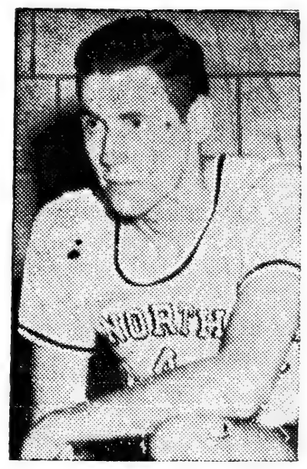
Infield Changes

One definite and another possible infield change will mark the Carolina lineup as the team attempts to put a halt to its five-game losing streak. With smooth-fielding John Gregory forced to the sidelines with a badly bruised hand, jarrin' Jack Hussey will take over at the first-base position. The other change might take place at third base, where Rabb is toying with the idea of inserting hard-hitting Jim Hayworth into the lineup in place of Jim Hamilton. Hayworth has been working out at the hot corner for the past few weeks.

The rest of the lineup will be the same as usual. Buck Hardee will be behind the plate, Bo Hackney and Rip Ryan will be on either side of the keystone sack, and Harry Beason, Whitey Black and Jim Kelly will patrol the outer gardens.

DIAMOND DUST: Kelly, with eight hits in 16 trips, still leads the Big Four batting parade but will have to maintain the .500 clip to stay ahead of Clyde Whitener of Wake Forest, who has finished the season with .471. . . . Johnson's mound record is 1-2.

Paxton Receives Well-Deserved Cage Captaincy



The quiet, lanky, and likeable star forward of the 1947 Carolina cage aggregation, has received the greatest praises of his teammates in the form of the captaincy of next year's edition of Coach Tom Scott's White Phantoms.

Paxton, who is a senior and hails from far-away Spokane, Washington, will be playing his fourth season with the Tar Heels come next winter, since entering the University as a V-12 navy student back in 1943.

Pax was a member of the 1946 Carolina basketball team that came within a game of winning national honors, and it was he, himself, who gave the Tar Heels a shot at the coveted NCAA title.

For two nights before that championship clash, it looked as if the Carolina lads were doomed to defeat before torrid Ohio State, until the rangy, West Coast lad swished a sensational last-second field goal to tie up the contest, and set the stage for an overtime Tar Heel victory.

Paxton returned to Carolina last year after completing his military service. He is a member of the Golden Fleece.

Students appearing in the recital will be Jean Youngblood, soprano; William Fitzgerald, tenor; Kermit Albertson, tenor; Carl Perry, tenor; and Andrew Griffith, base.

Jeanne Fornoff, Robert MacDonald, Harold Andrews and William Waters will accompany the singers.

Still-Missing 'Lynching Party' Victim May Not Be Dead, Authorities Believe

Negro Woman Saw Prisoner Escape From Armed Mob

By Chuck Hauser and Bill Sexton

Jackson, N. C., May 24.—An unexpected eyewitness, a .32 slug, a mysterious footprint, and several intriguing coincidences have come to the fore to prove that Godwin "Buddy" Rush, 23-year-old Negro who was spirited from the Northampton county jail here by three masked men, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning supposedly to be lynched, is alive at the present time.

Eye Witness

The eye-witness, Rosa Howard, a Negro woman who lives directly across Jackson's Depot Street from the two-story brick jail, swears she saw Rush break away from his captors, dodge a single shot fired toward him by his would-be captors, and disappear into the woods behind her home.

The footprint, found between the witness's home and an adjoining house, was apparently pressed in the soft earth by Rush's foot, although F.B.I. agents, called in to assist state and local officers in scientific investigation of the weird "lynch" case, made a plaster cast of the print at noon today to definitely establish identity of the foot.

A strange coincidence in the case was revealed by Chief Frank Outland, one-man police department of Rich Square, who said he had been summoned late last night to a home six miles north of the small agricultural community to investigate an attempted break-in at the home of R. E. Shackelford. Shackelford had left his wife and young son at home alone at the time.

Outland and his two bloodhounds followed the trail of the attempted burglars "at least eight miles" toward Murfreesboro before dogs and officers were exhausted.

Newspapermen figured importantly in investigation of the case in its most exciting and unusual stage this morning. United Press correspondent Herbert Foster uncovered the witness of the prisoner's escape from the lynchers. Woodrow Price, Raleigh News and Observer reporter, discovered the bullet fired by one of the would-be lynchers imbedded in the roof of a shed belonging to Rosa Howard.

The bullet has been rushed to the Art Exhibition Will Feature Work of Betty Warren Jones

More than 30 works of Betty Warren Jones, well-known artist of Chapel Hill and Chatham, N. Y., will be featured in an exhibition in Graham Memorial this afternoon from 3 until 5 o'clock. The artist will be on hand for an informal reception.

Oil portraits, charcoals and figure sketches will be included in the exhibition, the first one-man show ever held in Graham Memorial's main lounge. Included in the display will be portraits of Martha Rice, Lennox Robinson, Gene Johnstone, Blount Stewart, A. B. Coleman and a number of others from Chapel Hill. Many prominent Durhamites will also be represented by portraits and sketches.

A string duo with a piano will play during the exhibition. Bill Tritt and David McAdams will play violins while Geanne Fornoff accompanies them at the piano. Refreshments will be served.

Publications Board Elects Gene Johnstone President

Group Authorizes Weekly Roto Supplement For Daily Tar Heel; Considers Circulation

Meeting in its first called session since installation of new members Tuesday night, the Publications board yesterday elected Gene Johnstone, editor of the 1947 Yackety Yack, to the Board presidency for the coming year.

Other officers named by the board were Julia Ross, secretary, Ed Joyner, treasurer, and Billy Carmichael to act as coordinator between the board and the publications. Holdover faculty members remaining on the board are J. M. Lear, adviser, W. A. Olsen and L. A. Cotten.

Get Supplement

Business taken up by the board included authorizing Daily Tar Heel Business Manager Bill Selig to contract with the Intercollegiate Press service for a rotogravure supplement, to be delivered with the Daily Tar Heel once a week.

Action on a contract for printing the Daily Tar Heel, submitted by the Orange Printshop of Chapel Hill, was deferred until the next meeting of the board, which was set for 3 o'clock Friday afternoon.

The group also called for bids from students interested in holding the position of circulation manager for the student paper next year. Information concerning circulation routes, etc., is available to interested parties in the Daily Tar Heel business office and complete particulars concerning application for the job will be printed in the DTH Tuesday morning.

Graham Will Speak On Federal Aid To U.S. Education

Dr. Frank P. Graham will speak on the proposed federal aid to education in his last address to the student body Thursday evening at 8:30 in Hill hall.

The program has been scheduled by the Students for Democratic Action in cooperation with 15 other student organizations including: American Veterans committee, Coed Senate, Carolina Political union, Council for Religion in Life, Dialectic Senate, Grail, International Relations club, Phi Delta Kappa, Philanthropic Assembly, Southern Conference for Human Welfare, University Veteran's association, Valkyries, United World Federalists, YMCA, and the YWCA.

Army Interviews Planned Tuesday

Col. Henry Koepcke, Jr., GSC, U. S. Army, will be at the Naval ROTC Armory from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, to interview men interested in securing commissions in the regular army upon graduation.

The army will secure 8000 regular army officers this year, and 2000 annually over the next ten years, so any student, regardless of his present class standing, if he is interested in a regular army career as a commissioned officer, should see Col. Koepcke. No applications for commissions will be made at this time, but opportunity for submitting applications will be given prior to June 1.

No previous service experience is necessary to apply for a commission.

Mrs. Martha Truman Has No Improvement

Grandview, Mo., May 24.—(UP)—President Truman is spending a second heartbreaking week-end near his ailing mother. The doctors in constant attendance at the little bungalow are not saying much. But Mrs. Martha Truman's lack of progress is written plainly on their faces and Mr. Truman's especially.

Clark Studies Suits Against Lynch Group

Washington, May 24. — (UP) — Attorney General Tom Clark says he will investigate the possibility of bringing civil rights actions against the South Carolina lynch defendant acquitted this week. Clark says he plans to make a personal examination of the evidence in the lynch case to see if it could be used to prove that the right of life is a federally secured right.

Pressmen Back on Job With St. Louis Papers

St. Louis, Mo., May 24.—(UP)—Two newspapers here have resumed publication after a five-hour work stoppage by AFofL pressmen, who walked out this morning, when the first editions of the two evening papers, the Post-Dispatch and the Star-Times, were being run off.

Henry Wallace to Talk In Raleigh on June 5

Henry A. Wallace will speak in Raleigh at the Municipal auditorium, Thursday evening June 5, under the auspices of the Committee for North Carolina, Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Mr. Wallace's address will be on the subject, "The Road to Peace."

The former Vice-President of the United States, Roosevelt cabinet member, and publisher of one of the largest farm papers in America will make his only appearance in this section of the country when he comes to Raleigh. For the past few months he has been making a historic speaking tour in leading cities of the United States and Europe, expounding his point of view that the current American foreign policy will lead to another world war.

Student Party to Pick New Officers Tomorrow

A new slate of officers will be elected by the Student party tomorrow afternoon, when the group meets in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial at 4 o'clock. Present steering committee members are requested to meet there at 3 o'clock.

Hard to Get at Last Minute

Travelers Warned to Make Reservations at Agency

By Dave Owens

"Students and faculty who intend making a homeward jaunt in June should make their reservations right away," warns genial Bob Watson, director of the Graham Memorial travel agency, offering free service to anyone connected with the University. "There have been several changes in both trains and schedules, and times familiar to most travelers are now passe."

Watson urges all potential travelers to secure reservations as soon as possible so that the final week's rush will not interfere with plans. "Reservations have the habit of being very hard to get at the last minute," says Watson, "and due to final exams of my own, I'll have to close the office on Friday, May 30. It will be impossible to obtain reservations after that date through the Graham Memorial travel agency."

Watson disclosed the fact that he now has a book showing all hotels and their rates in the United States. Information may be obtained from this new book during his office hours, 1 to 5 o'clock daily except Saturday and Sunday.

Departmental Efficiency Poll Set for Wednesday

Faculty Committee Sponsoring Voting

By Merrily Brooks

The student body will have a chance on Wednesday to express objective opinions on the effectiveness of department instruction here at Carolina through a campus-wide vote.

Members of a faculty committee on instruction have expressed "deep concern" as to the quality of instruction on campus and in accordance with this, a poll is being set up to get the student's "honest and fair" judgment on the efficiency of the various departments.

These polling places will be set up in three central spots around campus, the "Y," Graham Memorial, and Lenoir hall, and will remain open all day.

Unsigned Ballots

Ballots must not be signed by the student, nor will they contain the name of any specific course or instructor.

"This is to keep the opinion strictly an objective one, and it is, therefore, very important that all students consider the ballot seriously and that everyone vote," stated a member of the faculty group in charge of the polls.

Five Voice Students Will Present Recital This Evening at 8:30

Five voice students in the University Music department will present a recital in the main lounge of Graham Memorial at 8:30 this evening.

The program will consist of "Filli Non T'Amo Piu," by Carissimi; "Rugiadose, Adorase," by Scarlatti; "Sento Me 'Coze,'" by Scarlatti; and "Che Fiero Castume," by Legrenzi, to be sung by Jean Youngblood, soprano. William Fitzgerald, tenor, will sing "Widmung," by Schumann; "Stille Sicherheit," by Franz; "Madchen mit dem rothen Mundchen," by Franz; and "Wanderlied," by Schumann. "Le Colibri," by Chausson; "Les Berceaux," by Faure; "Mandoline," by Debussy; and "Nell," by Faure; will be sung by Kermit Albertson, tenor. Carl Perry, tenor, will sing "The Crying of Water," by Campbell-Tipton; "In A Myrtle Shade," by Griffes; "The Lament of Ian the Proud," by Griffes; and the "Silence of the Night," by Rachmaninoff.

Accompanists for the recital will be Jeanne Fornoff, Robert MacDonald, Harold Andrews, and William Waters.

Canvass Nets Much Clothing; Drive Extended

Collectors Pick Up Hundreds of Pounds

Climaxed by a big day of collection Thursday, the campus clothing drive sponsored by CRIL netted several hundred pounds of old clothes to be shipped overseas. A part of the nation-wide drive being staged by the American Council of Churches, the campus collection to form Chapel Hill's contribution.

The canvass Thursday was made by representatives from fraternities, sororities, and major campus organizations, and was in the form of a pick-up campaign for clothes collected in each dormitory and house by members of the Interfraternity and Interdormitory Councils.

Had Not Heard

Reports from the pick-up committees indicated that a great many of the men in dormitories had not heard of the drive. It is asked that these people collect their old clothes and bring them to the Town Girl's room in the Y building. Here the clothes will be sorted and packed tomorrow afternoon, and all students and organizations are asked to give volunteer help.

Although the drive officially lasted one day, present plans call for an extension of the campaign. Clothes will be accepted all next week, and it is hoped that a method can be worked out whereby a collection can be made after most people have completed their packing at the end of the quarter.

When questions of the success of the drive, representatives of CRIL said "We got clothes, and good clothes, but there just weren't enough of them. We hope to reach many more people this week, and double the collection made Thursday."

Final IRC Session Scheduled Monday

"International Cartels—Menace to Democracy" is the topic for tomorrow evening's International Relations club discussion at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

James Burwell, IRC vice-president, will deliver an extensive report on the present status of cartels all over the world and their effect on foreign policy. President John Bristow invited all students and faculty interested in world economics to tomorrow's IRC meeting, which will be the last of the term.

Meanwhile, the membership committee, headed by Ken Cruse, called on all students interested in special summer session membership to obtain applications at tomorrow evening's meeting.

Frosh Honor Group Will Be Installed

The installation of the Phi Eta Sigma, honorary freshman scholastic fraternity, will be held Thursday evening. According to Dean of Men E. L. Mackie so far 41 eligible freshmen will be installed into the group and there are probably others eligible for membership.

He would like to get in touch with the following men, whom he believes are eligible for membership in the fraternity: John Wilson Dillard, Jr., John Olin Perritt, Jr., Thomas Frank Stallings, and Richard Winston Borden.

UVA OPEN HOUSE

The University Veterans association will hold its final open house Tuesday evening from 8:30 until 11 o'clock, when it entertains the Pi Beta Phi and Alpha Gamma Delta sororities.

Too Much Spirit

School spirit is a wonderful thing and a necessity for a healthy well-rounded university. However, sometimes it gets out of hand and is carried too far. The latest outbreak of too much rivalry and spirit is the battle between the University of Maryland and Johns Hopkins university. Two hundred and fifty students at Maryland went en masse to the Johns Hopkins campus to recover their bronze terrapin that the Johns Hopkins lads had taken. Johns Hopkins was well prepared for the mob and along with their barbed wire entanglement they had three police cars and 12 policemen waiting. Nearly 100 police had to be called before the mob could be dispersed. Johns Hopkins still has the turtle.

It's the same old thing of the Duke-Carolina rivalry enacted again. On several occasions Rameses has been abducted and held for short periods. No violence has not occurred, however, it did not develop into the advanced stages such as the recent occurrence.

Last year the vandalism and annual painting of university property at Duke and Carolina was very small, due to the efforts of both the schools. This year will be full of high-strung rivalry. It is up to the individual members of the student body to take it upon themselves to see that such scenes of violence do not occur on our campus or that property is not destroyed to exhibit our school spirit.

Another Mystery

South Carolina may have its lynchings, but Old North State just has its mysteries.

This was the general conclusion around Jackson yesterday afternoon when new evidence came to the fore to indicate that Godwin "Buddy" Rush was not the victim of a lynching, as everyone had supposed up until about noon. The new evidence was in the form of an eyewitness who said that she saw Rush break away from his captors in front of the Jackson county jail and escape, with the one shot his would-be captors fired missing him completely.

Why did the shot miss him? The answer any Jacksonian would give you today is that the "lynchers" were firing over the Negro's head, with no intentions except to possibly scare him or else put on a good show for whoever might have been watching.

What was the reason for their actions would be the obvious question to follow. Perhaps North Carolinians are actually above a lynching, and want Rush's disappearance to serve as a warning to others without spilling blood.

No one will know the answers until Rush is found either dead or alive. Let us hope that it will be alive.—C. H.

Thought Provoking

Opinions are many and varied. Everyone has his own views on everything ranging from movies to world affairs. We are in absolute disagreement with the opinions expressed in Manny Margolis' column elsewhere on this page. Even though our views are not in accord with his we do recognize his right to voice his own opinion. A Wise Choice

Macbeth Proved Notch Above Average College Production

By R. Haskell Hamilton

The Playmakers tailored version of William Shakespeare's Macbeth was a wise and well-presented choice for the annual Forest Theater production. Playing in the rustic atmosphere amid outstanding sets by Lynn Gault the Playmakers gave a more than creditable interpretation of the play. Director John Parker chose to omit all of the scenes which take place in England, in Shakespeare's original; but the play suffered little from this directorial touch.

Marion Fitz-Simons as lady Macbeth thrilled the appreciative audience with a masterful performance which thoroughly captured the spirit of a forceful, vainglorious and tragically ambitious woman. Sam Hirsch played an adequate Macbeth. Lacking the depth of interpretation of Mrs. Fitz-Simons, however, occasionally caused Mr. Hirsch to seem a trifle unconvincing in his difficult role.

Supporting players did not generally come up to the high calibre of the leads, with the exception of Porter Van Zandt but even his Banquo could not save the poorly-directed Banquet scene from a deep theatrical hole. Frederick Johnson as Duncan gave a humanistically - regal performance. Comedy relief for the stark tragedy was delightfully supplied by Claude Rayborn as an obscure castle porter.

The production, as a whole, was satisfying; but not up to the usual Playmaker standards. Aside from Lynn Gault's sets; several ragged edges were apparent in the lighting, directing, and cumbersome (although generally authentic) costuming. All in all, the current Macbeth is well done, adequately acted and interestingly staged. It could have been a memorable evening in the theater instead of being just one or two notches above the average college production of Macbeth.

Rift Between Theories

Writer Says Conflict in World Today Is Not Just Rivalry with Ideologies

By Manny Margolis

If there is a fundamental conflict in the world today, it is not simply a rivalry between ideologies. There is more involved. It involves nebulous things such as security, interests, and influence, on the one hand, and concrete things such as investments, resources, and people, on the other.

Let's take stock of America's present position in this rivalry. We have two extremely powerful weapons—food and dollars. According to the axiom and corollaries of the Truman Doctrine, these precious items will be doled out to the nations of the world on the basis of the intensity of their anti-Communism, pure and simple. The line forms "to the right," so to speak.

Repercussions have already been felt. The Communists have been cased out of the French Cabinet despite the fact that they control a plurality of the French electorate. In Brazil, where the Communist party recently polled over 800,000 votes, the Communist party is being outlawed. The Italian cabinet has just toppled and the Belgian government is in similar danger.

In Greece, Guerrilla activity has become intensified, while the civil war in China has also increased in tempo. Chaos, hunger, disorder—the best stimuli for the spread of communism, so we're told—are running rampant.

The Russians, for all the battles they have lost at Lake Success, continue to win prestige. While we muzzle our "Voice of America" broadcasts, their propaganda continues extremely effective. While we lose friends among the left and center, they win them.

Communists parties throughout the world—whether or not one subscribes to the idea that they are Moscow-directed—have been working with people and with ideas. They have proved themselves avid and sincere workers in the ranks of the trade union movement throughout the world. In numerous cases, they are openly in control of the labor movement, as for example in France, Italy, Czechoslovakia, etc.

They have been in the forefront, even in our country, in the fight for political and economic reforms. As such, they have been able to secure the support of many non-believers in the "dictatorship of the proletariat" on concrete issues.

The rift between the democratic-capitalist ideology and the communist or socialist ideology is far from unbridgeable. Roosevelt, Willkie, and Wallace have been able to see this because they have been more interested in winning a peace than in winning a war.

Stalin apparently neither wants nor fears a war at this time, nor does the Soviet people. There are no Bullits or Earles in the Soviet Union who constantly harrangue the people about the inevitability of war with the United States. And there's a reason for it.

It is not that the Soviet leaders or people are any more peace-loving than our own. Not at all! But they do have less to hide. They aren't particularly afraid of an impending depression; their anti-trust "commissariat" (if such there be) has not been helpless in the face of the mammoth pyramiding of industrial combinations at the expense of the little people; they have not deemed it advisable to enact any slave-labor bills; and their foreign investments haven't forced them into the position of having to ally themselves with politicians, industrialists, and military leaders who only yesterday were on the side of the Fascist enemy.

That is why we're losing in Greece, in Palestine, in China, even in Britain. That is why we will continue to lose until and unless the Truman Doctrine is recognized for what it is and a Wallace Doctrine placed in its stead. While Mr. Truman wages anti-Communist war, Mr. Wallace wages a pro-peoples peace.

Write Away

Hazardous Terrain

Dear Sir:

The attention of the University administration needs to be directed to the hazardous condition on the north side of the Chemistry building as a result of the recent operation of digging a tunnel for a new steam line.

At the present time the only passage from the north side of the Chemistry building to the campus is a footwalk across the ditch. On either side of this footwalk are mounds of dirt and mud thrown up by the digging operations. Smoke lamps have been provided at night, but these are utterly inadequate, and last night they were not lighted at all, forcing one to stumble around in the dark in order to leave the building on the north side.

The entire terrain from the north side of the Chemistry building to Memorial hall is rocky, muddy, and uneven and in wet weather dangerous, yet no lighting whatever is provided in this area, with the exception of the feeble smoke lamps (when the crew remembers to light them).

If anyone should injure himself in this area by stumbling or falling because of inadequate light and protection against the hazards of digging, the University is laying itself wide open to charges of negligence and laxity with respect to safety precautions.

I condemn this situation the more severely because the building and grounds force, and perhaps the superintendent himself, is frequently at work in this vicinity and ought to be aware of the dangers there.

MORSE AND TAFT CLASH ON QUORUM: DEMOCRATS WORRIED ABOUT WALLACE COMEBACK

Washington.—Oregon's hard-hitting GOP Senator Wayne Morse peppered Senator Taft with verbal buckshot during a secret meeting of the Republican Senatorial conference recently.

The day before, Morse had been called off the Senate floor by a long-distance phone call. Returning, he learned that during his absence it had been agreed to limit debate on the National Science Foundation Bill introduced by Democratic Senator Kilgore of West Virginia but which now bears the name of Republican Senator Smith of New Jersey. Morse had an amendment he had planned to offer.

In the Republican closed-door conference next day, Morse proposed that Senators be warned by a quorum call when a unanimous-consent agreement is to be asked.

"Any Senator who fails to answer the quorum call," Morse argued, "cannot then feel slighted if such an agreement goes through against his wishes.

"The way the agreement was gained yesterday just adds to the impression many people are getting that the leadership of this Senate is trying to steamroller its will through. And I say that with tactics such as those of yesterday, any charge of steamrollering is quite justified."

Morse then warned that while he could take the whole fight to the floor, he'd rather have an understanding in conference that unanimous-consent agreements to set specified hours for voting should be asked only after quorum calls had been made.

"I think the Senator from Oregon is quite right,' said Michigan's veteran Senator Vandenberg. "His proposal seems quite reasonable to me."

TAFT SAYS NO

But Taft insisted that "there is no rule that a quorum must be called before an agreement to vote is sought."

"That's true," said Vandenberg, 'but it seems to me wise for us to agree to quorum calls, even so."

Maine's Wallace White, nominal majority leader of the Senate—though Taft really runs things—was next on his feet, to declare his full agreement with Morse. He had tangled with Morse on the issue more than once before.

"I think the request of the Senator from Oregon is quite reasonable," he said. "I was not a party to the unanimous-consent agreement of yesterday. In fact, I am not asking for unanimous-consent agreements these days, and I think we are letting ourselves in for a lot of criticism if we continue to seek such agreements."

Up jumped Taft.

"I thoroughly disagree with everything the Senator from Maine has said," he shouted. "There is no rule requiring a quorum call.

"We have a great deal of business to transact in this Senate, and I intend to continue calling for unanimous-consent agreements.'

Chairman Millikin of Colorado then asked if Morse wished to offer a motion that unanimous-consent voting agreements be made only after quorum calls.

"No motion," Morse replied. "I had no idea of any formal action by the conference. I merely wanted to make a suggestion.

"Now we have heard definitely that the practice to which I took exception will be continued—and I want to serve notice here and now that this member of the Republican conference intends to see to it that the rights of the minority members of the conference are preserved."

During the Senate debate that followed, Morse blocked action for seven long hours while he argued for his amendment. As he left the Senate, Vandenberg grabbed his arm.

"Wayne," said the Michigander, "I guess you gave them a lesson today about what you mean by protecting minority rights."

Four months ago Democratic politicos wrote Henry Wallace off as a political zero. Four weeks ago when Wallace was barnstorming through England they were even more sure of it. Reaction to his foreign speeches was bad.

Today, however, they aren't sure at all. His crowds in Chicago, Austin, Los Angeles, have been too big. Certain index to political drawing power is the Chicago stadium, which seats 24,000 people. Only Roosevelt has ever been able to fill it without the artificial help of a big political machine. Wallace, however, packed it to the rafters—after charging an admission fee of $.60 to $2.40.

The sudden Wallace zoom has changed the thinking of Democratic bigwigs. While no one has any idea that Henry can take the nomination away from Truman, the boys in the backroom agree that he could swing victory to the Republicans—if he wanted to. So the backroom boys are giving a lot of thought to who may be Truman's running mate.

A few weeks ago they were thinking of a mild middle-of-the-roader such as Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman. Today they are looking for a forthright liberal. Here are two possibilities: 1. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, a personal friend of Truman's; 2. Ex-Governor Ellis Arnall of Georgia, not such a friend of Truman's. The President has been slightly miffed at him. Truman offered Arnall the Solicitor Generalship and Arnall turned it down.

However, Arnall is playing the political cards close to his chest, has made more speeches this year than Wallace, is still under 40, and has his eye not so much on 1948 but on 1952 or 1956.

Silver Jubilee...

Coach Fetzer to Be Feted For 25 Years of Service

It will be "Coach Bob's" day when June 7th rolls around. Alumni from all parts of the country have signified their intent to be on hand for the elaborate banquet that is being planned for Robert Allison Fetzer, as he completes his 25th year as Director of Athletics at the University.

Coach Bob Fetzer—to be honored for 25 years service by alumni and friends on June 7.

Many notables in the field of athletics will be on hand and most of them intimate friends of genial Coach Bob. They include Wallace Wade, director of athletics at Duke; Norton G. Pritchett, director of athletics at the University of Virginia; William A. Alexander, director of athletics at Georgia Tech; Gen. Robert Neyland, director of athletics at the University of Tennessee; Dana X. Bible, director of athletics at the University of Texas; and Frank Dobson, director of recreation at the Newport News, Va., Shipbuilding corporation.

Banquet Open

The banquet will be open to all alumni and their wives, with reservations for places at $2.50 per person now being accepted by J. Maryon Saunders, general alumni secretary and at the desk of the Carolina inn. The dinner will be given at 7 o'clock in Lenoir hall, with seats to be provided for several hundred persons.

Many Alumni

Outstanding alumni, many of them now living out of the state and many of them "Coach Bob's" boys" during his early days at Carolina when he actively coached football and track as well as serving as athletic director, are sponsoring the affair.

DiLorenzo Shackles 'Pack, Allowing Only Four Hits

Hayworth, Kelly, Hackney Pace Batters; Teams Clash Here Wednesday Afternoon

By Bob Goldwater

Devereux Meadow, Raleigh, May 24.—Carolina's version of Carl Hubbell came through in true Meal Ticket fashion here this afternoon when Vinnie DiLorenzo hurled a masterful four-hit, 4-0, shutout over State college to snap the Tar Heels' five-game losing streak.

Summary: Runs batted in: Hardee. Two-base hits: Beason, Ryan. Sacrifice: DiLorenzo. Double plays: Hayworth to Hackney to Hussey. Bases on balls—off: DiLorenzo 4, Johnson 5. Struck out—by: DiLorenzo 3, Johnson 3. Umpires: Gill and Bledsoe. Time of game—1:55.

DiLorenzo was in complete charge all the way and had a no-hitter for six innings, during which time only two State players reached first base. The Techmen broke the spell with two safeties in the seventh and went on to register lone hits in the last two frames.

But all three times, DiLorenzo, aided by a tight defense on the part of his teammates, escaped successfully and only one State runner got as far as third base. It was the third Big Four win for the Jersey southpaw.

The victory hoisted the Tar Heels up into third place while also serving to bounce the Techmen out of the top position. The two clubs meet again Wednesday afternoon in Chapel Hill in a game originally scheduled for Saturday but moved up due to final exams at both schools.

While DiLorenzo was holding the State batting punch in check, the Tar Heels were pounding Ernie Johnson for 11 bingles. Every Tar Heel except DiLorenzo hit safely and Jim Hayworth, Jim Kelly and Bo Hackney led the way with two apiece.

It was one of Kelly's hits that provided the game's first scoring play. With Harry Beason on first base, the Carolina rightfielder lined a single to right and when the ball rolled past Bill Fowler, both runners came all the way around for the first two runs.

Beason also scored the third run after doubling down the left-field line to open the fifth. He went to third when Johnson threw wild in an attempt to pick him off second and continued homeward when the throw to third scooted into the State dugout.

Another error figured in the final Tar Heel tally. Rip Ryan started the sixth with another double along the left-field line and advanced to third when Catcher Jim Edwards threw wild on another attempted pickoff play at second. Ryan scored Carolina's final marker on Buck Hardee's loft to center.

Meanwhile, DiLorenzo, like Ole Man River, just kept rolling along. Retiring the first ten men in order, he allowed two walks, in the fourth and sixth, before Fowler singled to start the seventh.

Hayworth and Jack Hussey, both performing at strange positions, played stellar defensive ball at third and first base, respectively.

LYNCH

State Highway Patrol reinforcements, though not as numerous as last night, were pouring into Northampton county again tonight for a second all-night precautionary vigil. Last night approximately 90 state troopers, including all of Troop A, Goldsboro, and all but two eight-man divisions of Troop B, Fayetteville, were on duty. Two to a car, they were assigned to outposts guarding each road entering Rich Square, and it is expected the same strategy will be followed tonight.

An early report from the Highway Patrol's station at Williamston tonight described the situation in Rich Square as "quiet."

Some observers have conjectured that the escape of the young Negro from the two-car lynching mob was not accidental but rather had been planned by the would-be lynchers themselves as a bloodless warning to the Negro population following the rape four weeks ago of a Rich Square woman.

Negroes Moved To Raleigh Jail

Missing Negro Found After Escaping Mob

Raleigh, May 26.—(UP)—Two Negroes are in the central prison in Raleigh for safe-keeping.

Godwin "Buddy" Bush is still barred from talking to reporters. Bush gave himself up to the F.B.I. and Solicitor Ernest R. Tyler after hiding two and a half days near Jackson where a mob tried to lynch him early Friday. He was taken from jail by a band of masked men but escaped and fled into the darkness. The F.B.I. is trying to use information from Bush's testimony to round up the members of the mob, and it is believed that the Negro may have identified at least two of his would-be assassins.

Second Negro

This morning 22-year-old Billy Simmons, another Negro from Clinton, was brought to the prison after his arrest on the charge of attacking a white woman. There was no violence in Clinton. However, after the Jackson case it was thought best to bring Simmons into Raleigh.

Revolution in Nicaragua Ousts Fresh President

San Jose, Costa Rica, May 26. —(UP)—The government of Nicaragua is in the hands of the army tonight after a revolt led by a former president. Communications between the capital of Managua and the outside world have been severed. However, reports filtering through say that former Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza seized power. Dispatches from San Jose, Costa Rica, say that light machine gun and rifle fire has been heard in the vicinity of the presidential palace. It is in the hilltop palace that Somoza is believed to have imprisoned President Leonardo Arguello, who had been in office less than a month.

Degree Candidates Plan Meeting Today

All candidates for degrees who plan to get their diplomas at the commencement on June 9, are requested to meet in Memorial hall this afternoon at 4 o'clock to receive proper instructions on the academic procession for commencement ceremonies.

Faculty marshal Professor J. C. Lyons stressed the importance of the session as over 1000 students will be in the procession this year, and a thorough understanding of the procedure will be absolutely necessary.

Yack Staff to Issue Annuals Today in GM

Yackety Yacks will be issued this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Baby lounge of Graham Memorial. Editor Johnstone asked all students who are going to be in Chapel Hill through next week not to get their books today. He said he expected another shipment before the end of the week. All students must present their identification cards, and no person may pick up a book for anyone else.

AQUINAS CLUB MEETS

The Aquinas Club meets on the second floor of the YMCA tonight at 8:00 o'clock. There will be a short business meeting and an election of a new president followed by a social. All members are urged to attend this the last meeting of the quarter.

All money and unsold tickets to the Women's Glee club concert are to be turned in today in the Hill hall office between 12 and 5 o'clock.

Awards Night, Major Campus Prewar Ceremony, Set For Reactivation Tomorrow Evening In Hill Hall

Graham Address Will Be Feature At Annual Affair

By Charlie Gibson

Awards Night, a major campus event in prewar years, will be reactivated tomorrow evening at 7:15 in Hill hall, according to an announcement released by Oliver K. Cornwell, director of the University physical education department.

Before 1940, Awards Night was an annual affair honoring outstanding leaders in all fields of campus activity. Then during wartime, recognition for extra-curriculum services was restricted to commencement exercises on graduation night. Now, however, the University administration wishes to resume this custom of lauding prominent student legislators, athletes, chemists, scholars, dramateers, journalists, and musicians.

The ceremony tomorrow evening over which Chancellor R. B. House will preside is to feature an address by Dr. Frank Graham, music by the University band, and award resumés in the following divisions: chemistry, R. W. Bost; N.R.O.T.C., Capt. D. W. Loomis; Phi Beta Kappa, E. L. Mackie; Beta Gamma Sigma, commercial fraternity, D. D. Carroll; Rho Chi, pharmaceutical society, M. L. Jacobs; Playmakers, Sam Selden; Phi Delta Kappa, legal fraternity, Carson Ryan; publications, Merritt Lear; music, Dr. Glen Haydon; and athletics, R. A. Fetzer.

Individual Awards

Individual achievements will also be cited. Dean E. L. Mackie will give the John J. Parker, Jr., medal for unique leadership in student government as well as the two Algernon Sydney Sullivan awards for the man and woman in the graduating class who have typified brotherly love through service. Dean Mackie will also make the presentation of the Ernest H. Abernethy cash prize of $50 for the most commendable work of the year on student publications.

Several fraternities and societies will profer special trophies of merit. Katherine Carmichael, dean of women, will bestow the Valkyrie Cup on the coed most renowned on campus for her character, leadership, service, scholarship, and soundness of judgment. The Deke trophy will be given by Karl Schwartz to the local social fraternity deemed most outstanding. In behalf of Alpha Chi Sigma chemical society, Dr. R. W. Bost will award 100 dollars to the undergraduate chemistry student best exemplifying high scholarship, leadership, and personality.

Captain D. W. Loomis will distribute the American Legion and the Josephus Daniels scholarship medals among the N.R.O.T.C. students here.

Athletic Trophies

Excelling athletes will be recognized by R. A. Fetzer, director of University sports. The Patterson medal of gold will go to the student selected by a committee for his general ability in athletics; and the Foy Roberson, Jr., gold medal will be bestowed upon the basketball player who has made the chief contribution to team morale.

The public is cordially invited to tomorrow evening's ceremonies, and it is the desire of the University administration that Awards Night will again become an annual occasion of high significance.

RESERVE OFFICERS

The Chapel Hill chapter of the Reserve Officers association will meet in the Carolina Inn at 7:30 this evening, Major E. R. Rankin, chapter president, announced. All reserve officers, no matter what branch of the services they are in, are cordially invited.

At Meeting Tonight

Student Legislature Plans To Consider Appointments

The Student Legislature will meet this evening at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall to consider the appointments made by Tom Eller last week.

Speaker Jack Folger stated that the election of committee chairmen would probably be conducted. He also warned legislators who will not be in school this summer to turn in the names of their proxies at the meeting tonight.

Last week Eller read off his appointments to the assembly and asked that the rules be suspended to consider them. The legislature, however, turned down the motion. Many legislators said they needed more time to deliberate over the names.

All appointments made by President Eller must be approved by the legislature before the nominees can take office.

Legislature officers to be elected include the speaker pro-tem, parliamentarian, clerk, and chairmen of the following committees: ways and means, elections, rules, archives, and finance.

Tenth in Series

Student Pianists Will Give Evening Recital in Hill Hall

Miss Carolyn Bowman and Charles Stevens, pianists, will present a duo-piano recital this evening at 8:30 in Hill hall. This will be the tenth in a series of student recitals.

Miss Bowman, who is a pupil of Dr. J. P. Schinan, is a graduate student and a teacher in the Music department. She is a member of Sigma Alpha Iota, national honorary music sorority, and is accompanist for the Women's Glee club.

Stevens is a member of the faculty of the Music department of the Edwards Military institute and of the Pineland college at Salemburg. He attended the University, where he was president and accompanist for the Men's Glee club. He is also a pupil of Dr. Schinan and a member of Phi Mu Alpha music fraternity.

The two pianists have appeared in recitals in Durham and Raleigh.

The program will include "Concerto in C Minor," by Bach; "Fantasia for Musical Clock Work," by Mozart-Buseni; "Scaramouch," by Milhaud; and "Suite No. 2, Opus 17," by Rachmaninoff.

Dorm Key Return Asked by Smith

Manager of Dormitories Bill Smith has requested that keys to all dormitory rooms be turned in as soon as possible. This applies especially to residents of Aycock, Alexander, and Everett, and men living in these buildings are requested to vacate them by midnight of June 5 as they are to house parents of students during commencement.

Stacy dormitory also must be vacated by June 5, since it is to be used by the Extension division beginning June 8.

Students who have received cards stating that they are to occupy the following listed rooms in Old West, Old East, and Steele are requested to see Bill Smith in room 02 in South building basement Saturday morning.

Old West: 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 15, 19, 21, 23, 24, 25, 36. Old East: 2, 5, 7, 14, 17, 19, 22, 26. Steele: 2, 5, 14, 17, 19, 22, 26, 30. Alexander, Everett, Aycock and Stacy.

PI PHI CEREMONY

All resident alumnae and unaffiliated members of the Phi Beta Phi sorority are invited to the senior farewell ceremony from 4:30 to 5:15 p.m. today at the chapter house. At this time seniors will be formally inducted into the national alumnae organization.

LAUNDRY CHECKS

Laundry refund checks will be given out at Gerrard Hall on Tuesday, June 3, from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Coaches, Students Discuss Football Seating Problems

Action was begun yesterday afternoon on what is hoped to be improved seating facilities for students during the coming football season, and an announcement is expected to be forthcoming at the beginning of the summer term in relation to the important problem.

Tom Eller, president of the student body, Barron Mills, Daily Tar Heel editor, Charlie Long, member of the legislature, and Irwin Smallwood, Daily Tar Heel sports editor, met with Athletic Director Bob Fetzer and Assistant Director Chuck Erickson yesterday in order to iron out certain difficulties that have arisen.

The meeting was termed a success. The final word on the plan is dependent upon the Athletic council meeting tonight.

Unanimous Vote Affects Students In Class of '49

By Ed Joyner

By unanimous vote of the faculty at a meeting Thursday afternoon, requirements for graduation from the University have been raised to include a total average of C on all subjects instead of the previous requirement of C grades on at least half the courses taken. The new ruling will affect students graduating in the spring of 1949 and thereafter.

Introduced by Dean William Wells of the School of Arts and Sciences, the rule also requires that after the first six quarters a student must pass 20 quarter hours of work in any two consecutive quarters. This ruling supplements but does not change the present requirement that a student must pass at least five quarter hours work a quarter and 35 hours a year.

The rule now in effect pertaining to graduation states that to be eligible for graduation a student must secure the grade of C or higher on at least half of his work. This regulation will remain in effect for all students graduating before the spring of 1949.

The new rule states that to be eligible for graduation in or after June, 1949, a student must secure a total average grade of C. Students who are now rising juniors and lower classmen will fail under this ruling.

Dean Wells said yesterday that the committee on instruction has been given the job of working out a formula by which grades can be averaged. Exact form of the formula has not been decided upon but it will probably be similar to the process in which grades are given numerical values so that A=3, B=2, C=1, D=0, and E has a rating of —1.

Purpose of the new rule as given by Dean Wells is to help students keep track of their scholastic standings more easily, as well as to raise the standards of the University in keeping with the graduation requirements of other schools in the Association of American Universities.

UVA Opens Push On GI Measures

To facilitate the passage of bills affecting veterans in the Congress, the University Veterans association yesterday opened a drive which is intended to embrace action by between 20 and 100 schools.

Purpose of the campaign is to bear direct pressure for the passage of an increase in GI subsistence for veterans studying under Public Law 346, the GI Bill of Rights and for the passage of a measure which would enable veterans to cash their terminal leave bonds.

Plan Contracts

In releasing the information, UVA President Hugh Wells said, "We propose to contact 100 major universities throughout the country and ask that they send at least one delegate to Washington."

He added that should 20 schools agree, the delegates will leave for Washington on June 10, are tentatively scheduled to remain there for five days.

Air mail letters will be sent out tonight explaining the full particulars of the drive. These letters are to be followed by telegrams to be sent Wednesday morning. Both communications will be timed for a nearly simultaneous arrival.

Majority of the schools to receive letters are east of the Mississippi. However, a few western schools also are included on the list.

Visiting Student from Peru Forecsats New, Bloodless Educational Revolution

By Roy Moose

"We in Peru are planning an educational and perhaps a social revolution in our country." The person speaking of this new and bloodless type of revolution in South America is Senor Carlos Zuzunaga, Assistant Professor of the School of Law at the University of Arequipa, Peru, and representative of the Peruvian government now studying at Carolina.

Commissioned by the Peruvian government to study secondary and higher education in the United States and Europe, Senor Zuzunaga is embarking upon an itinerary of colleges and universities that reads like Who's Who in education—University of North Carolina; Columbia; Oxford, England; University of Strasbourg, France; Hiedelburg, Germany; and a list of other colleges yet to be scheduled. The results of Senor Zuzunaga's two-year educational adventure will be a "plan for the future entire reform of our own system in Peru."

"My study begins here in Chapel Hill because the social and economic conditions nearest approximate those of my own country," explained Senor Zuzunaga in the most perfect of English. "And, too, your Dr. S. E. Leavitt of the Spanish Department here interested me in North Carolina. He is the best informed Latin America scholar in the United States and one of the best friends of Peru. Everyone in my country who speaks of the United States always remembers Dr. Leavitt."

Corroborates Stand

At least one daily newspaper in this immediate area has the same views as the Daily Tar Heel in regard to the policy of campus organizations letting outstanding leaders regardless of their affiliations and beliefs speak at the University.

The Durham Herald in Sunday's edition corroborated our stand that such groups as the Carolina Political union and the IRC should invite outsiders to speak here at various intervals. If for no other reason it promotes original thinking which is a main fundamental for a great University.

The following is the editorial comment as it appeared in Sunday's edition:

"Senator Wayne Morse is a discerning gentleman. He had experience as a law dean and teacher before he went over to Washington. So when he came to the students there he was alert to student reaction.

"What's that he said when he went back to Washington? 'I found at Chapel Hill a group of students who have learned to think for themselves.' And that might have been amplified, '—and who have been encouraged to do so.'

It's that among many other things that makes North Carolinians proud of its University and the people who run it. Forbid that any group, student or others should ever stagnantly accept doled words and thoughts. The hope for a better world is in original thinking and the capacity to sense needs and do something about them."

Good Work

It's all over except for the shouting for Gene Johnstone and his yearbook staff. After a year's work filled with theme-building, picture-taking and all the essentials of a good annual, the group has brought forth a product of their brain child they are justified in being proud of.

The new Yackety Yack will definitely be placed on the shelf with the family album and will be dragged out at frequent intervals to exhibit with pride.

Editor Bill Moffitt will have a lot of hard work ahead of him if he is to keep his '48 Yack in the same bracket with the book that is scheduled to hit the campus today.

The members of the Yackety Yack staff are in line for a pat on the back for the year's publication that not only features the graduating class, but the University as well.

No Personalities

Students should completely erase personalities from their minds when they mark their questionnaires on the effectiveness of the various University departments tomorrow. Members of a faculty committee on instruction, which is sponsoring the poll of student opinion, have requested that students forget their individual instructors and indicate their opinion according to the effectiveness of the department.

Almost every year a poll on class and professors is taken on campus. Tomorrow's questionnaire is quite different in its approach and all students should make a special effort to see that they vote so that the poll will be a true one of the campus concensus and also be of value to the conductors of the poll.

Tomorrow is the opportune time to express your views on the departments in which you are now taking courses. Take advantage of the chance so that changes can be made for the betterment of the campus.

The past winter has been the most severe in Europe in the twentieth century. Even England, which usually has mild weather all year long, was seriously affected.

Orientation Problem Is to Familiarize New Students with Campus Functions

By John Clampitt

The plans for next year's orientation are now being forumlated. Questions on how a more effective program could be carried out have been asked and answered. Suggestions from old students have added to the pile of information that is needed to give the new students the best picture of Carolina life that is possible.

The program is this: giving the new student a working knowledge of the honor and campus codes; making it possible for them to understand the functions of our student government; showing them how to fit into the spirit of campus life; teaching them the little facts that help make their first few months more enjoyable; and showing them where things are on the campus.

So far the orientation committee has planned for a freshman handbook which will be given to each new student. In this booklet there is a compilation of the most important facts for incoming students to know. There will be a large number of student counselors chosen to work with small groups of the new men, giving a personal touch to orientation. Dances, smokers, and other forms of entertainment are on the agenda. The honor code and the campus code will receive special attention next year in an effort to impress their meaning and value upon the new men.

The men of the Monogram Club have volunteered their help in making the program as effective as possible and several individuals have offered their services. There is need of such help and whether you are chosen as a counsilor or not you can help with orientation. If YOU see that bewildered look in the eyes of any new student next fall—stop, and see if you can help.

It is hoped by the orientation committee that an arrangement can be made with the faculty providing for honor code orientation among that group. With such an understanding, the honor system of the University of North Carolina can reach an even greater effiency.

The student government will be another important phase of orientation. Not only will the executive, legislative, and judicial branches be explained at the various meetings, but members of these branches will be expected to contribute time and information to the new students.

Therein lies the story of next year's orientation program. The committee and the councilors will do their best to show why Carolina is such a wonderful school, but the real job belongs to the student body as a whole. Next fall see what you can do to help make the freshmen feel more a part of your school.

Men's Council Gives Report On Type of Cases It Reviews

The following cases appeared before the Men's Honor council sometime this year. Continuing its usual policy, the Council prints no names of persons involved and presents only enough information on each case to allow the student body to become acquainted with the various types of cases and the decisions rendered. Though but a minute's reading may appear here, you may be certain that each individual case received every bit of the attention and time required to reach a just and fair decision.

Case 1

A group of students were reported by their instructor for a possible violation of the Honor System. Having received notices to appear before the Men's council, all except one did so. Called by the Council at that time (by telephone), the student said that he had dropped out of school that day and would not appear. He said that this was not an admission of his guilt in the case. The Council offered to pick him up at that time in one of the member's cars in order to quickly clear the matter up for all concerned, but he still refused. He had been told in the original summons that failure to appear (without a valid excuse), would result in suspension, and this was repeated in the telephone conversation. The case was reported because of similarity of papers.

ACTION: The student was suspended from the University until he appears before the Council to have his case heard. The others involved were dismissed without punishment due to no direct proof of cheating.

The next day the student appeared before the Council, stating that he had taken information from another paper without its owner's knowledge, and that he was aware that this was a violation of our Honor System.

ACTION: The student was given a "F" on the course and was indefinitely suspended from the University.

Case 2

Two students were reported by their instructor because of similarity of papers. Methods of procedure and phrasing were quite unlike those of the rest of the class, and some of the material had not been included in class discussion.

During the course of the investigation and questioning in the hearing, it was brought out that the students were roommates and were in the habit of studying the course together, preparing possible questions for tests and developing their answers together beforehand. One of the boys' brothers, an advanced student who had taken the course, had aided them in their preparation and had given them additional material he thought would make the test easier.

Case 3

An instructor, noticing similarity of answers on two students' papers, turned in their names to the Council for investigation. One of the students was on probation at the time. During the questioning, in the Council room, the latter could not answer correctly questions he had answered on the test, nor could he explain the source of some of the material. The opposite was true in the other student's case. Neither confessed guilt.

ACTION: The student who was on probation was indefinitely suspended from the University and given an "F" on the course. No action was taken against the other.

Straightened Out

Dear Editor:

It is about time that someone straightened out the little matter of R. H. Hamilton's column. Since the beginning of this year, I have read the worthy gentleman's attempted reviews with great amusement. But the last word in sheer comedy appeared in today's issue with his review of "Macbeth."

I realize that Mr. Hamilton's criticism is based only on college productions, but I wish to point out that even college productions are sometimes good. In other words, in his praise of the hodge-podge which resulted when the excellent business manager of the Playmakers cut up a recording of Orson Wells' rather foolish version of "Macbeth," Mr. Hamilton is saying that the average college production is on the level with an elementary school version of "Pinafore." There is no excuse for this sort of review.

If Mr. Hamilton had reflected a little, or had even read Shakespeare's admittedly inferior version of "Macbeth," he would have realized that no amount of structures resembling Gimghoul Castle can compensate for a poorly guided characterization of Macbeth, or an omission of all but three or four lines of the Porter's speech.

What I object to, mainly, in R. H. Hamilton's column is not only that he is not honest enough in his criticisms, but that he is not constructive enough. He states that such-and-such is right and such-and-such is wrong, but he does not say how the faults could be corrected. On behalf of the Playmakers, of which I am not a member, I appeal for a more experienced critic or a little more constructive thought on the part of the present columnist. Remember what Zeuxis once said, "Criticism comes easier than craftsmanship."

Do Some "Politiking"

Students Back Col. Shepard For State Legion Commander

By Earl Heffner

It would be unfair to say that the American Legion isn't the best friend of student veterans. Nonetheless, the leaders of the Legionnaires haven't been too cooperative in this issue of gaining an increase in the GI subsistence. In fact, in instances they have been—to use the vernacular—down right cantankerous.

Hence, with the election of a new state commander impending, it is time for those Legionnaires on campus to look around for someone to represent their views.

There is one conscientious veteran on campus who has done just this. He is Jim Chesnutt, former president of the University Veterans association, the energetic student who took the reins of a collapsing UVA and whipped it into a lively, powerful organization.

Takes Problem

Yesterday, Jim decided to take his problem before the public. He wrote a letter to this office, a typical Chesnutt letter communicating all that is truth and sensible. Rather than discuss it further, I'm taking the liberty to print it.

"I wish to take this means of urging every veteran on this campus to do everything in his power to obtain the support of his home American Legion post for the election of Col. F. Carlyle Shepard as state commander.

"I do this since I had an excellent opportunity while president of the UVA to become personally acquainted with Col. Shepard. His advice, encouragement, and cooperation were and are invaluable to the association.

As a veteran of both World Wars, he has a thorough understanding of the problems confronting the veterans of both wars.

"His position as veteran's adviser here has permitted him to become intimately acquainted with the difficulties that face every veteran and their feelings concerning the solutions to the problems.

Untiring Attention

"I feel certain that each of you have the same feeling of gratitude towards him for his sympathetic and untiring attention to our welfare.

"Col. Shepard's election would give us the opportunity to see the American Legion represent the veterans in a vigorous and efficient manner and yet in such a way that each of us will be proud of its efforts.

"Make a sincere effort while at home to contact the officers and members of your local post and inform them of the experience Col. Shepard possesses, your knowledge of his ability and integrity. Ask them to support him at the American Legion convention at Carolina beach June 13-16."

That was the letter from Jim Chesnutt.

I agree with Jim. It would be nice for veterans to express their appreciation of Col. Shepard's efforts by doing some "politiking."

It would be nice to have a man in sympathy with student veterans problems as an American Legion policy-maker.

Independents vs. Betas For 'Shoes Title Today

Dorm Net Finals Also on Day's Slate; Frat Tennis Play Reaches Semi-finals

By Gil McLeod

The champion horseshoe team of the campus will be decided this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the pits beside Woollen gym when the Independents, dormitory division winner, will pitch against Beta Theta Pi, winner in the fraternity bracket.

In gaining the horseshoe finals, both the Independents and the Betas went through the season's play without losing a single match.

The finals of the dormitory tennis tourney will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock with the Grads facing Oakwood Drive.

Over in the fraternity net division, the Phi Gams are assured of a place in the tennis finals in that their No. 1 and No. 2 teams will face each other in one bracket of the semi-finals, which are slated for this afternoon at 4 o'clock. In the other bracket, the KA's are matched against ATO.

In yesterday's play, the Sigma Chi's lost all hope of copping the mural championship cup when both of their tennis teams were defeated in the quarter-final rounds. ATO shut out their No. 3 outfit, 3-0, and KA stopped the No. 2 team, 3-1.

Assistant mural director P. A. Lee stated yesterday that those dorm men who won first places in the mural track meet may obtain their medals at the intramural office.

Yesterday's mural results:

TENNIS

3 KA No. 2	Sigma Chi No. 2 1
3 ATO No. 2	Sigma Chi No. 3 0
3 Phi Gam No. 2	DKE No. 2 1
3 Grads	Aycock 0
3 Oakwood Drive	Law School 0

There will be an important intramural managers' meeting this afternoon at 5 o'clock in room 302 of Woollen gym.

Goldwater, Carmichael Named Sports Editors

Bob Goldwater and Billy Carmichael have been named co-sports editors of next year's Daily Tar Heel according to an announcement made last night by Editor Barron Mills.

Goldwater and Carmichael, both of whom have been active in sports writing at Carolina all this year, will replace Irwin Smallwood, who retires after serving in the capacity of sports editor for two years. Smallwood is scheduled to graduate at the end of the first summer term.

Assistant sports editor since November, Goldwater hails from White Plains, N. Y. He has been covering baseball during the spring quarter and has been a member of the Tar Heel staff for almost three years. Carmichael, a native of Chapel Hill, has covered golf during the spring and has been a member of the sports staff since last spring.

Both Carmichael and Goldwater have been night editors for a period of a year or more, and they will take over the reins of the sports department at the beginning of the second summer term.

Morty Schaap, who has been a night editor all this year, will be associate sports editor for the 1947-48 school year.

Bob Cox Gets Ace On Hope Valley Course

Tar Heel golfer Bob Cox stepped on to the top pinnacle of the golfing world last Sunday afternoon when he shot a hole-in-one on the 175-yard, 18th hole of neighboring Hope Valley country club.

The Memphis, Tenn., junior used a No. 5 iron in his effort, the ball hitting the green and rolling dead to the pin for an ace.

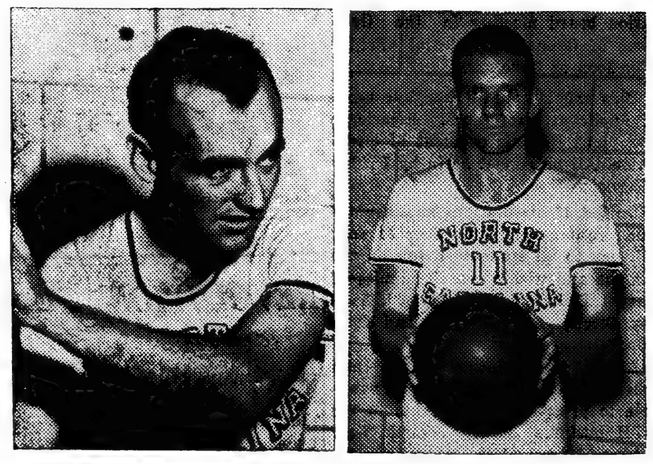
The shot gave Cox a two-under-par 68 for the afternoon, his best round of the season. Playing in the threesome with the Carolina footballer were Dick Doeschler, conference individual co-champion who registered a 70 and Mike Nolan.

Stars May Compete In National Meets

Speculation is running high in regard to the participation of three Tar Heel spring sports teams in post season events.

Plans for local track, tennis and golf stars to take part in national championships are in the development stage and will face final approval by the Athletic council when that group meets tonight.

The tracksters are tentatively entered in the IC4A meet in Philadelphia this Friday and Saturday, with the Carolina entry probably numbering five or six.



Vic Seixas looms as the only local to be entered in the National intercollegiate tennis competition next month in Los Angeles, Cal.

In the National Intercollegiate links tourney set for June 22 at Ann Arbor, Mich., the Tar Heels will most possibly send the entire team of six golfers who recently brought the University's first Southern Conference links title to Chapel Hill.

The charges of Coach Chuck Erickson will have a chance at both team and individual honors if and when the Carolina lads tee off the toast of the country in the mid-western meet.

One more post-season possibility is that a few hand-picked cinder men may see additional action in the NCAA festives scheduled for Salt Lake City in mid-June.

Tar Heels To Play State Here In Kenan Stadium November 8

JIM WHITE (right) and JIM HAMILTON, have been named co-captains for the past season of the White Phantom basketball team. White hails from Kannapolis while Hamilton is a native of Weir, Kan.

Both men were picked on the Southern conference tournament squad during the loop play at Durham last March.

Grid Tilt Moved To Accomodate More Spectators

By Irwin Smallwood

The 1947 Carolina football schedule, which has been a topic for discussion for some months, is finally completely complete. The official card was released about three months ago, but a change was made over the weekend, a change which brings to Chapel Hill November 8 another almost assured sell-out, the renewal of the Carolina-State series.

Switch of the game was made at the request of State athletic officials, and the encounter will still be regarded as a home tilt for the Wolfpack of Coach Beattie Feathers. The change was made, according to Athletic Director John Von Glahn of State, because "it will mean that many more fans will be able to see the game than would have been able to do so if the game were to have been played here (Raleigh)."

Coach Carl Snavely's Tar Heels, who just recently concluded spring practice with a rousing game-like scrimmage, now will meet Georgia, Tennessee, Wake Forest, State and Virginia here in Chapel Hill, giving Carolina a good likelihood of three complete sellouts for the season.

The State game, which was discontinued at the request of State officials after the 1943 contest, will pit together next fall two teams who both participated in bowl events January 1. Carolina dropped a heart-breaker to Georgia, 20-10, in the Sugar Bowl, and State lost to Oklahoma 33-13 in the Gator Bowl.

Although the game this year will be played here in Kenan stadium, next season (1948) the State skirmish will also be staged in Chapel Hill as originally scheduled, thus keeping Carolina's home slate up to par and on a continuity basis.

Carolina men of the gridiron are at present enjoying a welcome and deserved rest, but regular fall practice will begin sometime shortly after September 1. The Tar Heels will open hostilities here against their Sugar Bowl conquerors—Georgia—September 27.

Looking ahead to the 1948 slate, home games that season will include Tennessee again, Duke, Texas, State and one more team to be named later, probably Georgia Tech. Some negotiations have been made with Notre Dame, according to reliable information, but this, of course, is just speculation. There will be, however, a fifth top-notch home foe for 1948.

Swan Song...

Four Carolina Baseballers Play Final Game Tomorrow

At least four Tar Heel baseballers will be performing in their final game for Carolina tomorrow afternoon when the locals wind up their 1947 campaign in the fourth brush with State college.

Jack Hussey, Bo Hackney, Jim Hamilton and Monk Whiteheart are the quartet who will be making their swan song. The first two will be graduating this year while Hamilton and Whiteheart, both with another year of college remaining, have reached the end of their eligibility.

All four men have been important cogs in the Tar Heel machine this year. Hussey, an outfield mainstay in 1941 and 1942, returned to school this past season and has been one of the team's leading hitters. Hackney gained a monogram last year as an outfielder and earned a starting berth this season at second base by virtue of his steady hitting and brilliant fielding.

Hamilton, the Wizard of Weir and one of the school's few double monogram winners, was high scorer on the basketball team during the past season before taking over the third-base position for the diamond nine. Whiteheart has been an outstanding twirler for the Tar Heels for the past two years and currently sports a 5-2 record for this season.

Saturday's victory over State assured the Tar Heels of at least a tie for third place in the Big Four standings. The Blue and White baseballers can gain undisputed possession of the berth with another triumph over the Wolfpack tomorrow. In such an event, the Blue Devils of Duke will capture the Big Four bunting.

Coach Walter Rabb plans to use either Whiteheart or Vinnie DiLorenzo, who pitched a four-hit shutout against State Saturday, in tomorrow's encounter.

DIAMOND DUST: The baseball team will meet this afternoon to elect a captain for the coming year.

Winter Letter Winners May Pick Up Sweaters

All monogram sweater winners for winter sports—basketball, wrestling, boxing, and swimming—may pick up their awards come Monday, June 2, it was announced by University athletic officials yesterday.

The sweaters can be obtained at the Carolina Sports shop downtown by seeing Mr. H. S. McGinty, the owner of the store.

tural aspects of the United States, Senor Zuzunaga expressed the belief that there must be "more emphasis upon the cultural things." "We in Latin America have the impression of the wealthy economic conditions of the U. S. and are completely unfamiliar with its cultural aspects. Your country is very young and has, like my own country, had to concentrate upon its economic conditions. But there must now be a greater intercultural exchange among nations," continued Senor Zuzunaga.

To further this exchange of culture, Senor Zuzunaga is now delivering a series of lectures on Peru in the Spanish Department at U.N.C. in addition to his study of education administration. He is to remain at the University until August and will then embark for London, England, at the special invitation of the British Council, the cultural institution of the British government, to study at Oxford. After a year surveying the British universities, he will proceed to the University of Strasbourg in France. Upon returning to the United States he will visit Columbia University and will then tour the American universities according to an itinerary being prepared by the United States Department of State.

Only 26 years of age, Senor Zuzunaga is well-qualified to represent his government in the many countries he is to visit, for he is one of the best educated men in South America.

Unmarried, the young man—who resembles a great deal the late Rudolph Valentino with his dark hair, flashing, dynamic eyes, white teeth, and well-groomed mustache—has been very much impressed by the American women in Chapel Hill. "They make Chapel Hill very cordial and comforting," he commented.

Arrest Awaits Four of Gang In Lynch Case

First Man Seized Makes Confession

Jackson, N. C., May 27—(UP)—Local authorities tonight said they were preparing to arrest four men as members of an armed white mob that seized Negro Godwin "Buddy" Bush from the jail here early Friday.

Confession Made

Solicitor Ernest Tyler says the arrests will be made on the basis of a confession to the F.B.I. by one of the members of the would-be lynch mob. He said the names of the men would not be revealed until the arrests are made.

F.B.I. Chief J. Edgar Hoover says the man who confessed to taking part in the attempted lynching of the 24-year-old Negro also named seven other white men as members of the mob. Hoover says he has turned the confession over to North Carolina authorities because no violation of federal law is involved. Tyler says the men will be prosecuted for kidnapping which carries a mandatory life sentence in North Carolina.

Mrs. Martha Truman Rallies Once More

Grandview, Mo., May 27—(UP)—Latest reports indicate that Mrs. Martha Truman has rallied again after her overnight slump. The 94-year-old lady spent an up-and-down day, but in the afternoon, she began once again to show signs of improvement. The President says she slept comfortably and is holding her own. However, he is not too optimistic about the doctor's report of improvement.

Gas, Electric Labor Call Off Walk-Out

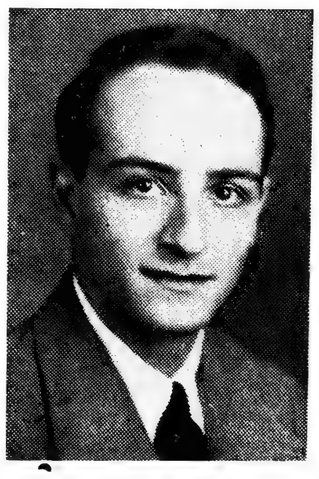
Paris, May 27.—(UP)—Eighty-five thousand Parisian gas and electric workers, threatened with arrest and prison terms, have called off their scheduled strike. In an attempt to thwart the walkout threat, the government had invoked drastic measures, including seizure of the plants and the drafting of the workers into the army.

University Receives $105,000 Endowments

Announced at the board of trustees meeting in Raleigh yesterday were two endowments to the University totaling $105,000. Largest of the two sums was a gift of $80,000 presented by Ralph C. Price and Mrs. Joseph M. Bryan in memory of their father Julian Price, late president of the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance company of Greensboro. The money is to be used to establish the Julian Price professorship in Life Insurance in the commerce school here.

From the estate of the late O. Max Gardner, former governor of the state and Ambassador to the court of Saint James at the time of his death, came another $25,000 to set up a yearly award to the faculty member who makes the greatest contribution to the welfare of the state.

President Frank Graham, Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., Business Manager C. E. Teague, and Miss Billie Curtis, Secretary of the board of trustees attended the meeting from the University.



GASTONIA CLUB

A special meeting of the Gastonia-Carolina club will be held on the steps of South building at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

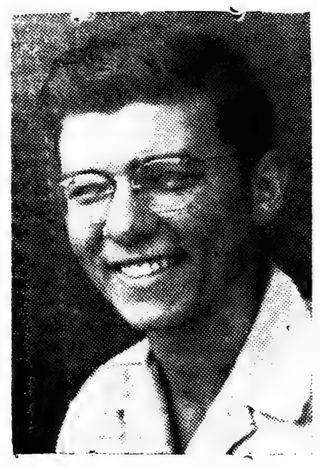
Bill Lamkin To Work For DTH As Summer Managing Editor

BILL SELIG

Howard Bailey Succeeds Selig



Replacing T. Earl Heffner as Daily Tar Heel managing editor for the summer terms will be Bill Lamkin, veteran member of the staff and present make-up man at the Orange print shop where this newspaper is published.

Editor Barron Mills also announced the appointment of Howard Bailey as new business manager to succeed Bill Selig with the printing of the first issue of the summer session on June 12. Both appointments are subject to approval by the Publications board.

Heffner is leaving school only for the summer months. He has been offered a job with the Charlotte Observer where he has worked as a sports writer and assistant state editor, will resume work with the DTH in the fall following Lamkin's graduation at the end of the second summer session.

A veteran of the Army Air forces, Lamkin is a senior in the journalism school. He has worked on the DTH for over 20 months as copy-reader and night editor. Native of Arcadia, La., Lamkin has 18 months experience on the Daily Town Talk of Alexander, La,

Bailey, who has served as assistant business manager for the current school year, is also an AAF veteran. He is a rising senior in the school of commerce, is from Chadbourne.

Trustees Pass New Regulations On Local Traffie

The Board of Trustees meeting in Raleig hyesterday passed in toto a 14-page recommendation of traffic regulation of traffic regulations to be applied to the three campuses of the Greater University.

The new regulations, which will become effective here during the summer outline parking areas and rules, set seed limits and provide a one-dollar fine for all violations.

In addition the regulations require registration of all student-owned automobiles with the University, and use of special identification plates to be issued by the University.

The traffic recommendations affecting Chapel Hill were drawn up and submitted to the trustees by a committee composed of Duke Wilder, chairman, Clifford Pace of the Institute of Government, J. B. Linker of the faculty, and J. A. Williams of the business office.

CLASSROOM OPEN

Three classrooms in Bingham hall, three in Alumni building, and several in Peabody will be open all night for study starting this evening and continuing until the last day of examinations.

Officers Picked For Legislature In Final Session

By Bookie Jabine

After a minor fight over one of President Tom Eller's appointments to the Dance committee had been ironed out, the Student Legislature in their final session of the year last night, proceeded to nod their approval of the remainder of the executive nominees, and to elect officers of the Legislature for the term.

Party Line

The verbal fracas was over the appointment of Tom Lockhart to the Dance committee. Despite the vigorous words of the president of the student body in defense of Lockhart, the legislature, voting down a party line, rejected the appointment by a vote of 16-15. Observers noted that the majority of the dissenting vote came from the Student party.

Neither was the party line spurned in the election of legislature officers as the Student party ran off with all but one of the posts. Charlie Long, SP candidate for vice-president in the recent elections, was named speaker pro-tem by the assembly, defeating Tag Montague by 17-15.

Peter Gerns was elected to the office of Parliamentarian. Gerns received 16 votes to 14 cast for his opponent Ben Wood.

By a vote of 17-11, Basil Sherill won the position of chairman of the Powerful Ways and Means committee from veteran legislator Ernie House.

Miles Smith was chosen head of the Elections committee, winning over Bob Collins, former chairman of the Rules committee.

To succeed Collins the assembly chose Herman Baker by a 17-13 count. He defeated Steve Nimocks.

Bill Mackie was re-elected to the chairmanship of the Finance committee. Charlie Norton was the losing candidate.

The final election of the session was that of legislature representative to the Graham Memorial board of Directors. Tag Montague, present chairman of that panel, was elected to retain that position.

Sherard Lists Names Of New Cheerleaders

Head Cheerleader Myrt Sherard released names of next year's cheerleading squad yesterday afternoon after extensive tryouts, which have been going on since early last week, finally came to a close.

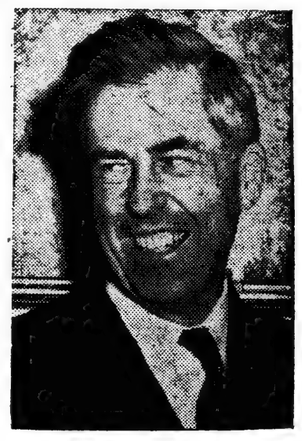
Girls in the squad are Mary and Ruth Moore, Phyllis Eisenhour, Jean Ann Ramsdell, Evelyn Pettit, and Marguerite Johnson.

Men chosen are Charlie Stancell, Jerry Pence, Mac McLeese, Pat McKinsey, and Bill Basnight.

Alternates for next year's squad are, girls: "Bill" Henderson and Chris White; men: Lanier Davis and Dick Wofford.

Former Democratic Vice President May Present Informal Address Here

By Earl Heffner



Henry Wallace, the jumping bean in the Democrats political basket, will be in Chapel Hill on June 5 where he is expected to give an informal address in Hill hall.

The former vice president, who is an ardent foe of the Truman Doctrine, a get tough policy toward seats of Communism, is booked for a speech in Raleigh that evening. His subject is to be "The Road to Peace."

Once a champion of the liberals, later discounted as a political corpse, Wallace has been stumping the country lately, has suprised political observers by attracting vast crowds.

As a result, an Associated Press story recently reported that Wallace begins to loom as a definitely possible running mate with President Truman in 1948.

Information that the Democratic politico, who has riled President Truman and South Carolina's former Secretary of State Jimmy Byrnes, will speak here was released by Miss Mary Price, executive secretary of the Southern Conference of Human Welfare.

In Hill Hall Talk

Dr. Graham to Stress Need For Federal Education Aid

By Chuck Hauser

Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the Greater University of North Carolina, will stress the need for federal aid to education in an open address tomorrow evening at 8:30 in Hill hall. The speech is being sponsored by 16 campus organizations, headed by Dr. Graham, while not pushing either one of the two important education bills now before Congress, will discuss each one.

The two bills involved are the Taft bill, S.472, and the Aiken bill, S.199. Both bills are before the upper house, providing for almost the same thing, with the main exception that S.472, sponsored by Senator Taft and seven colleagues, schedules no federal control of alloted funds, while S.199, introduced by Senator Aiken, has a certain degree of federal influence on fund expenditures, which is apparently not desired by influential people of the southern states.

The 15 organizations sponsoring President Graham's talk, besides the Students for Democratic Action, are the AVC, Coed Senate, CPU, CRIL, Di, Grail, IRC, Phi Delta Kappa, Phi, SCHW, UVA, Valkyries, UWA, YWCA, and YMCA.

Student Voice Recital Will Be Held Tonight

The second student voice recital this quarter will be presented this evening at 8:30 in the main lounge of Graham Memorial by students in the University Music department.

Students appearing in the recital are John Brinegar, tenor, John Bridges, baritone, Hilda Frances Lawrence, soprano, Richard Cox, baritone, and Edwin Easter, tenor.

The program will include compositions by Ross, A. Scarlatti, Schubert, Faure, Griffes, and Belloc-Hageman.

Accompanists for the singers are Jeanne Fornoff, William Waters, Martha Hall, and Edwin Steed.

Students to Help Determine Efficiency of Instruction

By Merrily Brooks

Students will have an opportunity today to help determine the efficiency of departmental intruction in a poll to be conducted by a committee appointed by Student Body President Tom Eller from 8 o'clock this morning until 6 o'clock this evening, Eller announced last night.

Members of a faculty committee have expressed their deep concern in learning the student's reaction on the quality of instruction in the University, and for this reason the poll is being taken. They are anxious to get the student's "honest and fair" judgment, and it is therefore very necessary that every student vote for the success of this experiment.

Polling will be done in four centrally located places on campus. Graham Memorial and the 'Y' will be open from 8 to 6 for voting. Lenoir dining hall and the Carolina inn cafeteria will be open for voting during meal hours.

The main purpose of this poll is to get every student's objective opinion of the effectiveness of department instruction. The students and the departments will benefit greatly if all the students vote. Results of this poll will be published in the Tar Heel during the summer quarter and also will be reprinted in the Tar Heel next fall.

The following is a copy of the ballot. This ballot may be used in casting of votes.

DIRECTIONS:

(1) Write within the parentheses the name of the department in which each of your present (Spring quarter) courses is being taken;

(2) Indicate the level of each course (freshman, sophomore, junior, senior, graduate);

(3) Underline the word that shows your carefully considered judgment of the effectiveness of the instruction in each course.

Course 1: Department
Level of course
Instruction in this course; excellent; good; fair; poor; very poor

Course 2: Department
Level of course
Instruction in this course; excellent; good; fair; poor; very poor

Course 3: Department

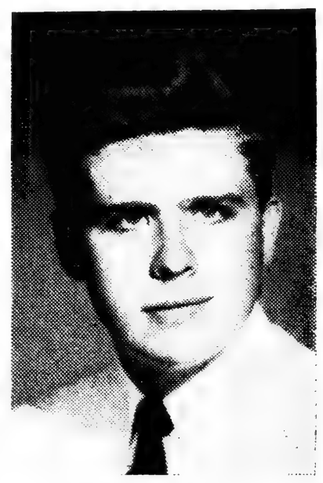
New Political 'Whip'

Charlie Long Elected New Chairman of Student Party



Charlie Long, present member of the Student Legislature and chairman of the Fact-Finding board, was elected chairman of the Student party in balloting held Monday afternoon. Long is a former vice-chairman of the SP.

Herman Baker, retiring chairman of the party, received the vcie-chairman's post. Baker is also a member of the Legislature, in addition to being on the Interdormitory council and the cross-country track squad. He is also a delegate to the National Students Organization.

Margaret Goodman was elected treasurer, while Gilbert "Bugs" Burnett, Student Legislature member, was re-elected business manager and treasurer.

Daily Tar Heel Newsman Bill Sexton took the position of publicity director.

The following were elected as members of the party steering committee: Bill Mackie, Mary Swann, Gran Childress, Bob Henessee, Floyd Jones, Joan Sink.

CHARLIE LONG

NO AVC MEETING

The Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee will not meet tonight as originally announced.

Concert Scheduled By GM for Tomorrow

Graham Memorial's last entertainment of the quarter will be presented tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock when Ned Reap leads the student union dance band, "The Dream Serenaders," in a half-hour lawn concert in front of the union.

Bit of Nostalgia

A bit of nostalgia has already begun to creep into many of the number that will pack their bags for the last time after examinations. Many are beginning to take cognizance of the fact that here there is something more than just the University and the little college town called Chapel Hill. The word "tradition" that they have heard repeated time and time again is beginning to have a meaning. A meaning never before realized. A meaning that cannot be found in Webster's or adaquately defined, but a meaning that fiinds satisfaction in the innerself. Many are beginning to realize that Chapel Hill and the University are synonymous.

But the University will not lose when it graduates some of its rank, but rather it will add to its prestige by sending out a large number of active, living advertisements.

In the past it has been proven that once a man has matriculated at the University and received his degree he enjoys reminiscing over his college days and he will do anything in his power to stump for Carolina and relate of its traditions. So even though we will miss seeing the familiar faces on the campus walk and in class and the Y court, we will know that their thoughts are still with us and the word Carolina will be uttered at every turn.

Staff Orchids

Every business and organization has certain personnel that it terms indispensable and the Daily Tar Heel staff is losing three such men that will be hard to replace.

Retiring-editor Bill Woestendiek guided the publication during a difficult year. A year that saw the paper get its foothold as a daily. A year when the student body was more heterogenous than any year in the history of the University and more difficult to please. But Bill made his decisions as to what he thought was best for the campus and he stuck by his guns. Woestendiek will be greatly missed by the publication—such an illustrious and capable journalist is hard to forget and harder to replace.

Business Manager Bill Selig has been the man behind the Daily Tar Heel who has received little praise for his accomplishments, but has to continually turn an ear to the problems of the merchants and the heads of the staff departments. The light in Selig's office is rarely turned off before the wee hours of the morning and the problems of another day of publication are solved.

Irwin Smallwood, the two-year letterman as DTH sports editor, will sign his final "30" at the close of the first summer term. Irwin and his "Sports Spins" column will be a great loss for the publication.

Roland "Foo" Giduz is another conscientious mainstay of the staff that merits recognition. Giduz, who edited the style book for the paper, served as managing editor during the past year. He is not leaving the staff, but is retiring as managing editor so that he can serve in several capacities and "baby" his recently-acquired speed graphic camera.

Final Edition

With this issue the Daily Tar Heel ceases publication until the first day of summer school. Originally we had planned to adhere to our previous policy of printing an edition each day until examinations begin. But conditions beyond our control have prevented this. Our supply of newsprint was exhausted with this issue and no more could be secured.

This publication is not the only college daily that has had its newsprint troubles. The Daily Texan, the New York Times of the collegiate newspaper world, was forced to cut down the size of their editions from 10 and 14 pages to a mere four page edition for several days.

We will continue publication with the first day of summer school classes and will publish two editions a week thereafter during the session—Wednesday and Saturday mornings.

However, the summer editions will lack the syndicated features—Drew Pearson, Mauldin, and Li'l Abner together with the United Press releases. We are discontinuing these services during the summer in order to save our funds for use next fall.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publications Board of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where it is published daily, except Mondays, examination and vacation periods; during the official summer terms, it is published semi-weekly on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Chapel Hill, N. C., under the act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price: $5.00 per college year; $3.00 per quarter.

Behind the Headlines

Graduation Standards Are Clarified; Facts Behind Wallace Address at UC

By Mel Cohen

Joe College has not been led astray by the administration. The faculty decision raising minimum graduation standards isn't as fouled up as first reports indicated.

This commendable action affects only scholars receiving their sheepskins after March, 1949. In addition, seniors graduating this spring are not affected. However, any students who will receive their releases with the class of 1949 or thereafter had better duck.

These post-1949 graduates will have to meet an overall "C" average on future subjects taken. All grades received this quarter and in the past are subject only to the former minimum standard that stated: 50 percent of grades must be at least "C," the other half, at least D. That, in a nut-shell, is what Dean Wells said yesterday.

The numerical values formula for averaging grades which was published yesterday in the DTH is purely tentative. Regardless, a mistake was made. If the plan is adopted, a grade of E will not carry a rating of —1, since an E must be removed from the books before graduation. Instead, an F will accentuate the negative. There is no indication that this formula will or will not be adopted. That decision is yet to be reached by the committee on instruction.

Wallace Was Barred

After Henry Wallace was barred from speaking at the Hollywood bowl last week by University of California authorities, he spoke at the west gate of the Berkley campus.

Before the address was delivered, says an article in The Daily Californian, student newspaper at the University of California, a petition requesting permission for an on-campus meeting was signed by more than 2,000 students. The petition read in part:

"We the undersigned students, earnestly request that the senior class council examine the relative importance of the Senior Farewell program and the ideas of Henry Wallace; further, we petition that the council, after having considered these facts, offer the University meeting placed at its disposal to Henry Wallace so that he may address the students of the University in a manner befitting his stature and ideas.

"We do not intend this as a subscription to the views of Wallace, necessarily, but instead this is an expression of a desire to provide students of the University of California with an opportunity to become better acquainted with the controversial opinions on our nation's policies."

However, Monroe E. Deutsch, vice-president and provost of the University of California, said that "the reasons offered in refusing a previous student request still hold and with even greater force. George A Pettit, assistant to the president of the University, stated "they have put the University in a most embarrassing position. It is doubtful whether any decision which might now be made will remove that embarrassment."

A group of students, organized into the Students Committee to Hear Henry Wallace went ahead with plans for a street meeting in the event that permission for an on-campus meeting was not granted. They obtained a permit from the Berkeley Police department.

"Hey that hot dog was for me."

Basic Liberties Crippled

Colleges Are Being Robbed Of Freedom, Relates Seldes

By Garry Fullerton

A wave of restrictions on academic freedom is sweeping college campuses all over the country, according to George Seldes in a recent survey in his newsletter, "In Fact." These restrictions range all the way from denying charters to student organizations to outlawing the teaching of "politically controversial subjects."

"At Syracuse university," Seldes points out, "an independent liberal student group with no affiliation with any national organization was denied a charter because it would discuss 'controversial issues'." Similar instances have occurred at Hunter college where the Progressive Citizens of America were unable to obtain a charter, and at Gorge Washington university where AVC was forbidden to organize. "At Wayne university in Detroit," Seldes continues, "Dr. David D. Henry, college president, was told the school would lose $2,700,00 in state aid unless it barred an AYD chapter from the campus."

Freedom Curtailed

Student freedom has been far more drastically curtailed, however, at some universities. "At the University of California no student may participate in political activity off the campus if in so doing he identifies himself as a student at the college." And "at Cornell university no leaflet may be distributed on the campus unless it contains 'both sides' of a question." (Apparently an anti-Communist or anti-Fascist leaflet, then, would have to give the Communist or Fascist points of view as well.) "At the University of Southern California the sports editor of the Daily Trojan was placed on probation for writing that discrimination against Negro athletes was one of the reasons for the decline in prowess of USC teams." And to top the list, "At Michigan State college seven students were placed on "permanent disciplinary probation' because two of them had distributed a handbill urging support for a State Fair Employment Practices Act."

Students have not been alone in having their basic liberties crippled. Faculty, too, have felt the weight of unreasonable restraints. "At the University of Wisconsin former Representative Howard MacMurray was refused a professorship because he had campaigned for political office." This in a supposedly democratic nation where citizen participation in government is encouraged!

Used Legislation

Finally, "in California 15 bills restricting academic freedom have been introduced in the Senate. . ." "One of them outlaws the teaching of 'politically controversial subjects'." One has only to pause to imagine what the application of such a law would mean to this university. There is scarcely a course in the school that would not be ruled out.

It must be emphasized that these are not isolated cases. They are merely a few examples of a general trend, a trend which if followed to its logical conclusion would approach very closely the "thought control" systems of the totalitarian nations.

We can be thankful, in the midst of this tide of crippling regulations, that at the University we have preserved a considerable measure of freedom. Here we have no censorship of student publications or any prescription of what faculty may teach. Here any crackpot who can persuade someone to listen to him can start an organization, and here a student can be suspended only by his fellow students and only for a violation of the Honor Code. But we must do more than simply be thankful. We must be eternally vigilant to see to it that this freedom is preserved and that this university does not follow so many others into academic totahtarianism.

Dance Explanation

Editor:

A dance for freshmen and sophomores was planned for this past Saturday night, May 24. The purpose of this letter is to explain why this dance was not held. It was the desire of the executive officers of these two classes that some social function be held in order that the classes start founctioning as an unified organization again. The officers of the classes met a number of times formulating plans for the dance which was to be held May 24. Arrangements for financial backing from the Order of the Grail were made. Tentative booking for an orchestra, reservation of the Woman's Gym, plans for decorations and for refreshments were made. Committees pertinent to carrying out the plans were appointed, committee members being the few interested underclassmen who responded to the announcements of joint freshman-sophomore class meeting. Time after time announcement appeared in the Daily Tar Heel to the effect that these joint meetings would be held in order to complete plans for this social function. At none of these meetings were more than 20 people, who could not possibly represent the 1500 Freshmen or 1200 Sophomores. When the gross lack of interest on the part of underclassmen became apparent the persons working for the dance felt that it could not be successful. To those who worked for and wanted this dance, for the underclassmen we take this opportunity to express our appreciation, and to the large number who showed no interest whatsoever it is sincerely hoped that next year the underclassmen will be able to function and that they will devote their interests and efforts to what programs the succeeding officers of the two classes plan for next year. Thanks to the Order of the Grail for offering financial assistance in order that the freshman and sophomore classes might start functioning again.

Executive officer of the freshmen and sophomore classes.

Clothing Drive

Dear Editor:

It has come to my attention that several people who contributed clothing to the drive sponsored by CRIL have objected to the story in the Daily Tar Heel which stated that the clothes will be sent to neutral countries abroad. I should like, at this time, to refute that information as false. It was not an error of the newspaper writer, rather it was my fault. I based my information on a bulletin I received from an agency other than the one through which the Chapel Hill contribution is being made. It was not the intention of CRIL or any representative thereof to make any discrimination or to delude any contributors. I hope this letter will clarify the matter.

The clothes collected Thursday and from now until the end of school, will be channeled through the World Church service. This agency distributed the clothes through Christian churches abroad, and therefore no distinction between nations is considered. This does not mean that Non Christians will be overlooked. It merely means that the Christian churches are the distributing agencies. In answer to several letters I have received, I should like to apologize for my mistake and add that any one who did or might in the future contribute clothing to the drive, and who is not satisfied as to the correction of the mistake please contact me, and we shall try to adjust things.

Ruth Evans, Chairman of the drive.

Efficiency

To the Editor:

Reference is made to last Sunday's DTH article (25 May) on Departmental Efficiency and the poll of the student body on same this Wednesday.

This article states "that members of a faculty committee have expressed 'deep concern' as to the quality of instruction on campus. . ." If I were a member of this faculty committee and was really "deeply concerned" about the quality of instruction on the campus I would do the following:

1. Go by library or DTH office and read the following letters to the Editor and articles concerning anonymous constructive criticism of the faculty by students: 16 and 25 May 46, 5 and 9 Oct. 46, 28 Nov. 46, 4, 7, and 10 Dec. 46.

2. Contact Dewey Dorsett and obtain the following from him: A. Information as to number of criticisms received from students by the committee he set up last December to receive student's criticisms of faculty and action taken by his committee. B. Borrow from him the printed Michigan State college form for student criticism of faculty which the undersigned procured and turned over to him last December. (Michigan State has successfully used this form for about two years.)

Tar Heels Face State In Finale Here Today

SPORT SPINS - - with

IRWIN SMALLWOOD

THERE ALWAYS COMES a time in the life of a writer when something unpleasant has to be written, and today we find ourselves in just that situation. It's our last column as sports editor of the Daily Tar Heel, and believe it or not, it is a sad occasion for your correspondent, who after nearly three years of association with Carolina sports prepares to step out into the cruel, cruel world.

For all practical purposes this is our final effort for the Daily Tar Heel, although we will remain in Chapel Hill throughout the first term and continue to contribute to the bi-weekly edition of the Tar Heel. Following graduation, we will leave the Hill that has provided the most exciting three years of our short life, but only as far as Greensboro, where we will join the sports staff of the Daily News there. And make no mistake, there will be no forgetting of the Tar Heels and Chapel Hill for us.

During the remaining lines today, we will do a little reminiscing over our stay here in Chapel Hill, and go on to give a little credit where we believe it may have been overlooked before.

First we will review a few of the exciting spectacles at which we have had the pleasure of being in attendance—from our first wrestling match up to and including the present season. It seems a long time ago since we first talked ourselves into trying for the grappling team and entered that first meet with Duke. We lost—but that letter we finally got is among our most coveted possessions.

There was the 1944-45 basketball season. The dark horse White Phants, playing for the first time under Ben Carnevale, coming up to grab the Southern conference title. . .Then in the fall of 1945 came the return of Carl Snavely, the old Silver Fox of the gridiron, and better football to Carolina. It was a tough season, but we split 10 games, and lost to Duke by only 14-7 (it was 33-0 in 1944). . .

With the conclusion of 1945 football came the basketball, and hopes were high. The hopes payed off, and the runner-up crown in the NCAA tourney resulted. We were privileged to see the majority of the basketball that year, and the campaign was highlighted by a 64-63 defeat at the hands of ORD in Greensboro, with Johnny Dillon hooking in 27, and the return match here with Carolina running away and Jim Jordan bucketing 32.

We took a breather from Carolina and V-12, a trip to the coast, and got a discharge from the Navy in July. . .Carolina was our destination again in September of last year, and there began the greatest year we have known for Carolina sports, something we will really remember for many years to come.

Football came first, Choo Choo Justice and all the rest. It was a season filled with thrills, ending in the glorious victory over Duke, the first since 1940, and the Sugar Bowl classic. . .Our greatest thrill in the way of football games during 1946 came in Miami's Orange Bowl, where an underdog Tar Heel eleven surprised Miami university with a rousing 21-0 triumph. Justice ran 66 yards from punt formation on the third play of the game. . .During the same fall period, the cross country team got blessed revenge on Navy and went undefeated for its best season in years.

Winter brought on basketball, Coach Tom Scott, and the failure of Dillon. The Phantoms, with Bob Paxton, the greatest rebound man we have ever witnessed, and Jim White, an outstanding mainstay, teamed with newcomers Jim Hamilton, Nemo Nearman and Norm Kohler to finish strong and almost slip the SC crown away from State's Hoosier Hot Shots. . .The biggest thrill was the pair of one-sided victories over favored Duke. . ."Quinny" Quinlan's ACC champion wrestlers, and champion swimmers of the conference, and the undefeated winter track squad with proud drawling Dale Ranson beaming were also great.

This spring has provided still more glory for the Tar Heels of 1946-47, with the outstanding trackmen of Fetzer and Ranson sweeping through undefeated to conference laurels, and the linksmen of Chuck Erickson coming from an underdog role to gain the championship in their sport. The netters were also sensational in their own right, losing only the title to William and Mary in the end. Vic Seixas, the Tar Heel ace, provided local net fans with the best tennis in years. . .And finally the baseballers, although they had more than their share of tough luck, finished a pretty good ball club, with Vinnie DiLorenzo the shining star.

That's about it, our impression of three years of Tar Heeling, and we close with a few brief laurels: We owe much to Coach Bob Fetzer, Chuck Erickson, Carl Snavely and all the rest of the coaching staff for their co-operation and their good work which brought Carolina six out of 10 official conference titles during 1946-47. To the boys we say a hearty hats off to Jim White, Tar Hole who is really deserving of much more than a simple pat on the back, but who is the recipient of praise. In this connection, we want to mention a few Tar Heel linesmen who, although, unable to get a good grip on the ball, were looking for recognition, namely Tommy Lee Sanfargey, Bob Mott, Stan Marczyk, George Sparger, John Joe Pecaro, and Mike Rubel.

We close on a greeting from Ben Carnevale to all his Chapel Hill friends that Jim Jordan will graduate in June, and a simple GOOD LUCK to the Tar Heel of 1947-48. See you in New Orleans January 1.

Phi Gams, Med School Gain Mural Cups

Betas Capture 'Shoe Crown

Oakwood Drive Cops Dorm Tennis Title

By Gil McLeod

Phi Gamma Delta and Med School were yesterday afternoon named the outstanding representatives of the respective fraternity and dormitory divisions of Carolina's mural athletic program during the past year, and they will be awarded the division championship cups this evening at the annual Awards Night in Hill hall.

The cup will be presented by Mural Director Walter Rabb, who will also present awards to this year's outstanding mural athletes and to those organizations that were winners in the various sports.

Permanent Possession

The Phi Gams gained permenent possession of the fraternity division cup in that they have won it a total of three times since it was organized in 1938. They won it for the first time in 1934, and again last year.

Tommy Stratford of the Phi Gams was named the outstanding intramural athlete of the fraternity division, and Walter Cottingham of the Grads won that honor in the dormitory bracket. The outstanding intramural manager awards will go to Charlie Nixon of Sigma Chi and Joe Kumpe of Aycock.

In yesterday's mural play, the Betas became Carolina's horseshoe champions when they out-pitched the Independents, 2-1, and Ookwood Drive won the tennis championship of the dorm division with a 3-0 win over the Grads.

In the horseshoe finals, the Independents started strong in winning the first doubles match, but the Betas found their aim midway in the second set and came through to win the rest in true championship form.

Oakwood Drive's well balanced tennis crew was just too much for the Grads as it registered a 3-0 triumph to gain the dorm tennis title.

The semi-finals of the fraternity tennis tourney were run off yesterday, with Phi Gam No. 2 and ATO No. 3 coming out on top of the heap. They will be matched in the finals this afternoon at 1 o'clock on courts one through six.

The fraternity winner will face Oakwood Drive tomorrow to decide the campus champ.

Yesterday's mural results:

Sports Staff Wanted

All students interested in working on the Daily Tar Heel sports staff during either session of summer school are requested to come to the sports office this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Five Tracksters Set To Enter IC4A Meet

Five trackmen will represent North Carolina in the IC4A meet in Philadelphia this coming weekend, according to an announcement made last night by Coach Dale Ranson.

Those making the trip will be Chunk Simmons, Bob Seligman, Jack Milne, Jimmy Miller and Jack Moody.

All five men rank as definite threats in their respective specialties. Simmons looms as one of the favorites in both hurdle events, Seligman is a contender in the shot put and discus events, Moody is in top shape for the high jump, and Milne and Miller, Carolina's distance twins, rank well up the list in the mile and two-mile events.

There will be an important meeting of all members of the track team at Fetzer field this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Pictures of the trackmen will be taken at this time.

These five men plus several others on the team may also take part in the National Intercollegiate meet in Salt Lake City next month.

Locals After Second in Row Over Hard-Hitting Wolfpack

DiLorenzo, Ramsey Slated to Start on Hill; Win Gives Carolina Third Place in Circuit

By Bob Goldwater

After a long, hard schedule of 25 games, the Carolina baseballers finally reach the end of the 1947 trail this afternoon when the Tar Heels play host to the pennant-anxious Wolfpack of State college in a Big Four tussle slated for 4 o'clock.

The visitors need today's engagement even more than the locals, since a victory for the Techmen will enable them to deadlock Duke for the Big Four bunting. Carolina can gain undisputed possession of third place with a win but otherwise drops into a tie with Wake Forest for the cellar position.

Although there is a possibility of a change in starting pitchers, the Tar Heels will probably line up with the exact same team that turned in a 4-0 shutout over State in Raleigh last Saturday. If Vinnie DiLorenzo, who hurled the four-hit triumph, is ready to go, the starting assignment will be his, since southpaws have been more effective against State this year. Otherwise, Monk Whiteheart, Carolina's high-kicking righthander, will handle the mound chores.

The other starters will be Jack Hussey, Bo Hackney, Rip Ryan and Jim Hayworth in the infield, and Harry Beason, Whitey Black and Jim Kelly in the outfield. A good day at the plate for Kelly will give him the Big Four hitting title.

Opposing the Tar Heels will be big Curt Ramsey, the loop's leading pitcher. Ramsey downed Carolina in an 11-inning struggle last week.

DIAMOND DUST: There's a slight chance that John Gregory, out of the past few games with an injured hand, might see some action today.

THE PRIDE of High Point, Jim Hayworth, who is pictured above, was elected co-captain of the 1948 baseball team yesterday along with Jim "Daddy" Hamilton. Both players are third-basemen.

For Outstanding Students

Awards Night this Evening Will Honor Student Leaders

By Charlie Gibson

At 7:15 this evening in Hill hall, outstanding students in all fields of campus activity will be honored publicly at Awards Night with Chancellor R. B. House presiding over this, the first post-war recognition ritual for extra-curriculum leaders. The program will feature an address by President Frank Graham, music by the University band, and presentation of various awards, medals, scholarships, and trophies.

Students who have shown exceptional ability through their service, scholarship, and character will be recognized at this time. A complete list of the awards to be made individually is as follows:

John J. Parker, Jr., medal for unique leadership in student government; Algernon Sydney Sullivan award for the man and the woman in the graduating class best typifying brotherly love; Ernest H. Abernethy cash prize of $50 for the most commendable work on student publications; Patterson gold medal for general athletic performance; Foy Roberson, Jr., gold medal for the chief contribution to morale on the basketball team; Valkyrie Cup for the most praiseworthy University coed; Alpha Chi Sigma cash prize of $100 for the undergraduate chemistry student best exemplifying high scholarship, leadership, and personality; University chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution's medal for the N.R.O.T.C. trainee best qualified in naval gunnery and ordnance; American Revolution and Josephus Daniels scholarship medals for the most capable and conscientious N.R.O.T.C. candidates; Kay Kyser scholarship in dramatic art; Frederick H. Koch scholarship in playwriting; Joseph D. Feldman award in playwriting; and Carolina Playmaker's special award for theatrical advancement.

Laud Members

Several organizations will laud their most prominent members. The students who have served well for a period of two years on either the Publications Union board, the Daily Tar Heel, or the Carolina magazine will receive publications keys. Rho Chi, national pharmaceutical society, will announce its recent initiates here. Reviewing work of the past season, the Playmakers will present mask plaques to extraordinary dramatists. The Woman's Athletic association, tallying service on the point system, will present class numerals, monograms, and blazers as well as intramural trophies.

Oliver K. Cornwell, general supervisor of the entire Awards Night program, urges all interested persons — especially those who may be eligible for any award mentioned above—to be in Hill hall at 7:15. If the response is promising, this ceremony is again to become an annual tribute to University students of high quality.

Phi Assembly Set To Hold Meetings In Summer Terms

The Phi assembly will inaugurate its first summer session since 1940 with the coming of the summer term. Seven regular members will form the nucleus of the assembly with new applicants being giving an associate membership; 25 new students have been admitted to the organization thus far, among them a former trial judge advocate and two army colonels.

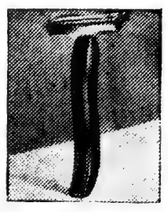
The first meeting of the summer term will be held June 17 at 7:30 in Phi hall, fourth floor, New East. Topic selected for discussion at that time is a resolution to permit the federal government to bring action against guilty parties in lynch cases.

The 152-year-old assembly will feature several prominent speakers during the coming months. Among state leaders already contacted are Governor Cherry and ex-Governor Broughton.

First guest speaker of the fall term will be Tom Eller, president of the student body. His speech is expected to take the shape of a "State of the Union" message in which he will advocate a program of sound student government, bringing forth a number of constructive proposals to be considered by student government leaders.

Summer Playschool Plans Are Complete

Plans have been completed for the opening of a playschool to be held during both summer terms from June 12 through August 29. Arranged for children from three to five and a half years, the school will be open from 9 o'clock in the morning until 12 o'clock noon Monday through Friday.



Mrs. Peter Lavin, a graduate of the Women's College of the University, will be director of the school, which will be held at Mrs. R. H. Wettach's kindergarten. Mrs. Lavin taught first grade in the Raleigh public schools for a number of years.

Interested student and faculty parents can obtain information about the school by calling Mrs. Lavin at 7136 from 6 to 9 o'clock in the evening.

Publications Heads Will Pick Campus Beauty Queen Today

Winner Has Chance for Movie Contract, Plus Week's Modeling in New York City

The heads of the various campus publications will use their "seeing eyes" this afternoon to select a campus beauty queen to be entered in a national contest sponsored by the Kaufman Company, an advertising agency of New York City.

The Carolina queen will be chosen from a number of coeds who have already been tabbed as queens over a period of a year, such as the May Queen, Yackety Yack Queen, and the Sweetheart of Sigma Chi.

National Recognition

The girls picked as Campus Queens will serve as models for a luxury item whose slogan is "Fit for a Queen." The name of the item was withheld since it will not appear on the market until August.

Carolina's Campus Queen will be entailed to work a week in New York as a model and will receive a handsome remuneration for her labor. She will also have a chance for a movie contract with Eagle-Lion pictures, J. Arthur Rank's new American motion picture company. The lucky coed will receive national recognition since the publicity is planned on a large national basis.

The girls vowing for beauty honors will be Betty Greve, May Queen; Joyce Peterson, Yack Beauty Queen; and Evelyn Pettitt, Sigma Chi cover girl.

The reason for the rapid selection of a girl who already has a "queen title" is that the choice must be turned in by June 15.

Phi Assembly Makes Plans For Summer

Carrying forth plans for an active summer session, the Assembly of the Philanthropic Literary Society has been conducting membership interviews yesterday and today, and an estimated thirty-five affiliate members have already been approved and will be admitted at the regular session Tuesday night.

A number of students who applied for membership have not been given interviews because their applications arrived too late. All students who have applied without receiving acknowledgement or who wish to apply must attend a special orientation meeting in the Phi Hall on the fourth floor of New East Monday night at 7:30 o'clock.

The regular session will be held at the same time Tuesday night. Visitors are welcome to each meeting. Tuesday night Chester zum Brunnen, speaker pro tem, will introduce a bill designed to bring to the floor a discussion of lynching and anti-lynching laws in the South.

Among the planned projects of the Phi this summer are weekly supper meetings, several picnics, and speaker forums. Summer school students who do not plan to return this fall, as well as regular students, are being admitted this summer as affiliate members.

Robert Morrison will continue as speaker during the summer session; zum Brunnen, speaker pro tempore; Mary Sheely Little, clerk; Ray Conner, treasurer; Bryan Griswold, sergeant-at-arms; and Russell Johnson, chairman of membership committee.

Novel by Fitz-Simons To Be Made into Movie

Foster Fitz-Simons, member of the Dramatic art staff, has been informed by Rinehart and Company, publishers of his novel, "Bright Leaf," that motion picture rights to the forthcoming publication have been sold to Warner Brothers for $75,000.

Rinehart and Company commissioned Fitz-Simons to write a novel eight years ago, and the author had been working on it sporadically ever since. "Bright Leaf" is about North Carolina tobacco moguls. It will be published in the fall, and will be made into a movie later.

Slocum Takes Part In Band Convention

Earl Slocum, director of the University band, is attending the 13th annual convention of the American bandmasters association being held in Elkhart, Indiana, today, Saturday and Sunday.

The American bandmasters association is an organization of outstanding band directors dedicated to the task of raising the standards of American bands.

Henry Fillmore of Miami, Florida, is president of the association; Harold Bachman of Chicago is vice-president and Glenn Cliffe Bainum of Northwestern university is secretary-treasurer.

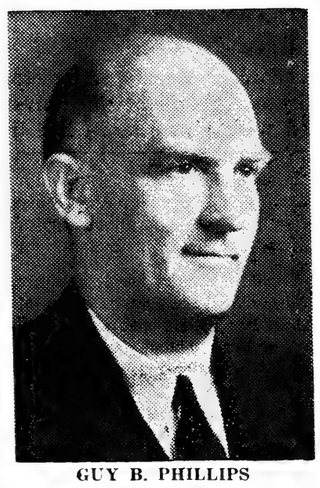
Besides Mr. Slocum, there are two other members from North Carolina, Capt. James C. Harper of Lenoir and James C. Pfohl of Davidson. Mr. Slocum was elected to membership in 1942.

DRIVING TESTS

Robert S. Weathers, driver license examiner, will hold driving tests in Chapel Hill beginning July 1 for applicants for new licenses. This is in accordance with the 1947 General Assembly law requiring re-issuance of motor vehicle driver licenses.

Nursery School to Remain Open for Summer Session

The nursery school at the Presbyterian church will be open during the first term of the University's summer session, from June 12 to July 22, and will continue through the second term if there is sufficient demand.



The school, which is non-denominational, is operated Monday through Friday, from 9:00 to 12:00. Children within the ages of 2 to 4½ are enrolled. The cost per child is $15 for each six weeks session. The school can accept several more children for enrollment for the first term. Children of veterans and students receive first consideration; faculty and townspeople are eligible for other available places. Parents who are interested should call Mrs. Robert Varwig at 7036 or 9432. Plans are being made for the transportation of children from Victory Village.

The program will include morning inspection, supervised play periods, rest, mid-morning lunch, music and rhythms, easel and fingerpainting, play modeling, and story time.

Teachers in the school are Mrs. Robert Varwig, director, Miss Betty Battle, and Mrs. Hilton Seals. Mrs. Varwig received her B.S. degree at Colorado A & M College, where she majored in home economics. After teaching home economics and assisting in the direction of a system of nursery schools in southern Colorado, she came here to the University, where she obtained an M.S. degree in public health, majoring in health education.

Miss Battle received her B. A. degree at the University and also studied a year in New York at the Cooperative School for Teachers. She was a nursery school teacher in Charlotte for a year. Mrs. Seals took her B. A. degree at Lenoir-Rhyne College and taught in the Durham elementary schools.

Members of the school's advisory council are Dr. W. Carson Ryan, Dr. William Perry, Mr. Ross Fink, Miss Muriel McLauchlin, Mrs. John Allcott, Mrs. N. J. Demerath, and Mrs. W. I. Ward.

GUY B. PHILLIPS

Record Is Set For Enrollment

Summer Total Hits Highest Mark Ever

By Raney Stanford

The largest number of students in the University's summer session history, 4100, were enrolled here by last night, said Guy B. Phillips, director of this year's summer school.

"This approximate total does not include the special summer workshop, law, or public health students," Phillips explained. He said that regular enrollment would probably reach 4200 before closing, as a number of pre-registered students have not picked up their class cards yet. The number of second-term students has not been tabulated.

"The end of registration, and the deadline for all schedule changes, has been set at 4:30 Tuesday afternoon," the summer school head said.

After today, there will be no more Saturday classes scheduled until July 19, Phillips concluded.

Traffic on Campus Will Be Regulated By Specially Adopted Vehicle Rulings

Trustees and State Pass Auto Measures

By Charlie Gibson

As a climax to almost a year's work by students, faculty members, and the townspeople of Chapel Hill, the state motor vehicle laws are now applicable to the University. On May 27 the Board of Trustees also adopted special campus traffic regulations which will be legally enforced in the local courts.

In this manner successful action was accomplished on a major campus problem to which the Student Legislature first called attention in the fall quarter of 1946, recommending to the University administration and Chancellor House that a "safety committee" be appointed to improve the hazardous traffic conditions here. This committee was composed of representatives from the faculty, the township of Chapel Hill, State highway patrol, the attorney general's office, and the student body at large with a student, Duke Wilder, appointed as its chairman.

Upon consultation with the State attorney general, the committee found immediately that neither the Chapel Hill ordinances nor the State vehicle laws pertained to the campus at that time. The rules which the committee then formulated passed through the proper legal channels of the State and the University and are now law.

Major Issues

Posters giving the complete details of the regulations have been circulated throughout the campus. The major issues involved are the student ownership of automobiles, parking on certain streets, carelessness of pedestrians, and excessive speed in Victory Village.

Hereafter the drivers of all vehicles, public or private, are to obey the instructions of any peace officer having jurisdiction to enforce the Statewide motor laws as well as the campus and township magistrates. No person shall deface any official traffic devices. With the campus deemed as a business district, its speed limit shall be 20 miles per hour; and signs will be erected soon to curb speed at intersections further.

In Victory Village pertinent rulings will safeguard the welfare of veterans and their families living in dangerously congested areas where traffic is a particular menace. A speed of 15 or 10 miles will be enforced at those intersections around which children may play.

Pedestrians will not be allowed to walk in any street, roadway, alley, or driveway in such a negligent manner as to endanger his own safety or to constitute an unreasonable impediment to lawful vehicular traffic.

Parking will be carefully supervised. No person shall stop any car or University Plans to Install Another Water Filter Plant

To meet a critical shortage in the city and campus water supply, the University authorities are rushing building plans for a new water filter plant, capable of producing three million gallons a day. The trustees' building committee met on June 4 and appointed W. A. Olsen of Raleigh as engineer in charge of designing and constructing the new plant. The committee plans to ask permission of Governor Cherry and the Advisory Budget commission to go ahead with the construction as soon as a contract can be let, to meet the emergency.

Mayor R. W. Madry of Chapel Hill recently asked all citizens to conserve the present water supply as much as possible. The plant now functioning was designed to produce only a million gallons a day, but it is currently operating at a much greater capacity than this original figure.

IRC to Begin Program For Summer on Monday

The International Relations club will inaugurate its summer session program with a business meeting Monday night at 7:30 in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial.

All present members and former members are urged to attend. Committee chairmen will be elected, and plans made for the reception of summer school students on June 16th. Summer plans include regular weekly discussions as well as faculty forums and outside speaker presentations.

Union to Sponsor Open House-Dance For this Evening

Graham Memorial will welcome all students this evening at a mammoth open house-dance in the student union building from 8 o'clock until midnight.

The main lounge will be converted into a dance hall and thrown open for informal dancing by recorded music, while the Candlelight Combo will be on hand in the Candlelight room on ground floor of the Union.

Though dancing in the main lounge will be informal, it is requested that ties be worn in the Candlelight room. General theme for the evening in the Candlelight room will be on the plan of a campus night club, complete with table service and floor show. The snack bar will be open during the afternoon, but patrons must be served at tables during the evening hours.

In the music room on the second floor students may listen to their favorite record choices chosen from the record library in the office and all upstairs lounges will be opened for games.

Emergency War Credits Now Being Evaluated

Student veterans completing requirements for graduation at the end of the first summer session and who wish to count war training credits towards their degrees, must have these credits evaluated by the Committee on Emergency War Credits by June 17.

Dean D. D. Carroll, chairman of the committee, said that such credit requests should be submitted to Mrs. Margaret A. Campbell, in room 316, South building.

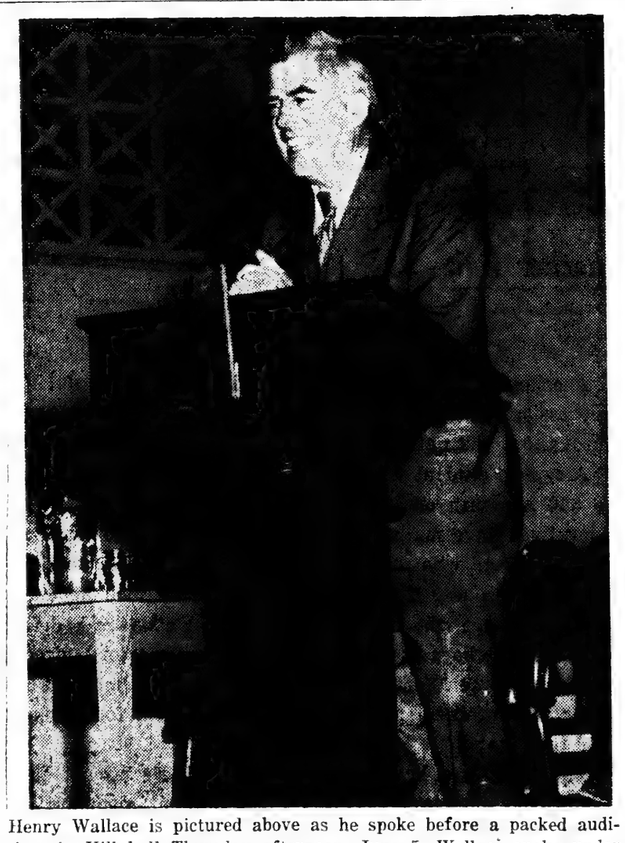
Candidates for graduation at the end of the second summer session may have their war credits evaluated after July 22, Dean Carroll said.

University Band

The University band will hold its first meeting of the summer term in Hill Hall Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, it was announced yesterday afternoon by the music department. Director Earl Slocum will be present and all new students interested in the band are urged to attend the meeting to get in touch with Mr. Slocum at the earliest possible convenience.

Complete Off-Class Schedule Is Offered in Student Union

Truly "The corner of the campus, but the center of activity," Graham Memorial offers summer Tar Heels a great variety of recreational pursuits in fulfilling its function of the extra-curricular center of the University.



Starting next Monday evening weekly beginners bridge classes will be taught, open to the entire campus. Hal Peacock, Union bridge director, will instruct the group, which will meet at 7 o'clock.

Open contract bridge tourneys are held in the main lounge each Tuesday evening at 7:30. The nominal entry fee charged is divided up among the winning teams. Though it is requested that entrants bring their own partners, single entrants may be placed with partners after entering the playing, if necessary.

Every type of record may be listened to in the Graham Memorial music room on the second floor. A collection of $1500 worth of popular, light classical, and classical recordings is on file in the office, available for playing on the new demonstration model Zenith player in the music room.

For the time being the travel agen-

Dancing Classes Will Start On Tuesday for Six Weeks

Dr. Oliver K. Cornwell, director of physical education, has announced that on Tuesday night at 7 o'clock the first of a six week series of classes in social dancing will begin. The weather and the size of the crowd will determine whether the classes will be taught in Woollen gymnasium or on the patio outside the gym.

Bill Townsend, special student in journalism, former New York City and Miami Beach entertainer and dancing instructor, is teaching similar classes at Duke University and State college and will instruct the classes here.

Waltz, foxtrot, jitterbug, rumba, tango and samba will be offered to the students participating. Class hours will be divided into 20-minute periods, and the dance that the majority of pupils wish will be covered for each period.

The American dances will be taught on Tuesday, beginners from 7 to 8, and advanced from 8 to 9, and on Thursdays at the same hours, the Latin dances will be given. With the exception of the first two weeks when a required groundwork of tango, foxtrot and waltz will be taught, the choice of the dances to be taught will be up to those attending the classes.

"This series of dancing lessons is part of the regular physical education program," said Dr. Cornwell, "and there will be no charge made to students and their wives."

Several coeds with experience in dancing teachers will be on hand to assist Mr. Townsend.

Daily Tar Heel Needs Workers for Summer

There will be a mass meeting of all students interested in working on the Daily Tar Heel during the summer months Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the DTH office in Graham Memorial. Editor Barron Mills emphasized the fact that positions are now open on the editorial, news, sports, and business staffs.

Henry Was Here

Those of us who were expecting Henry Wallace to give an off-the-record address here at the University were slightly disappointed. There was nothing startling about his speech—it was the same anti-Truman doctrine text that he has preached time and time again. It was quite different from his notorious vitamin speech he made here in 1943.

The weary former vice-president took the rostrum and preached the same doctrine that caused a wave of anger in the White House during his visit abroad—the same speech that drew full houses in California and the West Coast.

Wallace attributed his great success and huge crowds on the West Coast to his enemies who refused him permission to speak in the Hollywood bowl and at the University of California. When the University of Cal. refused Wallace permission he spoke on the street corner at high noon and drew 15,000 listeners filled with curiosity—a crowd that has no equal in the history of Berkeley, California or the university. The former cabinet member has capitalized on such events. They were good publicity and he drew a much larger crowd than had there been just a campus speech that went through regular university channels. Here in Chapel Hill, Wallace packed Hill Hall that seats around 800 persons.

Meanwhile, Wallace, who has been called the "Black Sheep of the Democratic party," continues speaking. The House Committee on un-American Activities is busy investigating the Southern Conference for Human Welfare that sponsored Wallace here and other places and which, along with him, has been tagged "Communistic." The investigation came when the SCHW decided to sponsor the former vice-president in a Washington address.

The mails continue bringing in letters demanding that Wallace start the rumored third party and to consider himself the third party's candidate for the presidency. The eyes of the world are now upon Mr. Wallace.

A Dead Champion

The University of California has just buried its champion for improvement in student government. The executive committee of the student government decided to appoint an advisory editorial committee for the student publication to decide on all editorial policies. The plan in effect defeats the purpose that a collegiate publication is supposed to render. The executive committee evidently proposed its plan in order to reduce friction between them and the newspaper. The publication is robbed of one of its main functions—that of evaluating and constructively criticizing the actions of the executive committee.

To an outside observer, it appears that the executive committee has a concession on all student thought and action. The Californian, the campus newspaper, that has lived under the motto "Monarch of College Dailies," may as well change its name to the "Spokesman of the Student Government Leaders."

Several times it has been proposed in our Student Legislature to institute a publication that would reflect only student opinion. A paper of this type would be detrimental instead of an aid to student government. One of your student publication's duties to the campus is to analyze the news and needs of the campus and try to mold campus opinion. The publication must take an active part in campus affairs, analyze the actions of all groups, give an accurate and unbiased news coverage, and constructive editorial comments. We do not need a Daily Tar Heel that will only amplify the beliefs and actions of a handful of student leaders.

Jimmy Wallace has come back to the campus to get the third degree.

Campus Characters I Have Known

Dr. Frank Is Always Ready to Shake Hands, Gab about Glory of Democracy

By Robert Morrison

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of informal views of the men who administer the University.)

By Robert Morrison

There are quite a few deans, chancellors, presidents, administrators, heads, chairmen, and assorted academicians at the University of North Carolina, and the first week I was here I had the opportunity to meet quite a large segment—at least more than I ever thought would be necessary to run one university. Some of these assorted academicians which I met early in my academic career are still being met by me whenever I roam the halls of South building, and several of them still say, "And what's your name, please?" They don't even know me from Bill Crisp.

However, it was quite a different story with Dr. Frank Porter Graham (since, Dr. Frank) who I met the first week. About a month later I passed him at the Old Well, and in all due respect I mumbled a polite "Good morning," and expected nothing but an automatic smile from the great man in return. Instead he rushed over to me, grabbed my hand, and said, "Why hello there, Bob, how is everything? You know, I think I knew your father, etc., etc., etc., etc., etc., or maybe your uncle, etc., etc., etc., etc., yes, it happened here on the Student Council in 1909, etc., etc., etc., etc., and you know, I've got to rush over to the office to tell Bob House something, etc., etc., etc., etc., goodbye, and please come around to my house Sunday night."

Few Hot Times

They have had quite a few hot times down at the old Board of Trustees over Dr. Frank, but he still stays, thank goodness, and if Chapel College isn't liberal, it at least has a liberal president. There are very few, if any, liberal organizations of which Dr. Frank is not an honorary member, the one exception being, perhaps, the United Mine Workers, and I wouldn't be too surprised if he one day pulled out a membership card with a Lewis signature.

E. Carrington Smith (president of the Chapel Hill Merchants' association) once described Dr. Frank as the sort of man "who would listen for an hour while some student complained about the hard beds furnished in the dormitories."

A rather prominent scholar and member of the UNC Department of History once said, "I look on Frank Graham as just a man, not a god. Furthermore, I think a university president should be a Ph.D." (Dr. Frank, so the story runs, got his doctorate from Catawba college. This is an understatement, however, for he has received numerous and sundry degrees from a host of different institutions, his total appellations now reading "A.B., M.A., LL.D., D.C.L., and D.Litt."

All the Evidence

Dr. Frank is a great man — this fact is evident in everything he says and does. The most convincing proof of his greatness lies in the fact that he believes what he believes and has for over a decade and a half maintained the presidency of the greatest university in the heart of the solid South.

No student can honestly and legitimately claim a real place at the University of North Carolina unless he has attended a Sunday night session with Dr. and Mrs. Frank. Everyone is welcome and everyone goes; everyone meets everybody; everyone leaves happy and with a fine and hospitable feeling toward their hosts.

Mrs. Frank's Distinction

The distinctive feature about Mrs. Frank lies in the manner she takes care of her husband. One night Jimmy Wallace and I went over to the president's mansion (to which the Buildings department should give a new coat of paint) because there was a crisis in student government. We've had so many crises, I don't recall which one this was. Mrs. Frank politely informed us that Dr. Frank was tired and somewhat ill, and she would deliver our message to him. At that moment a door upstairs burst open and Dr. Frank, wrapped in a robe, came rushing down the steps. After pumping our hands and telling us how glad he was that we called, he gave us the answer we wanted and then lectured us on the greatness and glory of American democracy and why we should strive unceasingly to preserve and defend it with the help of providence. During all of this affair, Mrs. Frank was wringing her hands and in every manner possible trying to get Dr. Frank to bed and ready for another day of trying administration.

In the next installment of "Campus Characters I Have Known," our readers will be taken into the SANCTUM SANCTORUM of Dr. Robert Burton House, Chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, vice-president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, and expert harmonica player.

Noted Painter Makes Sketches of University For Life Magazine

Mrs. Gladys Rockmore Davis, well-known painter and wife of Floyd Davis, also a leading artist, has just returned to New York after spending four days here making sketches of various University landmarks for a spread Life Magazine is planning to run next fall on a "typical, mellow old university."

Mrs. Davis, who thinks Chapel Hill "perfectly beautiful" and who says she is impressed with the contrasting architecture of the University, came here to make sketches for 15 paintings. By the end of her visit she said she had enough material for 500.

She has a contract with Life to do the paintings from these sketches which will be reproduced in what is expected to amount to eight pages in the news magazine.

Mrs. Davis sketched everything from the oldest buildings to Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice—the only individual in all her paintings. She said she was glad to sketch the Carolina football star "because he will figure very prominently in Chapel Hill next fall."

Fate of Humor Mag Rests In Future Campus Editions

By Pete Strader

After several quarters of uproar in the publication circles, and mildly apathetic interest from a student body that waited to be shown, the Humor issue of the Carolina Magazine made its debut and joined the ranks of the now defunct "Buccaneer" and "Tar and Feathers." The fate of another Humor Mag remains to be seen with forthcoming issues.

The blood, sweat and tears of Tookie Hodgson and staff created an issue that was no worse—and certainly no better—than the usual college stabs at this type of literature. It is to be suspected that the complete works of Max Shulman (that Dean of college satire) are required reading for all authors.

Lack of Originality

Mr. Hodgson and his crew succumbed to the occupational disease common to all potential wits: a lack of originality and humor in their material. After so many editions frantically punned fraternities and Bohemian campus politics began to pall, unfortunately Carolina's authors are at a loss to provide the new and subtle twists to make such tales wildly hilarious.

Among the best of the current crop are Clyde Stallings' cover and spot illustrations, Gerald Conrad's clear (but unimaginative) photography, and the satire of James Shumaker's "Hail, Alma Mater," James Beaver's "Atmosphere," and Bill Payeff's "The Fiend of the Infirmary."

Followed Gospel

These stories followed the Gospel according to St. Max, it is true, but were well phrased, clever, and at times even vaguely obscene (the true mark of success in any campus magazine), while Editor Hodgson's treatise on the doings of the Inky Dinkee Doo Frat was so much warmed-over hash.

In any campus publication with any pretentions to comedy a parody on "The Raven" must appear. It did, and cheek by jowl with that other hoary veteran of Carolina humor, the omniscient Confederate Soldier. Fortunately, most of the other cartoons were of a somewhat newer vintage.

At the Bottom

As usual, the most quoted portions of the Mag were to be found in the little two-line squibs at the bottom of the page. Whether old, borrowed, new, bawdy or satirical, these jokes represented the height of college humor in the recent Carolina Magazine. If hardworking Hodgson and associate humorists wish to publish a magazine of originality and humor they should look for more material like Alan Smith's "Community Project" in the April issue of the Mag, and give the overworked Seymour Sinkhole clique a much needed rest.

Chamber Music Recital Set for Monday Night

The first music program of the first summer session will be presented in Hill Hall Monday night at 8:30 o'clock when six members of the music faculty combine to give a chamber music program.

Included on the program will be compositions by Brahms, Mozart and Foure. The sextet will be composed of Willis Gates and Dorothy Alden, violinists, Edgar Alden, violist, Emily Porter, cellist, Mary Louise Emery, pianist, and Glen Haydon, clarinetist.

Housing Co-ops

A college project that first made its appearance during the depression is beginning to stage a comeback to many campuses throughout the nation. It is Housing Cooperatives.

A typical student who lives in a Co-op house saves from $15 to $40 a month on his living and eating expenses. The co-operatives have made it possible for thousands of students to attend college who otherwise could not have done so.

Before the war the University had three such housing Co-ops. The boys who worked in the Book Exchange had formed one; also the boys in library, and the third was organized by a group of some 18 students. The Co-ops met much difficulty after the enforcement of rationing of certain food items and had to disband.

The Co-op now has a definite place on the campus. In addition to its monetary saving for the student members it also provides fellowship. The housing shortage is the main obstacle that an incipient Co-op project would have to overcome. Now during the summer months when the housing situation is somewhat eased it is time for a Co-op group to organize and become settled.

Hot Start, Finish Featured Tar Heel Baseball Campaign

By Bob Goldwater

Carolina's 1947 baseball club looked impressive in copping the first two encounters on a 26-game slate and appeared even more so in the final pair of the year. But in between these two extremes, the Tar Heels could perform at only a .500 clip and thus completed their campaign with a record of 15 wins and 11 losses.

In competition in two circuits, Carolina finished third in Big Four play with a 5-7 record and turned in an 8-7 card against Southern conference opponents to end up in sixth place.

In the individual statistics department, an outfielder and a pitcher paced the Blue and White team. Rightfielder Jim Kelly captured the Big Four batting title with a .500 average in 10 games and the league's top southpaw, Vinnie DiLorenzo, led the loop in the strikeout parade, with 50 to his credit in 76⅓ innings, another high mark.

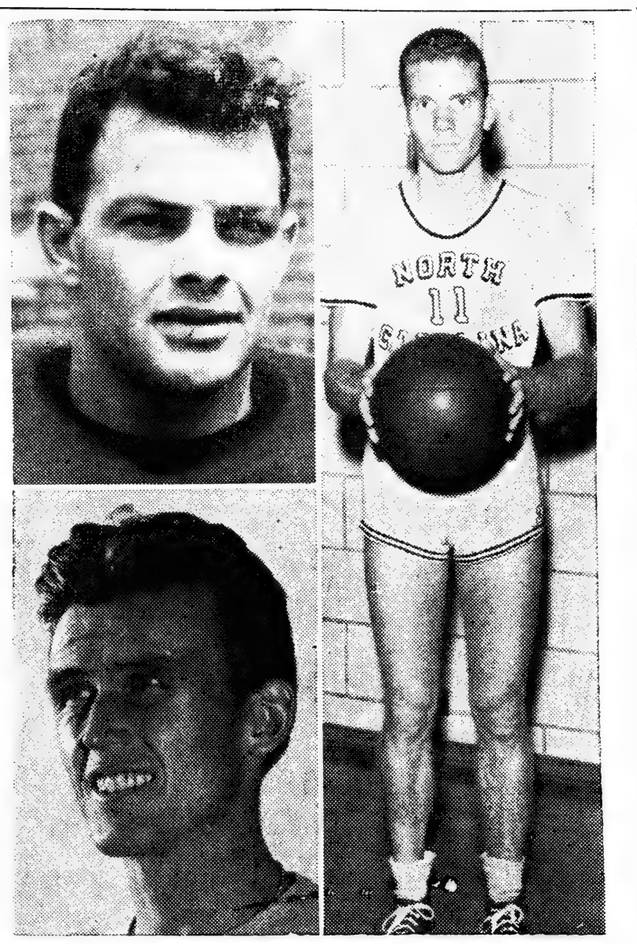
New Record

Both players gained their high totals with outstanding performances in the last two games of the year. Kelly, with four hits in his final seven trips to the plate, established a new high for the Big Four batting championship, the old mark of .469 having been made by Tom Davis of Duke in 1943. DiLorenzo gained his strikeout total with 16 in the last two games to eclipse the 39 registered by Bob Houghton of Duke.

The final pair of contests undoubtedly marked the climax of the long season, with the Tar Heels, behind brilliant twirling by DiLorenzo, downing N. C. State twice to move out of the cellar into their third-place finish while also presenting Duke with its initial Big Four crown. A decision for the West Raleigh club in either tussle would have allowed the 1946 pennant-winners to tie the Blue Devils for the top position.

In the Big Four play, Carolina split the four-game series with State and Wake Forest but could take only one of four with Duke. The other Southern conference successes were registered over Davidson, Maryland and Richmond.

In non-loop encounters, the Tar Heels scored outstanding intersectional triumphs over Michigan, Michigan State, Cornell, Navy, Villanova and Cincinnati. The remaining victory came at the expense of Virginia, by the same score—6-5—as last year's win over the same team.



In the season's pitching records, DiLorenzo was way out front with seven of Carolina's 15 wins. Monk Whiteheart was second with five while Tommy Andrew scored a pair of victories and Frank Robinson chalked up one.

The top hill performance was DiLorenzo's two-hit whitewash over Wake Forest. Whiteheart was close behind with a neat three-hitter against the hard-hitting Navy crew. DiLorenzo also fashioned one four-hitter, against State, and Robinson did likewise against Richmond.

At the plate, Jack Hussey was second among Tar Heel batters against Big Four opposition, rapping out a .333 average. Bo Hackney was the only other member of the team to hit above .300, topping that mark by 11 points.

All three top hitters were also team pacemakers in other departments. Kelly had the most homers, two, both made in one game. Hussey was high in the important runs-batted-in field, with 10. Hackney knocked out the most base hits, 14.

Throughout most of the campaign, the team was under the guidance of Coach Walter Rabb, who took over in place of the ailing Bunn Hearn. Beason and Gregory were co-captains of the 1947 club, while Hamilton and Hayworth were elected to the same posts for 1948 prior to the final game. Lost for next year as a result of graduation are three players, Hussey, Hackney and Whiteheart.

Cindermen Run At New York

Three members of the undefeated Carolina spring track team continued competition in post-season activity last Saturday, taking part in the annual New York Ahtletic club meet at Pelham, N. Y. High winds and a slow drizzle kept times and performances down to a low level.

Jack Milne and Jack Moody, competed for the Warinanco AC of New Jersey and Milne was third in the one-mile run. Though he had a handicap of only 35 yards—smallest of the field—Milne might have copped the event had he not run afoul of a head wind in the backstretch which stiffled his famous last lap kick.

Moody, not at the top of his form, took fifth in the high jump after having received a handicap of 2½ inches.

Bob Seligman carried the colors of the Carolina AA and took fifth in the shot put and fourth in the discus. In both events, "the Snipe" fell before the NYU beef trust of Mayer, Lampert, and Kintisch.

Horseshoes, Swimming Also Included On Summer Agenda

Bait Casting Tournament to Be Staged As Part of Regular Mural Tank Contest

Plans for a mammoth intramural sports program for the summer have been drawn up and completed, according to an announcement yesterday by Director Walter Rabb, and activity will get underway next week when play begins in tennis and softball Thursday afternoon.

Deadline for entries in softball competition has been set as Tuesday and the tennis deadline will be Wednesday. All entries are to be made in room 311 Woollen gym, and all organizations will be placed in the same division for summer activity. Regular mural medals will not be awarded, but suitable prizes are being planned.

In the softball tournament, independent teams, frat and dorm combinations alike are welcomed, and the only rule pertaining to contestants is that they not change teams once they have begun to play. A round robin schedule will be followed throughout.

The tennis tournament has been divided into two groups, a novice and an open, in order to provide facilities for all students to compete. This means that lettermen, pros and beginners alike will have a chance to enter into the thick of the net battle. The playoffs will be produced on a single elimination basis.

Following right on the heels of tennis and softball will be horseshoes, which are scheduled to begin a week from Monday. Deadline for entries in this event will be next Friday, and divisions will include singles and doubles for men. The tournament will be single elimination.

Swimming will also be included on the summer program, but the date for the tank affair will not be announced for a week or two. Director Rabb announced in connection with the swimming that for the first time a bait casting contest will be staged for the benefit of the fishing enthusiasts in school. Prize for the casting tourney is expected to be a new rod.

Local Nine Grabs Legion League Lead

The Chapel Hill American Legion baseball nine has made a grand entrance this season after an absence of over 10 years. The local lads, coached by former University grid star, Johnny Pecora, and paced by the hurling of Stanley Johnston are now leading the state district one league by a full game.

The leaders' closest rivals, Durham, are in the number two position, with Sanford and Bahama rounding out the four-team circuit.

Chapel Hill and Durham have split two games to date, with all teams seeing double action this week.

Carolina Teams Set To Compete In NCAA Playoffs

Three of Carolina's spring sports will be represented in National Collegiate Athletic Association championship competition the latter of this month, according to information announced yesterday by Coach Bob Fetzer, Carolina athletic director.

Vic Seixas, the Tar Heel tennis ace, will be the sole represenative of Carolina in the National tennis tourney, and Seixas, who is the nation's 16th ranking amateur, will journey to Los Angeles the last of this month to participate in the event which will be staged under the auspices of UCLA. At present, Seixas is at his home in Philadelphia.

The Tar Heel linksmen, who won the Southern conference championship, will go en force to the National team and individual playoffs, which are to be held at Ann Arbor, Mich. Coach Chuck Erickson of the golfers said yesterday that a full contingent of six men and possibly one more would bear the colors of Carolina in the classic links affair.

Qualifying rounds of the golf tournament will begin June 23, and the NCAA championships will continue until June 28 when the individual winner will be determined. Those expected to compete for Carolina are Harvey Ward, Dick Doeschler, Junie Bailey, Ray Taylor, Mike Nolan and either Ed Ashby or Bob Cox.

In the National track championships, which will be held at Salt Lake City, Utah, Carolina will be represented by just two men, but both of these cinder competitors have good chances of placing high in the final rounds of 1947 collegiate track.

Jimmy Miller, the cross country and distance star, and Chunk Simmons, the hurdle standout, will go under the flag of the Tar Heels. They will leave Carolina this week for the event which gets underway June 22.

STAFF MEETING

All students who are interested in securing positions on the Daily Tar Heel sports staff both for the summer and next fall are urgently requested to attend an important staff meeting Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Graham Memorial office.

Veteran Group Organizes New Co-op Grocery

Store to Be Placed In Victory Village

A long struggle to obtain a co-operative store for campus veterans reached a climax Thursday when the Chapel Hill Mutual Distributors, Inc., opened a new store at Victory Village.

Chairman Tom McDade announced that the stock is fairly complete and includes groceries, soft drinks, and ice cream. Mrs. Charlotte Hayes of Victory Village has been appointed manager and Mike Prochna will be chief clerk.

"According to a University ruling we are permitted to serve only student and faculty veterans who purchase stock in the co-operative at one dollar per share. For the time being the store will be open from 8:30 to 11:00 in the morning, 3:30 to 5:30 in the afternoon, and 7:30 to 9:30 in the evening for soft drinks and ice cream," said Chairman Tom McDade.

Wholesale Prices

The new store at Victory Village was first projected last winter when a small group of veterans, alarmed by the high cost of living, formed a buying club to purchase groceries at wholesale prices. The buying club grew in strength during the next few months until it was finally incorporated as the Chapel Hill mutual distributors. Last month the group distributed its first dividends from the money saved through these mass purchases and all stock-holders benefited according to the number of shares they held. At present nearly every family residing in Victory Village are co-op members but veterans residing elsewhere on the campus are also eligible to use the store.

truck in a position which will leave insufficient space for normal traffic flow. Once signs are placed or the street and curbing has been painted for proper designation, no one shall park at any time on such strets as Cameron avenue that are narrow and in continuous usage through the heart of the campus. Students and faculty members will be banned from the parking area between South building and the Playmaker theater from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. because that space was originally reserved for out-of-town visitors.

The penalty for the violation of any parking law shall be a civil fine of one dollar payable in the Chapel Hill traffic bureau. The penalty for the violation of other regulations will be a fine for a misdemeanor of not more than $50 or imprisonment for not more than 30 days.

BSU SUPPER

The Baptist Student Union will have an informal supper tomorrow evening at 6:15 in the basement of the Baptist church.

This is the first supper to be held by the group for the summer quarter and all interested students are invited to attend.

Diplomas Given 1,200 Carolina Seniors

Shown above are a new view of one portico of South building, home of the administrative office of the University, and some of the principals in the University's three-day commencement program, when more than 1,200 students were graduated.

Top row: Samuel J. Erwin, Morganton, president of the Alumni association; Prof. Paul Young, who directed the Chapel Hill Choral club's commencement concert Sunday night; Dr. Paul Lehmann, director of the Westminster press and Princeton university theologian, who delivered the baccalaureate sermon Sunday; Chancellor Robert B. House, who spoke at the Class day luncheon Saturday and who presided at graduation exercises Monday; Alumni Secretary J. Maryon Saunders, in charge of commencement arrangements; and Gov. R. Gregg Cherry, who presented the diplomas.

Middle row: President Frank P. Graham, who spoke at the final exercises; Dr. J. Corydon Lyons, faculty marshal; Prof. Samuel Selden, director of the Carolina Playmakers, who presented a group of new plays Monday; Kenneth Ness, resident artist, who talked at the student art exhibit Sunday afternoon.

Bottom row: Dotson Palmer, Clyde, president of the senior class; William R. Kenan, Jr., New York, '94, who presided over the banquet for the Old Students club; Robert A. (Coach Bob) Fetzer, whose 25th anniversary as athletic director was celebrated at a banquet Saturday night; and Prof. Earl Slocum, director of the University band, which gave several commencement programs.

A complete darkroom is in operation on the ground floor, open to all photo hobbyists upon application for darkroom cards in the office. All chemicals and equipment, excepting printing paper are furnished by Graham Memorial.

In the spacious and comfortable main lounge five state newspapers, and innumerable popular magazines and periodicals are kept up to date. Any publications not available will be ordered on request.

Ping pong, chess, and checkers equipment, and playing cards may be checked out anytime during office hours.

"The coolest spot on the campus," the Candlelight room, is the only spot in Chapel Hill open every afternoon and evening for dancing and refreshments. Serving as the campus night club, the Candlelight room, under the management of Ned Reap, features periodical floor shows, the Candlelight Combo for dancing two nights weekly, table service, and a wide choice of refreshing snacks. Hours are 1-5:30 and 8 until 11 at night.

12 Outstanding UNC Students Are Honored with Awards

University of North Carolina students who have achieved signal success in various fields of endeavor were given formal recognition at the University's 153rd commencement exercises Monday night. Gay Morenus, Atlanta, Ga., was awarded the Eben Alexander prize in Greek for the best rendering into English selected passages of Greek not previously read.

The Archibald Henderson medal in mathematics went to John McDavid Loftis, Tampa, Fla.

For general excellence in athletics, Walter Pupa, Pittston, Pa., received the Patterson medal. Pupa was an outstanding fullback on last fall's Sugar Bowl football team.

The Valkyrie cup, awarded to the coed selected as the outstanding woman student, was received by Frances Golden of Carthage.

Recipients of the Algernon Sydney Sullivan awards, presented to the two students who demonstrated "a desire to be of service to the University," were Julia Carlisle Cashion, Chapel Hill, and John Dewey Dorsett, Jr., Ridgewood, N. J.

The Ernest H. Abernethy award was presented to William John Woestendiek, Saugerties, N. Y., editor of the Daily Tar Heel, for his work with campus publications.

Moris Wiley Pully, Kinston, received the John J. Parker, Jr., medal for "unique leadership in student government."

The Chi Omega prize in sociology was given to Edith Joan Semat, Flushing, N. Y.

James White, Kannapolis, received the Foy Roberson, Jr., m... for his contribution to the efforts of the Carolina basketball team. White was co-captain of last season's W... Phantoms.

The Lehn and Fink medal in pharmacy went to William West Taylor, Durham.

Recipient of the Alpha Chi Sigma chemistry award was Charles N. Reilley, Charlotte.

Being selected the outstanding NROTC graduate, John Schofield O'Neall, Knoxville, Tenn., received the Josephus Daniels medal.

Hardin Craig Departs For Oregon, England

Dr. Hardin Craig of the University English department left last week a trip that will carry him to the University of Oregon to teach in the first summer term, thence to Stratford-on-Avon, England, where Shakespeare scholars from the world over will convene. He will read a paper at one of the sessions, which will meet August 17-27.

Dr. Craig will return by plane September 20 to resume his duties during the fall term.

Fundamental Engineering Studies

Studying product development in an experimental rotary dryer. H. J. Kamack, B. S. Chemical Engineering, Georgia Tech. '41; F. A. Gluckert, B. S. Chemical Engineering, Penn State '40.

Inspecting the interior of experimental spray dryer after a run. W. R. Marshall, Jr., Ph.D. Chemical Engineering, Wisconsin '41; R. L. Pigford, Ph.D. Chemical Engineering, Illinois '41.

In a company like Du Pont the diversity of chemical operations is great and the investment in equipment is high. In addition to the engineering work done in the ten industrial departments, the responsibility for design and construction of manufacturing plants is undertaken by the central engineering department, which also maintains an engineering research laboratory. This laboratory is staffed by chemical, metallurgical and mechanical engineers, and physicists, whose function is to carry on fundamental and pioneering-applied research to develop new methods of processing and equipment designs; improve equipment, materials of construction, and methods of measurement and control; and establish fundamental relationships in unit operations and unit processes.

For example, a broad project was undertaken to study the fundamentals of rotary drying. A principal objective of the study was to learn the effect of the operating variables on the volumetric heat transfer coefficient. Of the numerous variables that affect the drying rate of such a dryer, the more important ones studied were: (1) feed rate, (2) dryer rotation rate, (3) air rate, (4) air temperature, (5) number of flights, (6) direction of air flow, and (7) dryer slope.

Studies on a Laboratory Scale

Fundamental studies of heat transfer and mass transfer were made in a laboratory scale rotary dryer, 1 ft. in diameter by 6 ft. long. To determine the true heat transfer coefficient, special methods were devised to measure the material temperature along the length of the dryer and to measure continuously the temperature of the rotating shell. These determinations permitted an analysis of all the heat transfer effects in the dryer; namely, from air to solid, from shell to solid, and from air to shell.

From a knowledge of the material temperature along the dryer, it was possible to calculate the air temperature at each point in the dryer and thereby to determine point values of the heat transfer coefficient. This procedure permits the calculation of a more accurate average temperature difference, which gives more accurate heat transfer coefficients than can be obtained from terminal conditions only.

During the course of the study, every opportunity was taken to obtain heat transfer data on large-scale plant dryers in order to establish scale-up factors. This procedure permitted the correlation of heat transfer coefficients from a 1 ft. diameter dryer with those of full plant size.

Paralleling the work on the fundamentals of rotary drying operation, problems involved in product and process development received continuous attention. These usually require an investigation of the important auxiliary problems of: (1) material handling to and from the dryer, (2) removal of dust from the air, (3) sealing the space between the rotating shell and stationary breeching, and (4) corrosion of the dryer shell.

How the Results are Applied

The findings of the effect of holdup on dryer capacity were applied to an 8 ft. standard rotary dryer producing 300 lb./hr. of granulated material. The information obtained on this factor alone permitted an increase in capacity of 75 to 100%. This meant an increase of over a million pounds annually. Further, one dryer could now handle the load of two, releasing second dryer for other work.

The information developed in such fundamental studies permits more accurate design of equipment for future operations resulting in lower cost of manufacture and lower investment.

Joyce Peterson Chosen UNC Beauty Contestant

Carolina Beauty Vies for National Honors In Affair Sponsored by Advertising Agency

Queen of queens for Carolina this year is a 19-year-old junior, Joyce Peterson, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Twice honored—once when she was culled from 40 campus beauties at the Yack Beauty ball and once again this week-end when heads of various campus publications picked her from the group of already titled best-lookers—Miss Peterson is now tangled in the web of another beauty contest.

JOYCE PETERSON

This time it's a national affair with quite a set of rewards. Sponsored by the Kaufman Company, New York advertising agency, the current competition would pick a beauty as a focal point for a national advertising campaign for a yet unnamed product.

The winner in the national competition will receive a week of modelwork with what the agency calls "handsome remuneration," a screen test for Eagle-Lion pictures, and national recognition.

Miss Peterson's picture and background information got underway to the Kaufman agency on Sunday.

Rapid choice of the top campus beauty was necessary since information regarding the competition was received too late to provide a queen through vote before the June 15 deadline set by the agency.

Dormitory Council To Discuss Plans

There will be a meeting of the men's interdormitory council at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Roland Parker Lounge Nos. 2 and 3 of Graham Memorial, announced President Frank Hassell.

The primary purpose of this meeting is to discuss the erection of a building especially designed for weiner and marshmallow roasts and informal dances, so that dormitory men as individuals and dormitory groups may make arrangements for such get-togethers with the least amount of trouble and with the least dependency upon the weather.

Members of the council who find it impossible to attend this meeting are requested to send their vice-president or someone else with a proxy on the above proposal, details of which were outlined in a bulletin distributed to all members earlier this week.

There will also be an election of a vice-president for the summer sessions at this meeting.

Lawmakers Start Summer Meetings Tomorrow Night

Organization for the summer will be the principal business on the docket for the Student Legislature as it begins hot weather sessions tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall. In addition to summer plans, the legislature will handle any remaining items of business left over from the spring agenda.

Jack Folger, chosen in spring elections, will head his first meeting as speaker tomorrow night.

Vacancies for summer legislative positions will be filled at tomorrow night's opening session.

Legislative leaders have urged that all regular members of the body, as well as proxies, be present to get the new season underway.

PINE ROOM HOURS

The Pine Room in the basement of Lenoir hall will continue its service throughout the summer, offering a la carte orders, sandwiches, and salads.

Specializing in individual service in a quiet atmosphere, the Pine Room will serve breakfast from 7 until 9 o'clock, lunch from 11:45 to 2, and dinner from 5:30 till 8.

Rene Hardre Speaks Today In French House Program

Highlighting the local celebration today of the Fete de la Resistance, French national holiday, will be a talk at 7 p. m. by Professor Rene Hardre of the French Department at the Woman's college. Professor Hardre, father of Jacques Hardre of the Carolina French Department, will speak at the French House, located in the ADPi house on Rosemary street. The public is invited.

Professor Hardre's talk on various aspects of the French resistance movement during World War II on the anniversary of its formation, will be the feature of the first week's program at the French House which opened its annual six-week session under the direction of Dr. Hugo Giduz here last week.

Students from eight states are enrolled in this year's French House. In addition to a large delegation from North Carolina, students from South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut have registered.

Other events on this week's program include a talk tomorrow night by Professor Urban T. Holmes on Old Paris, a short play Friday night entitled La Faim Est Un Grand Inventeur, and a picnic Saturday night. All French-speaking students and townspeople are invited to attend any of the programs which are held at the ADPi house from 7 until 8 p. m. each evening.

The French House, which was instituted as a regular part of the summer curriculum here in 1945, has as its purpose the development of the oral use of the French language. Enrollment which included 10 students the first year was doubled last year and has shown another increase this year.

The French government has shown a great interest in the program and has donated one scholarship which this year was awarded to Miss Imogene Riddick of Campbell college. Students eat all their meals at the French House, join in the presentation of French plays, songs, movies, games, and discussions in addition to hearing a number of speakers, including a representative of the French embassy, during the six-week session.

Union to Give Dance Tonight

Hop Starts at 8 P.M. In Candlelight Room

By Nora Anderson

Graham Memorial will again be the center of student social activity this evening when dancing gets under way in the Candlelight room at 8 o'clock. Music will be furnished by the Candlelight Combo, recently reorganized for the summer under the direction of Ned Reap.

Miss Gene Fornoff, entertainment director of the Candlelight room, promises the usual treat by presenting Moffatt Sherard and Madeline Jennings, vocalists, with Buddy Robinson, tap dancer. On Friday night Bill Townsend and Gene Fornoff will do a tango routine.

The Candlelight room is open each afternoon from 1:30 until 5:30. The evening hours are from 8 until 11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 8 until midnight on weekends. The Combo will play for dancing each Wednesday and Friday evening.

Snack bar service is available in the Candlelight room during the afternoon but guests must be served at tables during the evening hours.

All summer session students are cordially invited to enjoy the activities of the Candlelight room.

Veterans to Fete McIver Dorm Girls

The University Veterans association will honor coeds from McIver dormitory tonight with open house this evening. Highlight of the affair will be dancing, refreshments and entertainment.

Joe O'Ryan, who is in charge of the entertainment, will do imitations and dance. There also will be other entertainers, including several coed performers.

The escort committee is requested to meet at the club house at 8:15 p. m. in order to arrive at the dormitory by 8:30.

Membership cards will be sold at the door to veterans who wish to join the UVA.

Di Senate to Elect Officers for Summer

The Dialectic Senate will meet tonight at 9 o'clock on the third floor of New West. Maurice Braswell, acting president, announced that the agenda this evening will include the election of officers for the summer and discussion of the plan for joint Di-Phi meetings for the next two years.

Braswell pointed out that this is to be a compulsory executive meeting for all members of the Senate now on enrollment.

Convocations Will Be Held This Summer

Prominent Educators To Give Addresses

A special University committee on convocations has arranged for an address by an outstanding educator for each of the two summer session terms, it has been announced by Director Guy B. Phillips.

Plans are to invite educators of the state to attend these convocations, and summer session students will participate in the program, which will be open to the public.

During the first term Dr. George D. Stoddard, president of the University of Illinois, is scheduled to speak July 3. His topic will be "East and West in Education."

During the second term (July 23 to August 29), Dr. Henry Harrington Hill, president of Peabody college, will give the convocation lecture on August 7.

A native of Pennsylvania, Dr. Stoddard, who was formerly president of the University of New York and Commissioner of Education of that state, has studied in various American and foreign universities, and has made distinctive contributions in the fields of tests and measurements and child psychology. As a professor of psychology in the University of Iowa (1929-41), Dr. Stoddard helped create the Child Development Research center which is said to be "an important development in this area."

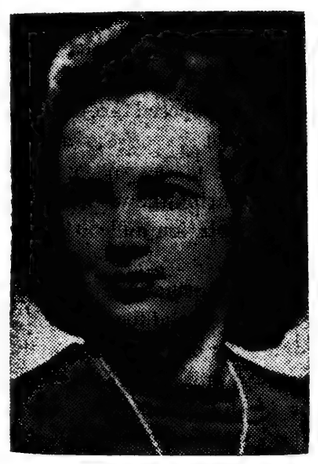
Britannica Book of Year Has Article by Graham

Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University, has made his first contribution to the Encyclopaedia Britannica Book of the Year, writing an article on the University for the 1947 edition, released May 19.

Distinguished leaders of science, business, industry and the professions have contributed to this 10th annual Britannica Book of the Year, published not only as a source book of current information, but also as an annual supplement to Encyclopaedia Britannica itself.

Clothing Pick-Up Set

Clothing will be collected Saturday morning by workers in the drive which is being sponsored by the YMCA and YWCA to collect clothes for European relief.



Students donating clothing are asked to leave it in the vestibule of their dorm, sorority or fraternity house. Ruth Evans, chairman of the drive, said that all types of clothing will be accepted.

Leader of SCHW Denies Charges Listed by House

Congressional Report of Members Lists Dr. Frank Graham and Many Celebrities

By Bob Sain

Indignant at being dragged into the red spotlight of the witch-hunting House Committee on Un-American Activities, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, and its UNC chapter, is answering back this week. In charges which involved Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the Greater University of North Carolina, the House committee last Saturday declared the SCHW "perhaps the most deviously camouflaged Communist front organization."

NANCIE FIELD

The committee finger-pointing brought immediate denials from Dr. Clark Foreman, president of the conference, and protest from Perrell (Perry) Payne, former chairman of the campus chapter of the organization.

Said Payne: "Reform, not revolution, is the basis for the conference."

Payne denied any knowledge of "revolutionary elements" in the conference. "If there are any," he said, "I do not believe they represent the views of the majority of members." He added they didn't represent his own views.

The committee's charges will be discussed thoroughly at the campus chapter's executive meeting tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in its YMCA office. There is a possibility that the group will have a copy of the complete Congressional committee report, for which Payne has written.

However, a similar attempt to get further information by Rev. Lee Sheppard, Baptist minister of Raleigh, who is chairman of the SCHW in North Carolina, has netted no results. Rev. Sheppard has addressed the FBI for evidence against the conference.

Highlights of Report

Highlights of the committee report:

Linked with the conference were Henry A. Wallace, Melvyn Douglas, Mrs. Marshall Field, Harold L. Ickes, Joseph E. Davies, Dorothy Parker, Paul Robeson, and Dr. Graham. (Dr. Graham was described as first chairman and now honorary president of the conference, and "not a communist.")

Committee "evidence" linked the central committee of the Communist party with "the affairs of the conference from its very inception."

"Conclusive proof" that the organization is a communist front, according to the report: its "strict and unvarying conformance to the line of the Communist party in the field of foreign policy."

War Bride Gives Concert Tonight As Series Begins

The first of summer music recitals will be presented this evening at 8:30 in Hill hall by Mrs. Nancie Field, pianist.

Mrs. Field, who was one of the first Australian brides to come to Chapel Hill after the war, obtained her Bachelor of Arts degree at the University of Western Australia. She also holds the Licentiate of the Royal Schools of Music, in London, and studied at the Sydney Conservatory, New South Wales, under the pianist-composer, Lawrence Godfrey-Smith.

In musical and other scholastic fields, Mrs. Field has won several prizes, including two piano awards, a Government scholarship to the University of Western Australia, a prize for the highest aggregate of points in licentiate examinations conducted throughout Australia, and a Distinction Arts degree, the equivalent of Phi Beta Kappa membership.

Her husband, Thomas P. Field, is a graduate student in the University Geography department.

State Bankers to Meet Here For Conference Next Month

A number of authorities on various phases of banking have accepted invitations to give lectures and lead discussions at the 11th Carolina Bankers conference to be held at the University July 6-11, according to the program announced by L. D. Brooks, Charlotte, conference chairman.

The conference is being sponsored by the Bankers Associations of North and South Carolina, the North and South Carolina Sate Banking departments, and the University.

Among the speakers on the program will be Daniel W. Bell, president of the American Security and Trust company, Washington, D. C.; W. H. Clayton, vice-president of the First Citizens Bank and Trust company, Raleigh, and head of the installment loan department of the 24 offices in that system; Dr. W. P. Jacobs, Clinton, S. C., president of the American Cotton Manufacturers association;

Dr. W. A. Irwin, New York, economist of the American Bankers Association and educational director of the American Institute of Banking; Leroy Lewis, New York, associate educational director of the American Institute of Banking; Edward A. Wayne, vice-president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond; Preston E. Reed, Dean of Central College of Commerce, Chicago;

Brigadier General Kenneth C. Royall, Undersecretary of War; E. B. Wulbern, Charlotte, vice-president, director and manager of the Municipal Bond department of R. S. Dickson and company; John N. Mills, Charlotte, vice-president of the Union National bank and manager of the mortgage loan department; James B. Gambrell, vice-president of the Bank of Greenwood, Greenwood, S. C.; W. Kelvin Gray, president of the North Carolina Municipal council; C. P. Kennett, auditor of the First National Exchange bank of Roanoke, Roanoke, Va.; John C. Bills, until recently special agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation for North and South Carolina; and S. S. Lawrence, vice-president and comptroller of the Branch Banking and Trust company, Wilson.

In addition to Chairman Brooks, the conference committee is composed of William H. Neal, Winston-Salem; Gordon Hunter, Roxboro; C. A. Spivey, Conway, S. C.; Warren S. Johnson, Wilmington; W. R. Watkins, Columbia, S. C.; Millard F. Jones, Rocky Mount; Philip Woollcott, Asheville; Ben R. Roberts, Durham; Gurney P. Hood, Raleigh; E. R. Alexander, Columbia, S. C.; John B. Woosley, Chapel Hill; Donald E. Brown, Anderson, S. C., and Fred W. Greene, Raleigh.

University to Receive Grant From Carnegie Foundation

Carnegie Corporation of New York has granted $250,000 for an experimental five-year program to develop four permanent university study centers on Latin America, it has been announced by Dr. O. C. Carmichael, special adviser to the corporation and president of the Carnegie foundation for the advancement of teaching.

The project will be carried out jointly by the University of North Carolina, the University of Texas, the Tulane university of Louisiana, and Vanderbilt university, with each institution concentrating on a definite geographical area. North Carolina will focus on area studies of Spanish South America.

Designed to make available comprehensive knowledge of Latin America to students, teachers, businessmen and government officials, the program will provide in each center a strengthened undergraduate curriculum, broader facilities for graduate work and an expansion of library resources. For businessmen, missionaries and other non-student groups, the University of North Carolina, as a part of its expansion plan, will experiment with intensive language courses to be given by instructors from Latin America.

Under the program, each center will coordinate its work with the others through an inter-university committee, annual conferences, cooperative summer schools and exchange of teachers and information. Stressing the importance of the joint planning, Dr. Sturgis E. Leavitt, secretary of the preliminary conference for the program and director of the University of North Carolina's Inter-American Institute, said:

"In so wide a field as Latin America it is evident that no single university can reasonably expect to develop a program which will adequately meet the need for trained personnel in industry, foreign service, religion, scholarship and teaching. A pooling of resources among several institutions seems to be the most effective answer to the problem, and the experience of certain southern universities in library cooperation points the way to a more extensive program of joint action in the area of Latin American studies."

Each of the cooperating universities has already laid the groundwork for such a center, Dr. Carmichael pointed out. The University of North Carolina has done intensive work in South American languages, literature and political theory and has made concentrated studies of such southern countries as Argentina, Chile, Paraguay, Uruguay and Venezuela. Under the new plan, its present inter-departmental program will be expanded to give more emphasis to economics, geography, history, music and sociology in the southern Latin-American area.

Interdormitory Shack

At long last action will be taken to examine the possibilities of establishing a recreational building for the use of the residents of the men's dormitories. The new Interdormitory council, headed by Frank Hassell during the summer months, has gone into great detail to investigate the problems of constructing such a gathering place and the fate of the project will be decided Thursday night.

The problem that rests before the Council to weave into a final pattern is this: Should the Council attempt to raise funds and build a shack here within a stone's throw of the dormitories or should the structure be erected on one of the surrounding lakes—Hogan's lake, University lake or Eastwood?

The seven-page dissertation that was prepared for consideration by the Council overlooked an important factor. The men's dormitories do not have any space for recreation—no reception rooms or lounges. An effective interdormitory shack should also serve in these capacities. It should house ping pong tables and other amusements for the use of residents of the dormitories as well as facilities for weiner roasts and organized parties. Men should have some place on campus to entertain their out-of-town guests. If the proposed project were not established on campus it would not be of the greatest benefit to its potential users. If it were placed on one of the lakes out of town it would be used only during the weekends and individuals would be faced with transportation difficulties even then.

The Interdormitory council should investigate and see if it is feasible to obtain the old Navy wrestling pavilion near Emerson field. The UVA used the framework of a similar pavilion and built their clubhouse that has been quite satisfactory. The location of the pavilion would be ideal for an interdormitory shack and would house facilities that the dormitories fall short of providing.

Credit Due

The University and its student union owe a great debt to the late Ames Brown, '10, distinguished alumnus and benefactor of the University. For without the generous assistance of this farsighted philanthropist, Graham Memorial might have for many years remained incomplete.

It was in 1931 that Brown donated $80,000 for the completion of the campus' first student union, built as a memorial to his devoted friend Edward Kidder Graham, past president of the University. The union had for many years lain in a half-built state due to the lack of funds for its completion from any source, when Brown, former White House newspaper correspondent and Pan-American Airways publicity director, made the anonymous gift which permitted the completion of building the union.

Would it not be fitting to hang his portrait in Graham Memorial along with those of his contemporaries, Dr. Frank Graham and Edward Kidder Graham?—R. G.

Bell of the Halls

Hundreds of belles are now making their appearances on campus, but one bell that all are concerned over was a little late in making her debut this term. She was the South building bell—the bell of the hall—that draws a winning smile and low whistle sigh from both students and professors.

Many of the professors have been cutting their classes short and not giving the student his full value of his tuition fees—a practice that is frowned upon. A few have taken the other extreme and have lectured forth until nodding heads cushioned with the vibration of the uvula and the palate.

For years the bell has been the signal for a turnover. It has come to be a campus tradition and has been termed indispensible.

She is welcomed back to the halls since her make-up is repaired.

A portrait of Dr. Archibald Henderson

Newsweek Lauds Henderson For Outstanding Work Here

(Editor's Note: The following article appeared in last week's issue of Newsweek, and is printed intact with the permission of the magazine.)

John Steele Henderson, a Pittsburgh engineer, once journeyed down to Chapel Hill, N. C., to visit his famous brother, Archibald, head of the mathematics department of the University of North Carolina and official biographer of George Bernard Shaw. Aware that his brother never spared himself, the engineer merely glanced at the studio floor, which was covered with books, sheets, and charts, and inquired brightly: "Well, what book are you writing now?"

Dr. Henderson smiled: "I'm writing four," he replied. "When I get tired I just go from one to another."

Far from regarding this as an exaggeration, friends of Dr. Henderson accept the story as a typical illustration of his tremendous energies. A faculty member for 49 years, and department head for 27, the "cosmopolitan villager," as someone once tagged him, has kept his admirers wondering when he would retire to take things easy.

Last week word got around Chapel Hill that the time had come at last. On June 17 Dr. Henderson will be 79. He has asked the University administration to relieve him of his duties as department head. Retirement, however, is another matter. The professor will continue to teach, and meanwhile he will continue his extended researches into mathematics, literature, and American history.

As for writing, he still had loads of work on schedule; a two-volume history of the opening of the American West, a book on the creative spirit in playwriting, and an unnumbered lot of monographs and magazine articles. Like his hero Shaw, Dr. Henderson still felt he had something to say.

Veterans Forced To Quit Schooling For Lack Of Funds, Survey Reveals

Approximately 300,000 veterans who have entered American colleges and universities under the G. I. Bill of Rights have been forced to drop their studies because they could not support themselves or their families on government subsistence payments, reports Joseph North, editor of the New Masses, in a recent issue.

Mr. North, who recently returned from a month's tour of campuses and trailer villages from Yale to Wisconsin, during which time he spoke to more than 1,000 veterans and their wives, non-veteran students and professors, found the veteran-students in "deadly earnest" about their studies and showing "phenomenal staying powers" despite the tremendous burden of maintaining themselves and their families.

"Over a million and a half of America's college students are former soldiers," reports Mr. North. "Nearly half of them are married and well over a quarter are parents. Most of them strive to live within the provisions of the G.I. Bill of Rights—$65.00 for the single, $90.00 for the married . . ."

"I have a job, but it plays hell with my studies," one student told the writer. "I operate a telephone at one of the frat houses. I get seventy-two cents an hour and work twenty-one hours a week . . . I go to class from nine to two; then I work from four to eleven . . . I get home about midnight . . . I work every other day, so that on alternate afternoons and evenings I can study . . . I'm majoring in History and English, hope to get a job teaching in college. I don't know whether I can stick it out, though. I haven't got folks that supplement my subsistence pay . . ."

The burden falls most heavily on the married vet, writes Mr. North. "On the campus at Yale I saw a student in his aviator's short leather jacket leading one child by the hand, toting another on his shoulders. I peered through the windows of the trailer camp at the University of Wisconsin to see a vet pouring over his books while his wife bent over a crib. For most, both married and single, the daytime hours are a continual jog from classrooms to the restaurants where they wait on table or to dark basements where they tend furnaces, or to any available tasks that will eke out the pennies to make ends meet . . ."

Desperate to learn, filled with "the sense of dreadful hurry" due to the years lost while in service, the veteran students are excellent scholars, Mr. North found. "A professor at Syracuse told me that the single vet studies harder than the youth fresh out of high school without war experience; that the married vet studies harder than the single man; and that the married vet with a kid or two studies harder than all combined . . ."

Mr. North concludes: "It is a serious campus today; uneasy disturbed, restless, brooding . . . Never before, I was told—and what I witnessed underscored the testimony has there been such questioning. Skepticism is general; values are endlessly challenged . . . the student of the twenties was inspired by the dream of . . . a Wall Street career juggling ticker tape . . . Most were preoccupied with the social whirl of the fraternity and the five-letter man was the university hero . . . Today's student can give you the name of the CIO president quicker than he can that of the head of J. P. Morgan and Company . . ."

The Third Part

U. S. Atomic Plan Is Core Of Harmony in World Today

By Jimmy Wallace

It has been said that Russia has been the foremost proponent of international cooperation and understanding—far out in front of all other nations in modern times.

Certainly there is much evidence which can be adduced in support of this statement. The behavior of the Soviet Foreign Office after the Great War plainly indicated Russia's desire for peace and understanding. This spirit prevailed through the time of Mussolini's march into Ethiopia, and Franco's march through Madrid.

But what about today? The situation has changed little in relation to squabbling nations. We still have them. The second World War has momentarily removed two of them from discussion; but it appears that there are as many conflicts and misunderstandings between the United States and Russia today as there were between all the nations before the recent war.

Isolationist Position

It must be admitted that the United States adopted an isolationist position after World War I. But it must also be admitted that our present position is more strongly international than ever before. The "reactionary and Fascistic," the "decadent and capitalistic" United States has shown its willingness to cooperate internationally.

But it appears that Russia has become more isolationist and nationalistic than ever before. Andrei Gromyko, the blustering ambassador speaks of "disarmament" and treaties "to outlaw Atomic warfare," much in the same manner as did Kellogg and Briand after the first war. The world saw then that mere treaties did no good.

We are faced with a situation in which the two most powerful countries in the world are at odds: about economic systems, about politics, but most important of all, about the Atomic Bomb. The United States produced the Atomic Bomb before any other country. We thereby produced the greatest problem of the century; more likely, the greatest problem in the history of the Human Race.

Recognized Problem

The United States government has officially recognized the magnitude of the problem and has also produced a pla nto control Atomic Energy. We have offered to give up some of our "sovereignty" in the interests of everybody, everywhere. Truly, the Acheson-Lilienthal-Baruch proposal has been made in the best of faith. It is the only plan thus far mentioned which appears workable.

But Russia is opposed to giving up her sacred veto power in matters involving the peaceful application of atomic energy. Russia doesn't like the idea of thorough-going inspection. Russia proposes a plan to "outlaw" the use of atomic weapons. Henry Wallace proposes that we give up the bombs, destroy all of them that we have in our possession, and thereby show our good faith. We should, in other words, completely disarm—first.

Anyone who hopes to achieve this is not particularly bright. The American plan is the only sensible answer. What is wrong with this logic: if Russia does not have the bomb, and we offer to entrust the whole works in the hands of an international body, with sufficient power to develop Atomic Energy for peaceful purposes, what does Russia have to lose by coming in?

Nothing. WE are the ones who are losing something—if one wishes to put it that way. But suppose that Russia either has the Bomb or has hopes of soon manufacturing one? That, apparently is the situation. Therefore, Russia stalls while the Bomb is developed. Why does Russia stall? That is an interesting question. But I would be willing to bet dollars to doughnuts that if Russia gets the Bomb, she will never agree to international control.

And when two nations such as Russia and the United States square off, both with Atomic Bombs, there will not be much of the planet left when they are through.

Thus, the great spokesman of international cooperation is, by its actions today, insuring another war, and the great "reactionary, capitalistic" United States is proposing a plan, the core of which is essential if we are to have even 20 years of peace.

Gave Me Beer

Homesick Lassie Longs for Songs From Danziger's

By Violet Fidel

Danziger's was crowded with school teachers. There was no place for me. So I wandered up the street to Jeff's. Everyone is entitled to a few youthful indiscretions. In Jeff's I found Foo Giduz, Bob Hennessee and Charlie (he couldn't remember his last name) to indicresh with.

"Boys," I said, "Chapel Hill is changed. It hasn't gone to the dogs. (Far be it from me to stray into Kilberg's pound) it's gone to the school teachers, it's gone to the Freshmen, it's gone to Boy's State. If Sherman came South now, he'd take the Silver Meteor home. Summer school sucks!"

"Sit down and have a brew," they said. I sat down. I ordered a Viennese coffee.

"Outlander," said Aggie, "Either drink beer like a lady or get the hell out."

They gave me a beer. With Viennese Coffee one sublimates. But beer one can cry into!

"I don't mind school teachers," said Hennessee comforting me, "I have fond memories of them. Two of the memories encountered me in Graham Memorial, but I was younger and sprier and could run faster. . ."

"Ugh!" said Charlie (who couldn't remember his last name) as we ordered another round.

"I don't mind Freshmen," said Foo Giduz, the perennial freshman, tossing his little green cap in the air. "If they don't get any more sense they can always write for the DTH like I do. . ."

"Ugh!" said Charlie (who couldn't remember his last name) as we ordered another set.

"I don't mind Boys State," said a character who staggered in from the next booth, "I was in Boy's State

Intramural Openers Postponed Until Monday

Seeks NCAA Crown

SC Championship Tar Heel Golf Team Off To Michigan

Carolina's Southern Conference golf champions will be in search of national honors as they take leave of Chapel Hill today heading northwestward to Michigan and the NCAA links championship.

It will be the first time that a Tar Heel team has ever competed in the event, but novices that they are, the locals will be a serious threat to cop both team and individual honors.

Coach Chuck Erickson will count on the same sextet that won seven out of eight matches this season to carry the Carolina colors. This will have the Tar Heel entry consisting of dependable Dick Doeschler, Junie Bailey, Harvey (Wonder) Ward, Ray Taylor, Bob Cox and mighty Mike Nolan.

The golfers will leave by auto, arriving in Columbus, Ohio, late tomorrow night. From there, they will move on to Ann Arbor, Mich., the home of the University of Michigan, on whose course the event will be played.

The championship competition gets underway Monday with 18 holes being played that day, followed by another 18 on Tuesday.

These two rounds will decide the team title with the 64 low qualifiers moving into individual match play the following day.

Team title will be determined on a low score basis. Each team can enter six men with the best four scores deciding the team's standings.

Tar Heel hopes for an individual champ lie mainly with Doeschler, who has consistently paced the team all year, and Ward, who hasn't quite played the top flight golf he is capable of since his return from the service.

Any of the rest of the Carolina entry, though, could come through to win the crown. Bailey, a long ball hitter, will be feeling right at home on the lengthy Michigan fairways and might come home first if he is hot for the tourney.

Ed Wright Taylor, who has been burning up the local courses for the past month, or Cox, who can give the boys a few lessons in hole-in-one shooting. If possible, Mike Nolan will talk his way to the title.

Outdoor Swimming Hours Announced

New hours for swimming in Kessing outdoor pool have been announced by Woollen gym officials, and the pool is already being used by many swimmers each day. Miss Mary Francis Craig of the Women's Physical Education department will be in charge of all women using the pool, while Coke Robinson, varsity boxing coach, will direct the men.

The pool is open to students and faculty from 12:30 p.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and on Sunday, from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. Instructions for men and women will be given at 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Classes of instruction will be held for children from 11 a.m. to 11:50 a.m., Monday through Friday, and the pool will be open to the children for recreation from 11:50 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. each day following the classes. On Saturday children may use the pool from 11 a.m. until 12:30 a.m. and from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. In addition to these hours, children are allowed in the pool from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. each afternoon, Monday through Saturday.

Tank Practice Begins Monday

Summer Swim Card Has Several Meets

Coach Dick Jamerson, Carolina's genial swimming mentor, sent out an SOS from the U. S. S. Woollen Gym yesterday afternoon to call his Blue Dolphins together for the initial practice of the summer campaign on Monday.

All prospective swimmers are urged to report to Mike Morrow at the outdoor pool between 1:30 and 5:15 on Monday afternoon.

Coach Jamerson, who has turned out more championship teams at Carolina in swimming than any other sports activity here during the past decade, has arranged several meets for the summer tank outfit.

On July 5, the Dolphins will participate in the Open AAU event at Tarboro. The National Junior AAU 400 yard relay and open events will be staged at Chapel Hill later in the month. On August 2 and 3, the local mermen will take part in the Carolinas AAU championships at High Point and enter the Southern Invitational meet at Wilson on August 13 and 14.

Last summer's swimming team captured the Carolinas AAU event and walked away with the regional AAU titles as they finished the summer season undefeated.

Coach Jamerson has announced that all men and women students interested in competitive swimming are invited to come out for the team.

Monogram Club Meets

The Monogram Club will hold a short meeting this evening at 8:30. The meeting will take place at the Monogram Club and all members on campus are asked to be present.

Deadline for Entries Moved To Tomorrow Afternoon at 6

Softball, Tennis, Horseshoes, All Three Begin Monday; Mural Managers to Meet

Opening day for three intramural sports has been moved from tomorrow to next Monday afternoon, it was announced last night by Mural Director Walter Rabb, who explained that the move was made in order to give the interested students more time to get their entries in and organize teams.

At the same time, it was announced that the deadline for entries in softball, tennis and horseshoes had been moved to tomorrow afternoon at 6 o'clock. Softball is the only sport that will be handled on a team basis, the tennis and horseshoes both being strictly individual.

For summer competition, there will be no awards in the form of medals, but Director Rabb said yesterday that they planned to give appropriate prizes instead. Competition during the summer will not count toward the mural cup for next spring.

All intramural managers whose organizations have softball teams entered in the summer race will have an important meeting tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in room 302 of Woollen gym. Further plans for the summer and an explanation of the softball rules will be among the topics for discussion at this confab.

In addition to the three sports beginning Monday, swimming will be started in about two weeks. However, no deadline has been set for entries in this activity, and no definite starting date will be revealed for at least another week.

Entries for softball, tennis and horseshoes may be made in person in room 211 Woollen gym or by phoning F-3321 anytime today or tomorrow from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m.

When competition gets underway Monday, contests will be held between 4 and 6 p. m. Monday through Thursday. All softball teams will be thrown together in the same league in a round robin tournament, while tennis and horseshoes will be single elimination affairs.

The softball league will be composed of approximately 35 teams, and as many games will be played as time allows during the term.

Two Trackmen In NCAA Event

Simmons, Miller At Salt Lake City

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 17—Two track stars from the University of North Carolina, Chunk Simmons and Jimmy Miller, arrived here this morning for tune-up workouts prior to the National Collegiate Athletic Association championships which are scheduled to get underway here Friday.

Miller and Simmons, distance and hurdle stars respectively, have been among the best in the east during the spring season, and both are given good chances to at least place in the NCAA event which will be concluded Saturday. Miller's best time for the two mile this season was 9:28.5, recorded in the ICAA spring classic at Philadelphia a few weeks ago, and Simmons boasts as his best time in the high hurdles 0:14.6 and in the lows 0:24.4.

Simmons is slated to participate in the trials in both the high and low hurdles Friday, and Miller's first appearance will be in the two-mile run Saturday afternoon. If Simmons qualifies, he will be in the hurdle finals Saturday.

Carolina's Southern conference track championship team will be represented only by this pair of runners, although the Tar Heels have several other contenders who can compete on almost even terms with the national contenders. Others were not able to make the trip because of summer school, which cannot allow a long enough absence for the long trip west.

First Band Rehearsal To Be Held Thursday

The Carolina summer band, which held its initial meeting Monday afternoon, will hold the first regular rehearsal Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in Hill Music hall, director Earl Slocum announced yesterday.

"We already have something near 30 people signed up for the session," Slocum said, "and we expect this number to increase with the second meeting. Our activity for the next few weeks will depend largely upon the size of the band."

All students, new and old alike, who are interested in playing in the band but who have not yet signed up are urged to attend the Thursday rehearsal with instruments and ready to play. It is hoped that the summer music group will be able to give one or two concerts before the term ends.

YACK DISTRIBUTION

Yackety Yacks will be given out this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial. To obtain a Yack, it is necessary to have an I. D. card.

Tryouts Slated Today For Playmaker Comedy

Tryouts for "The Late Christopher Bean," first production of the Carolina Playmakers this summer, will be held in the Playmakers theatre today at 4 and 7:30 p.m., announced John W. Parker, assistant director and business manager of this campus organization.

A large technical staff will also be needed. Those interested in scenery construction and painting, lighting, costuming, and make-up, should make application to the director at the tryout periods.

Vespers in Arboretum

Dr. P. H. Epps, professor of Greek and Biblical history, will conduct the devotional portion of the vesper service this evening at 7 o'clock in the arboretum.

This program, including a song service, is to be sponsored each week by the worship committee of the YMCA. Everyone is invited to attend the devotionals which are designed to last no longer than 30 minutes. In case of rain the service will be held in Gerrard hall at the same hour.

MUSIC LESSONS

Registration for private music lessons in the Music department will continue through noon Wednesday. There are openings for students in piano and voice.

CHEERLEADERS TO MEET

Moffatt Sherard, head cheerleader, announces a practice to be held this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Kenan Stadium. All members whom Sherard appointed to the cheering squad at the close of the last quarter who are now on enrollment are urged to attend this first workout.

BSU MEETING

There will be a special meeting of the Baptist Student Union this afternoon at 4 o'clock. All Baptist students in summer school are urged to attend.

Teachers of Maimed Children Study Special Program Here

Thirty-six teachers from various sections of the state have enrolled in the University for a special educational program designed to train teachers to work with handicapped children in public schools of North Carolina. The teachers will get practical experience in workshop programs as well as classroom instruction.

The project is being conducted jointly by the University and the North Carolina League for Crippled Children.

The project was set up by a staff composed of Dr. William G. Wolfe, specialist in speech pathology and anatomy of the University of Iowa, who will become a member of the University's educational faculty next fall; Miss Elizabeth McLearie, specialist in speech pathology, from Cleveland; Miss Margaret Jones, Miami, Fla., public schools; Mrs. Marjorie Cochran, Northwestern university; Mrs. Alice Lawrence, Benton Harbor, Mich, public schools; and Miss Martha Gunter of the staff of the North Carolina League for Crippled Children.

Some 45 children from all sections of the state will receive free clinical treatment as a part of the program of the training course.

Special lecturers for the project will include Dr. Jean Utley, Mrs. Verna Carlyle, Mrs. Florence Mendelsohn and Mrs. Elizabeth M. Wagoner, all of the staff of the National Society for Crippled Children, Chicago; Miss Helen Kaiser, Dr. Lennox D. Baker, Dr. Banks Anderson, Dr. Kenneth Pickerell, Dr. Leslie D. Hohman, Dr. Maurice Greenhill, all of Duke University; Dr. Fred Hale, Raleigh; Dr. Donald Robinson, Burlington; Miss Evelyn Ayrault, University of Chicago, and Dr. W. D. Perry, University of North Carolina.

Phi Assembly Meets On Anti-Lynch Laws

The Philanthropic assembly will hold its first regular meeting for this term in the Phi hall at 7:30 this evening, Speaker Robert Morrison has announced. Judge Clyde C. Carter, instructor in commercial law and political science, will deliver the initial address on the topic for discussion, "Federal Anti-lynching Laws."

All the recently affiliated summer members of the Phi are especially urged to attend this meeting to be initiated formally and to be introduced to visitors along with the Phi officers at a reception following the discussion.

Anyone interested in becoming a summer affiliate member and who has not yet been interviewed should come to the Phi hall on the fourth floor of New East between 2 and 4 o'clock tomorrow evening. All applicants are asked to be present at that time because the Phi has already opened its summer schedule with an orientation meeting last Monday evening.

University Plans to Appeal Verdict on Ackland Estate

Action Taken by President Frank Graham After Justice Rules in Favor of Rollins

With the $1,500,000 Ackland estate hanging in the balance, the Greater University of North Carolina will appeal to the next highest court the decision of a U. S. district court justice awarding the estate of the Washington, D. C., hotel hermit to Rollins College. Earlier this week district court Justice Alexander Holtzoff ruled that four wills left by William Hayes Ackland seemed to mean the money to go to Rollins College rather than to UNC.

Seven years ago, when Ackland died, the money seemed destined to go to Duke university. Duke, however, balked at the stipulation that the recipient of the money inter the Ackland body, writings, and paintings in an elaborate mausoleum-museum on the campus. Duke turned down the money and the wills went into courts where they were contested, but not broken, by a number of Ackland's relatives.

This week Justice Holtzoff was named to decide whether the wills specified the University of North Carolina or Rollins College of Winter Park, Fla., as second choice.

His statement Thursday that the money would go to Rollins was followed immediately by a statement by Dr. Frank Graham, University president, that the decision would be appealed.

Kyser Heads Judges In Contest to Choose 'Miss Student Nurse'

Kay Kyser, famed alumnus of the University, will come to Raleigh the night of July 1 to head a list of judges who will pick the "Miss North Carolina Student Nurse of 1947" from one of the state's 39 nursing schools.

Betty Smith Jones, author of "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," and Estelle Lawson Page, champion golfer, both residents of Chapel Hill, will also serve as judges.

The contest, being held by the North Carolina Good Health association to stimulate interest in the nursing program and the need for nurses, will be conducted in the hall of the House of Representatives of the State Capitol building. Nine girls [illegible] beauty and all-

Student Addresses Solons on FEPC

Clarence Barbour, Marine veteran from Raleigh, spoke before a subcommittee of the Senuate Labor and Public Welfare Thursday in behalf of the Ives-Chavez bill for a permanent Fair Employment Practices commission.

Barbour appeared as a representative of the Students for Democratic Action. He is vice-president of this organization on the campus. As spokesman for the organization Barbour said he would charge the expanding foothald that Communism has gained in American schools to the discrimination against the Negro in the South.

He stated that this problem was realized by the Southerners who are facing poor economic conditions maintained by job discrimination, and who know this is one of the biggest impediments to Southern progress.

He gave the committee a brief sketch of the condition of the Negro population in North Carolina based on a study made in 1944 by the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare.

In Chapel Hill this bill is endorsed by President Frank P. Graham and the Rev. Charles Jones, pastor of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian church.

RESERVE OFFICERS WILL MEET

The Orange county chapter of the Reserve Officers association will meet at the Carolina Inn at 7:30 Monday. All reserve officers of the army, navy, or marine are invited.

Dorm Council To Hold Meet

The Men's Interdormitory council will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial. The purpose of this meeting is to take action on the proposed interdormitory shack and to elect a vice president, treasurer, and four judicial members.

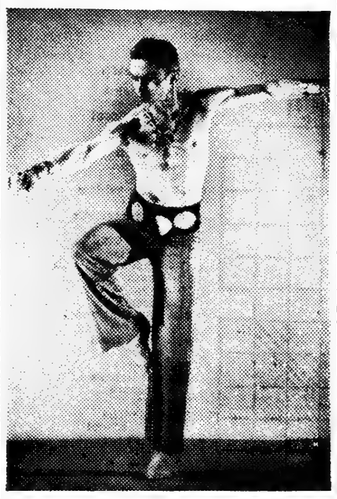
The meeting scheduled for last Thursday was not held due to lack of a quorum.

Members are reminded that the by-laws provide for presidents of dormitories to be relieved of their positions and the names of dormitory advisers to be reported to the Dean of Men if they have two unexcused absences. There will be no exceptions to this rule, said Summer President Frank Hassell.

Since proxies are not provided for in the by-laws, none will be accepted at Monday's meeting. However, those who sent proxies to last Thursday's meeting will be credited since an announcement was made to that effect, Hassell said.

IRC Will Discuss British Socialism

"Britain's Socialistic Revolution" provides the spark for the International Relations club's first summer roundtable discussion Monday evening at 7:30 in Graham Memorial's Roland Parker lounge.



Stuart Lucus will lead off the informal debate with a summary of the British labor government's domestic and foreign accomplishments.

John Bristow, IRC president, urged all students interested in current world problems to participate in the organization's summer programs. Prospective members may apply at [illegible] YMCA office.

Georgians Hear Hudson

BARRY LYNN

Union Presents Dance Artist Tuesday Night

Former Playmaker Boasts Fine Record

A dance concert will be presented next Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in Memorial hall, Martha Rice, Graham Memorial director, announces, starring Barry Lynn, outstanding interpretative choreographist, who will be assisted in a program of modern dancing by Nicholas Vanoff.

Tuesday's presentation will be in keeping with the mood of the summer season, emphasizing mostly light and gay numbers. However, two serious and unusual compositions which have been enthusiastically received wherever they were shown this season are to be staged during the evening. "Candles of Memory" and "Sancho Had Visions" are typical Barry Lynn arrangements, making full play of color and rich musical rhythm with an amazing frankness of approach.

Barry Lynn and his work are not new to Chapel Hill, since it was here that he began his career working with the Carolina Playmakers in the early days of University dance activity.

That career was to reach an international scope when the army sent Lynn overseas. He gave numerous performances in Europe including an [illegible] Nicholas Vanoff appeared this past season in all the performances of Lynn's Dance Theater. This summer while in Chapel Hill for work in the drama department, Vanoff will continue his dance specialties on campus.

The extensive plans for Lynn's coming year list Key West, Fla., as his headquarters. From there he will travel to the Caribbean islands for research work in native dances. He expects to take all bookings carrying him to new places to satisfy his dual urge for creative work and wanderlust.

Playmakers Assign Roles For New Play

Mattis, Stevenson Have Leading Parts

By Jerry Weiss

Tryouts were held last Wednesday afternoon and evening for roles in "The Late Christopher Bean," first summer production of the Carolina Playmakers, which will be staged on July 10 and 11.

Director John W. Parker announces the following cast selections: Dr. Haggett will be played by Norman W. Mattis, a visiting professor in hte speech division of the English department. Mr. Mattis is from Amherst college, Amherst, Mass. Susan Haggett will be portrayed by Bootsie Stevenson of Winston-Salem, N. C.; Abby, by Marion Miller of Aberdeen, Md.; Mrs. Haggett, by Catherine Covington of Portsmouth, Va.; Ada Haggett, by Henrietta Neal; Warren Cramer, by James Waddington of Washington, D. Anyone wishing to pick up a friend's Yack must also have his I.D. card.

June Ball to Climax UVA Membership Drive

By Charlie Gibson

Climaxing its current membership drive, the University Veterans Association will hold its June Ball next Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock in Woollen gymnasium with music by Jimmy Marshall and his Carolinians.

Admission to the ball is to be by UVA membership cards only. However, any veterans now enrolled at the University who have not already done so may pay dues of one dollar for both summer sessions at the door Friday evening.

As part of the drive lasting until next Tuesday, membership cards will be available prior to the dance at booths in the "Y" court and, during eating hours, at Lenoir hall. Thereafter, veterans may still join the UVA at the clubhouse.

Jimmy Marshall and the six Carolinians, oldest musical aggregation on the campus, will play for the June Ball with their own arrangements of the latest hits as well as the conventional favorites which have kept them in demand ever since January, 1946.

These musicians have performed for numerous campus dances and week-end stands at nightclubs on nearby beaches, including their most recent trip by plane to fill an engagement at the Casino club at Nag's Head. This summer Marshall says he and his band will do service for dancegoers of Chapel Hill and throughout the State.

The Carolinians are all veterans themselves, and five of the boys have played together ever since the band was organized a year and a half ago. Leader Marshall wields a clarinet instead of a baton; and it was in Midgeville, Ga., that he started his first band before entering the service.

Marshall Stine, the lead alto from Charlotte, is also rehearsals director. On the tenor sax is Bill Brunson, the Edenton lad who specializes in scat vocals, while the man holding up the bass fiddle is Tom Smathers, band librarian from Canton. Chic Burroughs, the group's business manager whom old University students will remember for his own campus orchestra in '40 and '41, is also a Charlotte crooner, well known for the blues selections he renders from his post at the piano.

The two newcomers in the band are William Allen Garrett, Danville, Va., on the alto sax and Bob Streetman, Marion, trumpeter.

Plans Being Considered to Construct New Road Between UNC and Duke

Summer Student Legislature Holds First Session of Term

In a short, sparsely-attended session at Gerrard Hall Thursday night the summer Student Legislature got underway with new Speaker Jack Folger swearing in three new members and conducting the election of two temporary officers.

New appointees sworn in Thursday night: Joe Blyth, UP, Town, to replace Jack Folger, now speaker; Annie Ben Beal, UP, Town, to replace Jean Patterson, out-of-district; and Charles Howe, SP, Dormitory, to replace Kenneth Black, who resigned.

Bob Hennessee, SP, dormitory, a new appointee, was not present to be sworn in as a replacement for Jim Castleberry, who is out-of-district.

Jimmy Wallace was named parliamentarian for the summer, and Jess Dedmond was voted temporary chairman of the elections committee.

The 1947-48 campus budget was distributed among the members of the legislature with a cautionary request by Finance Committee Chairman Bill Mackie that they exercise extreme care in the handling of student funds in this first year of student administration of student fees.

Speaker Folger announced that the legislature would meet next Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall and that "two or three" more meetings would be held in the first six-week summer term. He said, however, there would be no meeting on the Thursday preceding exam week.

AVC Will Convene In Initial Meeting Of Term Tuesday

Initial summer session meeting of the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee will be held Tuesday evening at 7:30 in the Presbyterian church.

Garry Fullerton, acting chairman for the summer in place of Ben Rouzie, said the local veterans' group will emphasize chapter organization and orientation of new members at Tuesday's meeting. In line with this he urged both new and old men and women veterans who are attending the University to turn out for the meeting.

"There is much legislation now before the congress which affects veterans either directly or indirectly. Men and women who are interested in seeing the passage of a housing bill, an increase in GI subsistence, and a continuation of rent control can make their wishes felt through the American Veterans committee. Of all national veterans organizations AVC alone has consistently fought for these measures," said Fullerton.

Junius Scales of Chapel Hill will report to the veterans group on the activities of the House un-American activities committee which recently branded the Southern Conference for Human Welfare a communist-front organization and of which Dr. Frank P. Graham is honorary president.

Tuesday's meeting will be held without the presence of Roland Giduz, Rusty Kirsh, Winston Broadfoot, and Regional Chairman Walter Spearman, who are attending the AVC national convention in Milwaukee. It is planned by the chapter to present a complete report on convention decisions at the July 8 chapter meeting.

SCHW to Meet Monday

The local chapter of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare will conduct its first meeting of the summer session on Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Graham Memorial.

Included on the agenda are election of officers and discussion of a program to be adopted by the group for summer action.

All members and those interested in the objectives of the organization are urged to attend this important and informative meeting.

SPRING GRADES READY

Course grades for last quarter's work may be picked after the hour of 9 Monday morning in lobby of Memorial hall. Central records officials said grades will be available there through Tuesday.

Survey of Route May Get Started By Next Spring

The construction of a 10-mile boulevard connecting the campuses of the University and Duke was proposed this week when residents of Chapel Hill and Durham conferred with A. H. Graham, chairman of the State Highway commission.

Mayor Robert W. Madry, head of the Chapel Hill delegation, felt "optimistic about eventually getting the boulevard."

The conference, held in Raleigh, once again brought into the limelight the matter which had been proposed nearly eight years ago. Mayor Madry said Commissioner Graham has promised to make a survey of the proposed route "possibly next spring."

Would Cost $1,500.000

According to present plans, the project would cost about $1,500,000, he said. In addition to connecting the two university campuses, the proposed route would serve as a connecting link in the surrounding highway system.

The boulevard would begin near the Horace Williams airport and run past the Duke west campus, where it would lead into north route 15. Two arms here would connect the boulevard with south route 15 (Pittsboro road) and route 54 (Greensboro highway). The entrance to Chapel Hill would be on North Columbia street.

Also, Madry added, anticipated increased traffic for the veterans and spastic hospitals which are planned for Durham may prove a contributing factor in having the proposed route approved.

Attending the meeting with Madry and Graham were T. F. Hickerson, local engineer, who brought along various maps to aid in planning the proposed route; Claude Teague, business manager of the University; and Sol Brower, official in the Duke university administrative staff.

Water Supply Adequate For Summer Sessions, According to Bennett

With the decrease in the number of summer school students from the ordinary session enrollment figures, J. S. Bennett, University supervisor of operations, says there is no critical danger of the school and the community facing a shortage in the water supply.

"Of course," Bennett explained, "when the number of students increases again in the fall, our facilities may become taxed."

What the University needs most now, according to Bennett, is to expand its filtering and purifying equipment, and plans are now underway to do so.

Under the supervision of W. A. Olsen, engineer appointed by the University building committee, preliminary site surveys are now being conducted to determine the location of the new plant. But actual construction, Bennett said, would probably not get underway until next year.

Cole to Play Tonight At Woollen Gym Dance

Because of the inclement weather, the "Y" court dance which Graham Memorial planned for tonight will be held instead in Woollen gymnasium from 8:30 till 12 o'clock. Music will be furnished by Roy Cole and his band, one of the most prominent campus musical clans.

The Order of the Grail will work in cooperation with Graham Memorial to have an escort committee at all girls dormitories to take coeds to the dance.

This is to be a "get acquainted" affair, and all girls and boys with or without dates are urged to attend informally.

Complete Surprise

Last fall anyone familiar with the history of the Ackland case would have said without hesitation that the University would be awarded the $1,500,000 estate for the use of promoting art in the South.

The decision of Federal Judge Alexander Holtzoff came as a complete surprise.

In one of the four wills that Ackland drew up he had specifically stated that the University of North Carolina should receive the gift if Duke would not accept it. However, in his final will he did not mention this alternative.

Before his death last winter, Former Governor O. Max Gardner had personally led the seven-year fight to establish the Ackland art center at the University. Perhaps the decision of the judge would have been quite different had Gardner been alive to continue stumping for the placement of the center here.

Early last summer the court-appointed trustees of the estate notified the University that they would soon appear on campus to investigate and see if they approved establishing the Ackland gift here. The Art department went into great research to assemble and print, for the convenience of the trustees of the estate, a complete sketch of the University and campus life. It was several months later before the members of the estate arrived, but they reported that our campus was better suited for the art center than Rollins. The gift seemed on our doorstep.

But several things clouded the issue since the decision. The University accepted the gift of the Morehead planetarium. Included in this gift was the provision to establish somewhere in the planetarium an art gallery to exhibit the works of art collected by Mrs. Morehead. Perhaps the judge's decision was based on the presumption that the Morehead gift would be sufficient for the art needs of the University. But the Morehead donation does not include funds for the advancement of art in the South. It merely requires a museum or show room to display the art collection of the late Mrs. Morehead.

The seven-year fight for the center has at least one more chapter before the conclusion—a higher court of appeal. With the exception of Judge Holtzoff the decisions have been in UNC's favor. But it's the final decree that counts. The University must prove that it needs the Ackland gift and is able to administer it to the best advantage.

High-Price Parking

The traffic committee has a full work detail ahead of it to enforce the new traffic rules on campus. They will employ more than just the fresh "No Parking" signs on the pavement to halt the violations of parking in unauthorized places.

Yesterday indifferent drivers parked their vehicles directly over the warning signs without the slighest pretense of understanding what they meant. Tomorrow drivers will learn that the lettering was not put there as a design.

Instead they will become known as a parking meter—but the cost of parking will be a dollar fine instead of the usual nickel.

Report on Communistic Activities Seen As Threat To All Liberals

By Russell G. Baldwin

The House Committee on un-American Activities has made the front page again in its attempted purge of liberalism. The committee is made up of a group of men whose most outstanding characteristic is hating liberals. Certainly everyone is acquainted with the record of Rep. Rankin of Mississippi and Rep. Mundt of South Dakota, two of the committee members. This committee has repeatedly sought to destroy the reputations of leading liberals in this country. In this connection, our own Dr. Frank has been a constant target of their slander campaign.

Just after the Southern Conference for Human Welfare sponsored Henry Wallace in his Raleigh speech and was about to sponsor him in another speech in Washington, the House Committee on un-American Activities reported that the Southern Conference for Human Welfare is a "Communist-inspired" organization. Perhaps it is just a coincidence that the report should be released at this time; but, on the other hand, it sounds like a good way to stop Wallace from "talking out of turn," or, at least, to damage his reputation.

Not Worried Over Reds

It is not the Communists that men like Rankin are worried about but the liberals. The Communists have practically no power in the U. S.—they lack a talking point that will appeal to Americans.

The liberals—men like Dr. Graham and Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon—are the real "danger." They appeal to reason and common sense, and their power is the response of the American people—a great power, indeed.

Locate Meaning

It must have taken the "Fascist-inspired" group in this country a long time to figure out the combination—else they would have used it sooner—but, finally, they have discovered a means of destroying liberals. It's a simple matter of tagging them with the Communist label, public opinion does the rest.

The Committee on un-American Activitijes must have danced with glee when they learned that Dr. Frank—long a champion of the "little" people in this country—had been associated with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Here was the chance they had been waiting for. They were care- Associated Press, "'Graham is not ful to report that, according to the a Communist' but is 'one of those liberals who show a predilection for affiiliation to various Communist-inspired front organizations'."

It would be silly for me or anyone else to attempt to defend Dr. Frank. It is unnecessary to recall the great service Dr. Frank rendered his country during the recent war; or President Roosevelt's letter to the DTH citing the government's need of his services, when North Carolinians protested his long absence from his duties as president of the University; nor is there need to recall the glowing praise of Sen. Morse. It would be absurd to suggest that anyone doubts where the loyalty of Dr. Frank lies.

If liberalism in this country is to be destroyed, if thinking is to be regimented, if those who differ with us are to be silenced, if we are to become a fascist nation in fact, then, we should become a fascist nation in name as well. Fascism is a much greater threat to this country than Communism. Let's hope we'll always have a Dr. Frank to protect us from its tyranny.

Fun Houses, Red Badges

World Like Rickety House, Someone Should Clean It Up

By Bob Sain

Earlier this spring I was in a fun-house at one of those noisy, beer-and-boogie beaches down on the coast. This particular fun-house was the usual sort of carnival place with narrow, dark passages, loud bells that rang over your head, make-believe skeletons that rattled and scraped your arms, and even the skirt-teasing air jet at the exit.

It was a big, rickety thing, a white, frame building, thrown up hastily quite a few years ago. The boards were warped from the salt air and the paint was peeling.

All in all I figure it was a good bit like the world.

Like this.

Feeling Way

You wandered along through the place, feeling your way, not exactly knowing what was coming next, but always certain, positive that you wouldn't get hurt.

No matter how loud the bell, how clammy the skeleton, how dark the passage ahead—you knew you would get out all right and pretty soon you would see the light of day, you hoped. Everything would come out okay. The people who ran the thing couldn't hurt you. It was against the law. Or something.

But, as a matter of fact, the people who ran the thing just weren't too concerned about your safety. Well naturally they didn't want anything to happen to you. It would cost them. They would lose their fun-house, maybe. Of course they would have the money they had made. But actually they would be out of business.

It was considerably like the world.

Sure, something could have happened to you in there. You could have been walking down one of those dark halls and a fire could have flared and burned the rickety old building to the ground. And there you would have been. Burned with it. The place certainly wasn't fireproof.

The more I think of it the more I figure it was quite a lot like the world.

Somebody should clean it up.

OF COURAGE?

Lately, like Charley Chaplin says, if you step off the curb with your left foot, folks start to calling you a Communist.

Say something about socialized medicine not being as bad as drowning children and the DAR will send out a delegation to tar and feather you as a dirty ole red.

Joker Human

Make like maybe a joker is human, even if he is black, and the Ku Kluxers'll foul up your back yard with a messy old burning cross that will leave a pile of ashes in the morning.

Underpaid tenant farmers? Bud, they don't exist. Not if you want to be able to drink a beer with the gang down at the corner.

So the way I've begun to look at it is that if you stand for a little reform and what you might call progress you get called a Communist.

So what about it?

So it gets people confused and they don't quite know what a Communist is. (Come to think of it, neither do I.) Anyway, you don't have to get a monthly communique from Uncle Joe in the Kremlin to get a little red badge pinned on your chest.

So maybe it means something good to get called a Communist. If you aren't, that is.

Harmonica Harmonizes Hot Hits

House Compares UNC's Administrative Duet With Cervantes' Don Quixote, Sancho Panza

By Robert Morrison

(Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of exclusive sketches of the men who run the University.)

Around the long banquet tables sat dignified and distinguished persons; the toastmaster rose to introduce the guest speaker: Dr. Robert Burton House, Chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and vice-president of the Greater and Consolidated University. There was a burst of applause as the great man rose from the chair and smiled magnificently upon the assembly of aristocracy. "I remembered to bring my notes," he stated.

This remark fell rather strangely upon the hushed group, but quickly some wag (who had heard the chancellor before and wanted everyone to know this) murmured an automatic cackle. Then with a triumphant sweep the chancellor pulled a harmonica from his vest and began playing boogie-woogie a-la-cowboy.

In the last installment of this column, we visited some private scenes in the life of Dr. Frank Graham. Some interesting comparisons can be made between the chancellor and the president. They are both excellent public speakers, but of entirely different varieties. Dr. Frank often reads his speeches — consisting of beautiful, awe-inspiring, flowing rhetoric, abounding with superfluous words and phrases; he will utter some masterful pronunciation, then pause a second while the audience respectfully bursts forth with thunderous applause.

Everyone Agrees

On the other hand, everyone understands what the chancellor says, they agree with him, and they agree with each other. He becomes a little elevated a few times, but usually is pouring forth facts and maxims. Everyone should be honest and sincere, he believes, and everyone should behave himself and have a good time. There are a lot of interesting things in th world, and we all should diligently study the things in the world. Law and order must always be maintained, and we should respect our elders.

"Fraternities are sound because they are property owners," the chancellor once declared before the students of Wesley Foundation, "and all property owners usually are sound." When asked what he thought of free love, he replied, "That kind of love is never free."

With a given problem, Dr. Frank and the chancellor will always have different views which lead to the same conclusion.

Lengthy Analogy

The chancellor once described the UNC administrative duet as similar to Cervantes' Don Quixote and Sancho Panza, being the president and chancellor, respectively. This analogy can be interestingly carried to some length.

A professor of history who was quoted in the last installment said that Dr. Frank was really not liberal, for he was anti-drinking and devoutly religious and liberal only in matters of politics and social programs. The professor, I think, may be right, and by the same reasoning the chancellor is really not a conservative (although everyone brands him a conservative as he sticks out like the proverbial thumb in this rarified atmosphere) for he believes in liberal progress: the building of bigger and better buildings, the hiring of bigger and better professors, and the addition of more departments, subjects, deans, students, trees, sidewalks, bell towers, football victories, alumni supporters, and drinking fountains.

Can't Be Moved

When the chancellor is sure that he's right, nothing short of Dr. Frank's atomic bomb will move him. He was certain that coeds should not eat in fraternity houses, and that student government, Jeffersonian democracy, freedom of speech, press and the Bill of Rights could not move him. He was certain that a dean of men should be a conservative tectotaler, and the most popular dean ever known was not re-appointed because he didn't quite make the grade of "conservative tectotaler."

In summary, the chancellor is a good egg whom UNC is luck to have at the helm.

WRITE AWAY

A Southern Gentleman

Dear Editor:

As a true son of the South I must ask why our beloved Confederate Soldier was referred to as a "Minute Man" by the 1947 Yackety Yack? Were not the Minute Men farmers of Massachusetts and Connecticut that stood ready to annoy the Redcoats at the beginning of the Revolutionary War?

H. C. TURNAGE

Worthwhile Group

As a veteran who has been at the University for more than a year, it was with great pride and pleasure that I read an advance copy of the UVA Newsletter reporting on the activities and accomplishments of the University Veteran's association since its inception in 1945.

Every veteran, every student at Carolina can feel justly proud of the progressiveness and breadth of the activities undertaken and so vigorously persued by our veterans' organization.

The U.V.A. has not confined its efforts to any narrow field. A survey of their activities runs the gamut from lobbying in Congress for improved veterans benefits and other progressive legislation, through aid to veterans on the campus, interest in student government and campus activities, aid in charitable drives, to a well-organized program of social activities and entertainment.

The U.V.A. is now in the midst of its quarterly drive for membership. On other campuses, veterans organizations have folded due to lack of interest of those eligible for membership. Let it not be said that Carolina allowed the disintegration of so fine an organization.

JIM LILLY

Way of Life

Dear Carolina Coed,

A welcome to Carolina is not complete without a welcome to Carolina's way of life. This way of life of which we are all very proud is now offered to you and we are sure you will soon find yourself as proud of it as we are. As has been stated before it is a privilege to be able to live under this student government and you, whether here for six weeks or two years, are now a vital part of it. In order to maintain this privilege and to provide for its effectiveness two codes have been set up, the Honor Code and the Campus Code. The importance of these cannot be over emphasised. If they fail, we fail with them. In order that they may not be misunderstood let me repeat them here. The Honor Code states that each student is on her honor not to lie, cheat, or steal, and to report others she sees doing so. It is because of this code that we have maintained such a valuable relationship in our classrooms between professors and students. The Campus Code states that a Carolina coed conducts herself as a lady at all times. There will be an opportunity for the girls who have just enrolled for the first time to sign a pledge next week to be governed by these codes. At that time any questions regarding them will be answered.

Also I would like to call your attention to the social rules posted in each room and to the Interfraternity council agreement posted in your dorm.

Each of these was made in order that your life here might be happy and profitable. Don't fail to familiarize yourself with them for they are your responsibility as a Carolina coed.

Sincerely,
Jane Rogers,
Chairman of Woman's Council

UVA COMMITTEE MEETING

The business committee of the University Veterans association will meet at 7:30 o'clock Monday evening in the UVA clubhouse. All members of the committee are urged to be present since besides the regular business, a treasurer for the summer must be elected at that time.

Three Mural Sports Set To Begin Monday Afternoon

Golfers Prep For Nationals

Linksmen Arrive For Michigan Affair

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 20—North Carolina's Southern conference golf champions arrived here today to begin preparations for the National Collegiate links tourney which gets underway bright and early Monday morning.

The Tar Heels came to town seven strong, with Coach Chuck Erickson leading the party that also included Dick Doeschler, Junie Bailey, Harvey Ward, Ray Taylor, Mike Nolan and Bob Cox. This afternoon the southern boys had their first crack at the 6,800-yard University of Michigan layout, which has been whipped into top shape for the tourney. The course is a par-72 grind with long and somewhat narrow fairways, a true test for the cream of the nation's college linksmen.

The first two rounds of the tourney—those to be played on Monday and Tuesday—will be the qualifying sessions with the top 64 players moving on to individual match play starting Wednesday.

The team title will be decided on the basis of the qualifying rounds with each team allowed six entries, the best four scores constituting the team aggregate.

The Carolina lads are among the favorites among the local crowds to cop both team and individual honors as they are sporting probably the best balanced outfit in the competition. With all six members of the Tar Heel team capable of producing par or subpar rounds, the boys from down South may come home with the trophies if they can produce the necessary four sizzling performances.

Weiner One Of Carolina's Best Ends Since Bershak

By Leon C. Mitchell

Art Weiner, Carolina's 216-pound, 6 foot, 4 inch, powerfully built footballer, is one of the most outstanding ends to appear at Carolina since the days of Andy Bershak.

Last season he was instrumental in helping Carolina become recognized as one of the best gridiron machines in the country.

Art attended Westfield high school in Newark, N. J., and while serving four years in the Marines as a staff sergeant, he attended Waipahu high school in Hawaii and also the University of Hawaii. He played two years of service football and basketball with Barbers Point air station in Hawaii in the Central Pacific league. John Tandy and Mike Rubish, who are also a pair of Carolina ends, played in this same league.

While stationed at Cherry Point air station here in North Carolina, Art made several visits to Carolina. He was so impressed with the friendly attitude and high spirits then that he decided to attend Carolina.

Weiner's first play in college football was good for a touchdown. Incidentally, it was the team's first score of the season. It turned out that that touchdown was needed to give Carolina a 14-14 tie with V.P.I.

During the 1946 season he caught three touchown passes and on a 40-yard end-around play scored a touchdown against William and Mary. The final score of that game was 21-7. The play was so well executed that it is still a topic of much discussion both here and at William and Mary.

With three minutes left before the first half against Wake Forest and behind in score 7-6, he again proved himself by catching a 50-yard touchdown pass. The touchdown put Carolina in the lead which they held for the remainder of the game. The final score was 26-14. It was in this game that he injured his knee and had to remain out of the lineup for two complete games.

Art can be found faithfully applying himself to his studies as he realizes their importance. But however busy he may be, he manages to take time for a brisk daily work-out, consisting of basketball, track, and touch-football.

He is always open for constructive criticism and appreciates the patience and understanding given him by the coaches. He realizes the need for coaching and the important part that the coaching staff plays in the development of a successful team.

Weiner is in tip-top shape and anxiously waiting for the kick-off against Georgia, next season's opening game. He is a scrapper, a hustler, and one who gives his all to the winning of the game. That's the kind of spirit Art possesses and the kind of game he displays.

Vic Seixas Among Tourney Favorites

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Los Angeles, Calif., June 20.—Top-ranking collegiate tennis stars from all over the United States continued warm-up matches on the UCLA courts here today in preparation for the national championships which get underway Monday afternoon.

With Bob Faulkenberg, last year's winner, not defending his crown, a trio of Eastern stars and a West coaster have been established as favorites to sweep the honors. Herbie Flam, the National Junior champion, probably will get the No. 1 seeded position, although Gardner Larned of William and Mary, last season's runnerup, is in the tournament.

With Larned and Flam in the favored positions will likely be Jack Tuero of Tulane, who handed Larned his only loss of the spring season, and Vic Seixas of North Carolina. Seixas dropped the Southern conference singles championship to Larned in a hard-tought contest at Chapel Hill, N. C., at the conclusion of the spring season.

Williamson Turns Pro

BULLETIN

It was learned through United Press last night that Ernie Williamson, star tackle of last year's Sugar Bowl football team, has signed a two-year contract with the Washington Redskins of the National Professional football league.

The announcement came as a surprise as it was thought Williamson would return to the University this fall to continue this college studies. No local comment was forthcoming.

Tracksters Look To Next Season For Banner Year

By Rone Lowe

Coach Dale Ranson's southern conference track champions, who broke records from Pennsylvania to Florida, are already preparing for another great season.

While Chunk Simmons and Jimmy Miller, hurdle and distance stars respectively, are competing in the NCAA championships at Salt Lake City, Utah, at least half of Carolina's cindermen are still working out at Fetzer field in preparation for the coming season.

Carolina's high-flying tracksters set an all time record this year when they amassed a total of 83 points in the Southern conference outdoor track championships, breaking the old record by five points. The Penn Relays at Philadelphia saw seven men place in seven events, while the remainder of the squad was winning the Carolina AAU meet at Chapel Hill.

Jack Milne, two-mile expert and winner of the Adam Hat trophy, shattered an 18-year-old University record this season when he made the gruelling run in 9:20.5.

Monogram Club Plans Party Next Saturday

The Carolina Monogram club will hold its first social function of the summer session next Saturday afternoon, President Len Szafaryn announced yesterday following the initial meeting of the organization last Wednesday night.

"We are planning a picnic at Hogan's lake beginning at 5 o'clock next Saturday afternoon," Szafaryn said. The letterman prexy also announced that the club would hold another meeting next Wednesday night at 20 o'clock to complete preparations for the affair.

There will be a one dollar assessment for all members attending the party, and it is hoped that there will be a large turnout for the outing.

Total of 34 Softball Teams Entered; 175 To Play Tennis

Horseshoes Tourney Also Slated To Begin Monday; Swimming Carnival Being Planned

By Gus Lacy

Final plans for the summer school intramural program were completed at a meeting of all intramural managers Thursday, and competition will begin Monday afternoon. The summer sports beginning next week include softball, tennis and horseshoes.

Intramural directors Walter Rabb and P. A. Lee announced yesterday that 34 teams have entered in softball, and that these teams will be divided into three or four leagues, with each team playing approximately twice a week. No division will be made between teams representing fraternities and those representing dormitories.

Softball games will begin at 4 and 5 p.m., Monday through Thursday, and on Friday when classes are being held on Saturday. Nine fields will be used, thereby allowing 18 games to be played each afternoon.

The following candidates were registered by reciprocity; Velma Fleming, Portland, Ohio, from Virginia; James Ira Lawson, Jr., Southern Pines, from Georgia; and William P. Rogers, Asheville, from Tennessee.

Members of the board conducting the examinations were: J. G. Ballew, Lenoir, president; J. C. Brantley, Jr., Raleigh; W. A. Gilliam, Winston-Salem; H. C. McAllister, Chapel Hill, secretary-treasurer; and R. A. McDuffie, Greensboro.

Native Crafts from Saipan Highlight Display in Library

By Frances Hill

A special exhibit featuring a collection of native crafts of Saipan is a highlight this week in the University library. T. Ross Fink of the Department of Education has contributed these many works. He suggested June as an appropriate time for this display since this month is the third anniversary of the invasion of Saipan.

As an executive officer on Saipan Mr. Fink was the recipient of many gifts. Candlesticks from a Buddhist temple, a Japanese officer's sword, Korean and Japanese wood figures and dolls are among the colorful articles in the first display case located on the right of the lobby.

Perhaps the most fascinating items are the teaching materials used by the military officials who had charge of establishing schools in which native children were taught English. Mr. Fink and his assistants had to mimeograph their own text materials and records, some of which are shown. As there was a scarcity of materials, the children were taught to do drawings on paper used in the bomb packings. One adult native also utilized G. I. handkerchiefs for his paintings.

Spanish nuns on Saipan taught the girls needlecraft. A lovely example is the cristening dress made from army mosquito netting by a 14-year-old Japanese girl.

Wesley Group to Meet

The Wesley Foundation of the Methodist church will meet tomorrow night at 6 o'clock for supper and a program. The discussion on "The Christian Basis for Social Action" will be led by the Rev. Robert Nelson, director of the Foundation.

All interested students are urged to come for both the supper and the ensuing program. This will be the first program in the summer series, which will include discussion and addresses on many social issues, including politics, the press, education, and civil liberties.

French House Lists Program

Talk, Concert Slated To Highlight Week

A talk by Mr. E. T. Draper-Savage of the Department of Romance Languages and a concert by French House students head the program for the forthcoming week of the French House on campus.

Draper-Savage, an instructor in the French department who has spent considerable time in Paris, will speak on "Artist Life in Paris" at 7 o'clock Thursday night at French House headquarters in the ADPi house on Rosemary street. French-speaking guests are welcome to attend the talk.

Concert and Films

On Friday night members of the language group will present a vocal concert at 7 p.m. but the complete program has not been announced as yet.

French films will be shown both Monday and Wednesday night of next week at 7 p.m. and in addition, a talk by another member of the Romance Language Department may be scheduled.

This week members of the French House and visitors heard Rene Hardre of Woman's College in Greensboro and Dr. Urban T. Holmes. Hardre spoke Wednesday night on the French resistance movement and Dr. Holmes gave an illustrated lecture Thursday night on Old Paris. Tonight a picnic is planned at Eastwood Lake if weather permits.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE

Mayor of Victory Village Pleased with Improvements

By Ken Rothwell

Organization of the Victory Village government, which was started with an election in May, has progressed considerably during the past month, according to an announcement by Acting Mayor Bill Bragaw.

South building officials have co-operated to the fullest extent with the village council's recommendations for improvements in street lighting, said Bragaw. At the present time 12 new street lights have been erected, and five more are in the process of being erected.

The traffic problem, which was one of the major reasons for organizing the village government, has been considerably alleviated with the enforcement of a 10-mile speed limit in the village area. This enforcement has been made possible, according to Bragaw, by the cooperation of the Chapel Hill police department and the incorporation of traffic regulations for the vets' village in the new campus traffic code.

Construction of children's playgrounds in "Mudville" is projected inasmuch as the University has provided the land but final action awaits organization of volunteer workers.

Bragaw also announced that election of a permanent mayor for the village will be delayed until fall quarter, since a large percentage of the present population is transient.

Phi Assembly Debates Anti-Lynch Measure

The Philanthropic Literary society met Tuesday night in New West to discuss the passage of Federal anti-lynching laws. Judge Clyde C. Carter of the commercial law department was the principal speaker of the evening, urging passage of a federal law to insure each individual the equal protection of the law. Speaker Robert Morrison presided over the meeting.

The bill as presented was tabled at the end of the meeting. Affiliate members for the summer session were initiated at the end of the discussion.

Social activities for the summer began last night as the members of the Phi were entertained at a swimming party at Eastwood lake.

Next Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. the Phi will meet in New East to discuss the question of University control of all Chapel Hill business establishments. This matter has been under consideration by students for some time and a spirited discussion is expected. The meeting is open to the public as well as students.

Copies of Conner Speech Ready for Distribution

The convocation address delivered during the past college year at the University by Dr. R. D. W. Connor, history professor and formed United States archivist, on "A State Experiment in Higher Education" has just been printed in pamphlet form.

Holder of the Craige Chair of jurisprudence and history, Dr. Connor was graduated from the University in 1899; was secretary of the N. C. Historical Commission for several years; was on the University faculty from 1921 to 1934 when he went to Washington as Archivist. He returned here in 1941.

Copies of his address may be obtained from the Department of Political Science here.

UVA June Ball Friday Night Will Feature 'The Carolinians'

Dance Is Highlight of Membership Drive; Will Begin at 8:30 in Woollen Gymnasium

Jimmy Marshall and his eight Carolinians will play for the June Ball to be sponsored by the University Veterans association at 8:30 o'clock Friday evening in Woollen gymnasium, according to an announcement by Hugh Wells, UVA president.

Highlighting the current UVA membership drive, the June Ball will be an informal affair wiht admission open to all University students. The dance will not be restricted to UVA members only as was first planned. However, membership cards will be on sale at a booth in the gymnasium Friday evening; and any veteran desiring to join the UVA at a later date may do so at the clubhouse.

JIMMY MARSHALL

Favorite Tunes

Friday's dance will feature tunes both familiar and new, arranged by the Carolinians themselves in a style that has earned them fame as the oldest student band on the campus. The Carolinians are veteran musicians of many other University dances dating back to the winter of '46. They have also made numerous week-end stands at nearby beaches such as their next engagement at the Casino club at Nag's Head.

Members of the group are Jimmy Marshall, leader, from Midgeville, Ga.; Marshall Stine and Chic Burroughs, Charlotte; Bill Brunson, Edenton; Tom Smathers, Canton; Bob Streetman, Marion; William Allen Garrett, Danville, Va.; and Otis Brown, Greensboro.

Dormitory Council Passes Proposed Recreation Shack

The Men's Interdormitory council voted at Monday's meeting to start immediate action on the procurement or erection of an interdormitory recreation shack, with the stipulation that such a building be located within walking distance of the dormitories.

It was also voted that a joint meeting of the Men's Interdormitory council with the Women's Interdormitory council should be held in order to plan and execute the project. This joint meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. next Monday in the Roland Parker Lounge No. 2, Graham Memorial.

Raising of Funds

It was voted that funds for the building should be raised by sponsoring dances, but a resolution was also carried to the effect that each Interdormitory council member should contact other dormitory men before the next meeting for suggestions on other ways of raising money.

A resolution was approved setting up a committee of three, appointed by the chair, to investigate the feasibility of holding a dance in the immediate future, to determine what orchestra will be available and to report on these items at the next meeting. Dick Major, John Rosser and Sydney Hughes, presidents of Battle, Graham and Pettigrew dormitories, respectively, were named members of the committee. Dick Major was elected chairman.

Legislature Meeting Slated for Thursday

Convening for the second legislative session of the summer term, student lawmakers will meet tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Principal business on the agenda will be the election of a temporary director for Graham Memorial to replace Tag Montague, regular director who is not in summer school.

Speaker Jack Folger said yesterday that some new bills would be introduced and work for the season would get under way. He also invited all interested students, new and old, to sit-in on the meeting.

The legislature met last week and swore in three new members, in addition to naming Jimmy Wallace summer parliamentarian and Jesse Dedmond temporary chairman of the elections committee.

English Group To Hear Niggli

Josephina Niggli, author of "Mexican Village," which won the Mayflower award of 1946, will speak on Formal Instruction and the Creative Student at the first meeting of the Chapel Hill group of the fifth North Carolina English Institute in Graham Memorial lounge Thursday evening at eight o'clock. Miss Niggli's talk will be based on her experiences as a newcomer from Mexico in a large Texas high school.

Clifford P. Lyons, head of the University English department, will welcome the Institute group and introduce Miss Niggli, who is teaching creative writing in the summer session. After Miss Niggli's talk, there will be a brief business session for organization and planning. This will be followed, according to announcement circulated on the campus, "by a half-hour or so of unsupervised language arts activity."

The local group of teachers of English is one of several campus divisions of the North Carolina English Institute, which this year will hold regional conferences during July at East Carolina Teachers college, Western Carolina Teachers college, and Appalachian State Teachers college. The Institute's final conference will be held at Chapel Hill and Duke University July 31 to August 2.

Sponsored by the University Extension division and the North Carolina English Teachers association, the English institute is made up of college and high school teachers of English and others having a professional interest in the improvement of English instruction.

Red Progress Will Be Topic Of IRC Forum

How should the democracies meet the challenge of spreading Russian communism?—Four leading professors will thrash over this crucial problem tonight in the International Relations club's special faculty forum at 8 o'clock in Graham Memorial's main lounge.

Following the forum, the audience will participate in the nanual IRC reception for summer school students. Refreshments will be served.

Prof. W. Carson Ryan, education department chairman, will be pitted against visiting professor Karl E. Shedd of the University of Georgia. "Why is Communism succeeding?" will be the provocative title of the discussion. Philosophy Professor Hulmut Kuhn and Prof. M. S. Heath of the economics department round out the panel of speakers.

Weaver to Moderate

Questions from the audience will follow the informal debate of the faculty members. Dean of Men Fred Weaver will moderate.

"We are sponsoring this faculty forum in an attempt to get at the basic questions dividing our country and the Soviet Union," explained IRC President John Bristow.

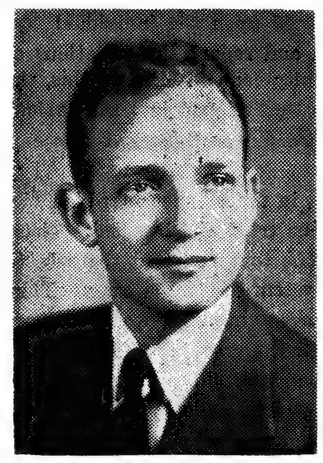
Shortly before the forum, Lincoln Kan, recently returned Carolina delegate to the conference of the American Association for the United Nations, will deliver a brief report on his observations at the Lake Success headquarters of U.N.

Sound and Fury Will Meet Tonight

Sound and Fury, Carolina's musical comedy organization, will hold a meeting tonight at 7 o'clock in Memorial hall to discuss plans for a minstrel show to be produced during the first summer session, President Billy Carmichael announced yesterday.

All persons, whether old members of S and F or not, are invited to attend the meeting. The show will require not only players, but also persons interested in helping out in lighting, makeup and other allied fields.

Any persons who wish further information about the activity before the meeting can drop by room 210 of Graham Memorial (the Daily Tar Heel sports office) between 2 and 5 where a representative of S and F will be on hand to answer all questions and sign up new members to the organizations.



Exactly what the minstrel will consist of has not been decided and this will be one of the chief topics of the meeting. The show will be the first summer entertainment of its type that S and F has produced since 1941.

New Football Seating Arrangements Announced for Next Season by Fetzer

Student Leaders and Athletic Officials Iron Out Difficulties After Discussions on Matter

By Irwin Smallwood

Student seating at football games, which became a point of hot controversy after the first home game last year, has been altered considerably for the 1947 season, it was announced yesterday by Athletic Director Bob Fetzer, who said in making the announcement that he and the athletic department hoped the changes made on the basis of student estimates for next fall would suffice.

JACK ELLIS

What might have turned into an unfortunate student-athletic department feud was averted when president of the student body Tom Eller, Tar Heel Editor Barron Mills, Legislature Member Charlie Long and Sports Editor Irwin Smallwood requested a conference with Fetzer and subsequently worked out a plan whereby students would be seated to the best advantage possible.

Seats Begin on 50-Yard Line

Important changes include the moving of the student section 600 seats over from where it started last year to the 50-yard line, and the installation of temporary bleachers above the concrete stands for all home games. Next fall, the student section will begin the middle of the section directly in front of the press box and continue toward the goal line until the stands are filled.

For all five games next year, the sections which last year held approximately 1,000 will hold 1,500, thus putting a maximum of students in the best seats possible. Student admission will be handled in the same way it was last year, with the holders of the passbooks exchanging the coupons for reserved seat stubs at the gate.

Students wishing to bring guests to the games will be allowed to turn in their passbook coupon, pay the price of one ticket and secure two reserved seats as long as they last. However, they will not be able to do this until they are registered in school next fall and have their fall quarter passbooks.

Ticket Sales

July 1 reserved tickets for all home games will be put on sale across the counter in Woollen gym, and students will be eligible to buy them on the same basis as the general public. At present, season books are being sold at the Woollen gym ticket window.

At the same time the student seating announcement was made, ticket officials at Woollen announced that all faculty members and University employees who are entitled to them should apply at once for their season tickets if they want them. If they are not secured by July 1 they will be thrown in the single game ticket pool and be sold on a first come, first served plan.

Braswell to Lead Dialectic Senate During Summer

Maurice Braswell, junior pre-law student from Rocky Mount, was elected president of the Dialectic senate at last week's executive session. Braswell, who is also president of the Debate council, is a veteran of the army air forces.

Other officers elected for the summer are John Zucker, president pro tempore; Charlie Hodgson, critic; George Rabil, clerk; John Brock, sergeant-at-arms; and Earl Fitzgerald, treasurer.

The Di senate will meet tonight at 9 o'clock in Di hall, third floor of New West, to discuss its opening bill for the session, which is resolved: That the Senate of the Dialectic Literary society considers the recent actions of the communist party in Hungary aggressive and unlawful, a threat to world peace, and renders unfeasible any present measures for disarmament, and that the Senate recommends that the government of the U. S. represent to the Security council of U. N. that unless a free election can be held within three months to determine the will of the majority of the Hungarian people concerning their form of government, that the necessary increases in the expenditures of the U. S. for armaments will render it impossible to continue relief operations in Eastern Europe on their present scale, and make the extension of credits or loans in that area impossible.

Convocation Speaker Is Illinois Educator

The first convocation address of this year's summer school will be held in Memorial hall Thursday morning, July 3, Guy B. Phillips, director of the summer school, announced yesterday. Dr. George D. Stoddard, president of the University of Illinois, will be the principal speaker.

The address will be delivered at 10 o'clock in the morning, and, as usual for convocation meetings of this series, classes during this period will not meet.

Phillips said Dr. Stoddard, who is the former chairman of the United States commission sent to Japan to study educational institutions and practices, will speak on "Education East and West."

CAMPUS PARTY TO MEET

The Campus party will meet Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial, it was announced yesterday by Chairman Jesse Dedmond.

Music Major Will Give Piano Recital Tonight

Jack Ellis, University music major, will give his senior piano recital in Hill hall at 8:30 o'clock.

His program will include Mozart's Fantasia in D minor, Bach's English Suite No. 2 in A minor, and the Sonata in B flat major, opus 22, of Beethoven; also Schumann's Kreisleriana and three humorous dances, "The Grasshopper's Wedding," "String. String, Turn the String," and "Bear Dance," by the late Hungarian composer, Bela Bartok.

A native of Sherman, Texas, Ellis has been active in campus activities, having served as president of Sound and Fury, musical comedy club, and president of the University YMCA. He has appeared as soloist with the Men's Glee club and was recently initiated into Phi Beta Kappa. In 1944 he received the Algernon Sidney Sullivan Award for all-round service. He is a member of Phi Mu Alpha, honorary music fraternity, and during the war served in the navy.

Meet Set Tonight For Student Party

The Student party will hold its first meeting of the summer tonight at 7 o'clock in Roland Parker Lounge 3, Graham Memorial, Chairman Charlie Long announced yesterday.

The announcement of the meeting came after two meetings of the steering committee this week, when it was decided that several party meetings would be necessary during the summer session in order that investigations and work on the party platform may be carried on. Long urged that all members of the party now in school be present for the meeting.

"We have successfully carried out our first promise to the student body, that of improved seating arrangements in Kenan sadium. There is still much to be done," Long said.

The Student party is open to all members of the campus who do not hold affiliations with other political groups, and all students who are interested in good student government are sincerely urged to attend, Long said.

Alderman Coeds to Be Guests of UVA Tonight

Continuing its summer open house series, the University Veterans association will honor the coeds of Alderman dormitory this evening from 8:30 until 11 o'clock.

Phil Frazier, versatile piano stylist currently appearing at Danziger's, will entertain during intermission.

Alderman coeds are urged to be ready at 8:15, when the escort committee will call.

Veterans wishing to join the UVA may obtain membership cards at the door.

Classes in University Will Meet on July 4

To clear up any possible confusion on the University's class policy for the 4th of July, Guy B. Phillips, director of the summer sessions, has announced that regular classes will be held on that date.

This procedure is necessary, Phillips explained, in order to get the required amount of summer work completed by September. He pointed out that classes have had to be scheduled for two Saturdays in this session, and three in the next, to accomplish this.

"The Law school," he continued, "by special arrangements, is running under a different schedule, and they will take the 4th off. However, they will make this work up the following Saturday."

WORLD FEDERALISTS MEET

The student chapter of United World Federalists will meet in the Grail room, Graham Memorial, Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

All members are urged to attend since officers for the summer sessions will be elected at this meeting.

Everyone interested in securing world peace by strengthening the U. N. charter into an organization with adequate powers to prevent war is cordially invited to attend and take part in the activities of the group.

Student Union to Present Magician in Show In Memorial Hall Tomorrow Night at 8:30

Graham Memorial will present Colin Shaw Smith, magician, in a program also featuring his wife Nancy and a little French dog named "Two-Forty" in Memorial hall at 8:30 Thursday evening.

COLIN SHAW SMITH

Before he married and settled down to do graduate work in English and dramatics here at the University, Smith circled the globe with his slight-of-hand mastery. He toured with the USO camp shows for 30 months during the war as a magician and master of ceremonies, covering 125,000 miles in 27 countries to entertain approximately 2,000,000 servicemen.

This world-wide tour came as a climax to a career that began for Smith with backyard shows as a kid in Mt. Olive, his hometown. Professional shows came his way at the age of 15, and at 18 he became a full-fledged member of the impressive-sounding International Brotherhood of Magicians. As a popular showman and campus sorcerer, Smith later worked through Davidson by '39 and then went to Oak Ridge Military Institute to teach English for a year.

His performances have received lavish praise in Chapel Hill heretofore. After his show for the last Boys State, newspapers throughout the State lauded his acts and especially his continuous humorous patter. This was a technique Smith says he developed while entertaining overseas where he traveled so lightly that he had to work "almost entirely out of my pockets."

"The cutest trick in the show," according to Smith, is his wife Nancy, a past music major at the Womans College who has earned her own reputation in church, little theater, and radio chores in this vicinity. Mrs. Smith will play several solos in addition to furnishing background music for the entire show Thursday evening.

The third veteran performer to appear at that time will be "Two-Forty," the grayish terrier Smith bought in a pet shop in Paris after the poodle flirted with him from the shop window. "Two-Forty" traveled around the world with Smith. He got his name from the matinee time in show business because he "seemed a natural-born ham."

Visiting Privilege

Another problem that faces student leaders in getting our constitution into action is the House Privileges board—which seemed at death's door last spring. This was the one proposed amendment to the Constitution that apparently met little opposition from campus circles and aroused almost no comment, but was delivered a smashing blow at the polls.

The amendment that would have erased the existence of the Board would have given the Interfraternity council the power to establish their own visiting agreement between the fraternities and the coeds—a practice that was in effect the year preceding the proposed amendment.

When next September rolls around and the existing agreement expires and the HPB will again try to make a go of it. Here are the barriers that must be worked out with the greatest diplomacy. Will the president of the Interfraternity council be delegated chairman of the HPB just because it has been an unwritten practice?

The manner in which the HPB will police the rules it establishes will be another problem that will have to be solved. During the past year it was placed upon the individual fraternity to use the Honor system and report any violations of the agreement to the Interfraternity council. Before this, the HPB was a "fly-by-night" group that slipped into the various houses at times of their own choosing and checked to see if the rules were being adhered to.

The crux of the situation rests in the manner in which violations of the agreement should be tried and handled. There are some of the leaders on campus that feel that there is no need for having an HPB court system to try the cases. They reason that any violations that are committed would be covered under the Campus Code, and therefore, the Honor councils are capable of handling them and should. The matter will have to be studied from every possible angle by the members of the HPB and their decision should be based upon their findings.

Larger Crowds

If the Convocation committee wants to pack the auditorium for its gatherings staged each term, they should take heed of one of Johnny Clampitt's planks that he proposed as a candidate for president of the student body.

Clampitt felt that to have a Convocation, or mass gathering as the name implies, the committee should make more of the occasion than just having a speaker. He proposed that a full program consisting of a few sidelights should be used—the band, or the glee club to set the tempo. Clampitt believes that the added attractions will promote more interest and supply some local color for the speaker as well as the audience.

The high calibre of the speakers in the past has been enough to draw the interested listeners, but the Convocation needs just a slight boost to make them a Convocation in the true sense of the word.

The Veritable Wolfe Cult

Sacred Veins of Tom Wolfe Drained by Clinging Leech

By Bob Sain

The yellow moon pulled pleasant mist up from the grass in the arboretum and, where its rays fell through the roof of the trees, lay hazy coins of gold on the shadowy earth.

I came upon Athelstan Boniface, my poetic friend, sitting on a small bridge. His long black hair, curling over the collar of his Byronesque white shirt, was even more unruly than usual. His horn-rimmed spectacles sat boldy, almost angrily, on his bony nose. He looked quite like a ruffled owl. He was parting with his bare toes the little stream of water that trickled under the bridge.

"What's this, Athelstan?" I stood over him. "Back to nature?"

"Yes," he answered, solemnly. "I am Thoreau at Walden." He paused, and breaking his usual decorum, spat between his teeth into the water. "Or I would be if I were not so angry."

Interested, I removed my shoes and joined him. "Why so, Ath?"

He kicked viciously at the water. Then he turned to me, baring his teeth. "Thomas Wolfe," he ground out, "has been violated!"

Well Posted

I shrugged, mumbled something about not being very well posted on the state of Tom's chastity and Ath answered me with a snarl.

"A leech clings to the ever-living spirit of the master, pulling from his sacred veins the blood of genius."

No sound (save the snap-and-shhh of a beer bottle opened somewhere near) broke the silence as I waited for Athelstan to marshal his charging steeds of rage. He did. He spoke.

"This leech, an individual named John Terry, is a professor somewhere in New York and his middle initial is S. He trod this same moon-haunted soil;" Ath looked about, "he moved across this ground in the sacred company, no doubt, of the master some two decades past. He is the 'official biographer of Thomas Wolfe.' Oh, heresy! Only the gods or the master himself could write such a biography."

"Go on, Ath," I put in, soothingly.

Ath was indeed in a rage.

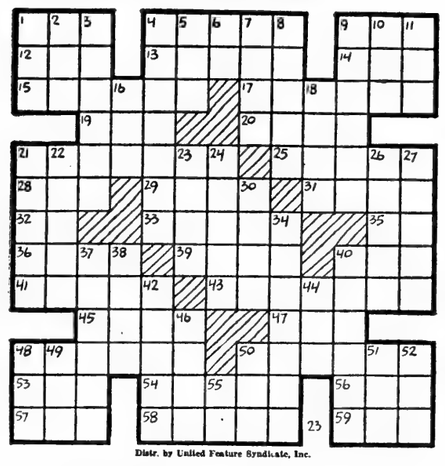
"This Terry says Thomas Wolfe was not brooding, lonely, not a despairing, lost soul. 'Tom,' to quote this man Perry, who has no reverence whatsoever, 'was anything but that way.' Terry, who says the young Wolfe was usually the center of a group to which he was telling some remarkable tale, Terry would have us believe the master some sort of hillbilly raconteur. Terry intimates that the master spent his time telling stories that were 'sometimes a little racy.' Wolfe telling dirty jokes! God forbid!"

Ath had lost his look of wild desperation. Now he was morose, broken. "Terry thinks it strange that what he calls 'a veritable Wolfe cult' is developing. And why not a cult? Who is more worthy?

Pitiful Tears

"And," Ath continued, his tears making pitiful little pockmarks in the stream, "he describes the master as 'a big, lovable, friendly fellow.' A Sonny Tufts he makes of Thomas Wolfe."

Ath was blubbering. I shushed him. Ath pulled himself together, stood, and looked into the stream.



"Terry says," Ath mumbled, "Terry says that much 'sheer bunk' has been published about Thomas Wolfe." There was a long pause. Ath continued. "If Terry is his official biographer, I'll hazard much more of the same will be written."

He crossed the bridge and vanished in the moon-laden mist.

Delegate Says AVC Gathering Proved Group's True Colors

By Roland Giduz

"The greatest mass demonstration of democracy ever seen." So Washington Columnist Thomas L. Stokes labeled the first national convention of the American Veterans committee held in Des Moines last year. And having returned only yesterday from the second annual convention of AVC, held in Milwaukee during the past week, I feel Stokes hit it right on the head—if he did not underestimate the situation.

The three UNC delegates to the meeting, Winston Broadfoot, Rusty Kirsch, and myself, and Walter Spearman, national AVC officer, entered the meeting a bit skeptically last Thursday morning, but left Milwaukee late Sunday afternoon feeling greatly heartened. AVC had proven its true colors, as America's fastest growing and greatest liberal organization of World War II vets . . . . Though the cry of Communist domination and radical has time and again dogged AVC; the group thoroughly purged itself of left wing officers in annual elections there, and took strong stands against American Reds in some of their several hundred point platform statements on domestic, international, and veterans' affairs.

Convention Caucus Chatter: The newly-elected national chairman, genial Chat Paterson, was the coolest character of the entire highly-spirited convention: A bare four hours before election time Sunday morning—at about 4 a. m.—a "Beat Paterson" caucus composed of AVC's left-wingers combined forces in a thousand-delegate rally. And right after the enthusiastic caucus in the same Schroeder hotel ballroom, at the time when things looked blackest for Paterson's party, the Independent Progressives, "Happy Chat" was seen heppily beating out the boogie on the ballroom grand piano. P.S.: He subsequently won by a large majority.

Little Sleep

Chapel Hill delegates slept about three to four hours (maybe less) daily (never at night) during the entire four-day session . . . . just no time for such trivial matters. Convention sessions and caucuses opened at 9 or 10 each morning and sometimes lasted until 3 a. m. the following morning.

Milwaukee bars benefited little from having 2,000 AVConventioners in their city. A neon sign across from convention hall, plugging shots at a dime apiece, left its bar bare and empty . . . . This convention was strictly for business!!! . . . Cartoonist Bill Mauldin, alleged dark hoss for the nation chairmanship, threw his weight in back of Paterson . . . . And the great relief of CH-AVCers on finding rumors that Elliot Roosevelt was flying to Milwaukee to run against Paterson were untrue.

Long Way Home

A long 28 hours drive back from Milwaukee . . . . Yeoman conventioner Broadfoot made it back to law classes yesterday with only minutes to spare . . . . Everyone was agreed on the expert and unbossed handling of the entire affair. . . . At any time any delegate could get the floor, to speak on the issue of the minute. And all 2,000 delegates and observers were indeed active and outspoken. . . . No introverts there!

Spearman Refuses

Past southeastern regional vice-chairman Walter Spearman was several times asked if he would run for national chairman, but refused flatly in support of Paterson and the Independent Progressive slate . . . . We didn't even get a chance to go more than three blocks away from our hotel until after the conclave ended at 22 minutes before 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, when we took a short spin around fair Schlitz city . . . .

Looking back over it, we feel all set to keep up the fight for a greater AVC on the CH campus . . . . and encourage all progressive-thinking vets in school to consider the group this summer. Next meeting is July S . . . . Watch AVC grow.

U. S. Tradition of Un-Preparedness Must Be Broken Soon to Insure Peace

By Bill Buchan

In an article on the sad state of our American army, Time magazine this week reprinted a famous and well-worn quotation stated by the first American President, 154 years ago.

What George Washington said was something like this: "There is a rank due to the United States among nations which will be withheld, if not absolutely lost, by the reputation of weakness . . . if we desire to secure peace . . . it must be known that we are at all times ready for war."

Washington's speech needs to be spoken more than ever today. If not that one, we certainly need one that will do more to emphasize the unhappy fact that we, as a country, are in one heck of a shape.

Belief in Tradition

The main reason, perhaps, for this situation is our faithful and unchanging belief in tradition. It seemingly never occurs to us that things are different from the "old days." Perhaps then, a regular conscripted army would have been undemocratic and unnecessary. Today an ever-ready, thoroughly trained army is the only shield between us and destruction. This is 1947.

Russia, generally shuddered over as the nation that will give us trouble, has approximately 208 active army divisions on duty. The United States, protector of the world, has 14. Armchair strategists have carefully mapped out the years in which Russia will be able to equal our scientific might and the year in which she will be able to overpower us. Yet, in the face of all this, the American people go on making pretty and sometimes frightening speeches about the world condition, but actually do nothing. Our congress spends so much time arguing over loans to other countries that they very likely won't have time to pass the all-important Universal Training bill that will keep our army up-to-date and constantly alert. They are so eager to reduce the budget and gain a few votes that they cut thousands of dollars from the budgets of the War and Navy departments. Cuts which will do nothing but make us weaker.

If it means abandoning pure American tradition to be thoroughly prepared for war, should it come, then we'd better abandon it fast. Starving people the world over are to be pitied, but if it means that we are to sacrifice our strength to make them strong, then hard as the decision may be, it must be in our favor.

Examine Figures

Look at the figures: Russia has 4½ million men under arms, 15½ thousand combat planes, and is building a submarine navy. The U. S. has 500,000 so-called soldiers scattered throughout the world and three understrength divisions in this country. The Army Air forces are down to 9,000 planes and 2,000 of these will go into reserve every year. Instead of increasing, we are steadily decreasing. Our strongest points lie with the Navy and its Marines, but even they could be equaled by the Reds in a few years. Our defense plants, once so proud that built 96,000 planes in 1944, produced 1,330 in 1946.

The reason we are practically defenseless is the good old American tradition which says that planes, and guns, and men mean war and we don't encourage war. When that tradition was born, we didn't have 208 army divisions with guns cocked, staring us in the face.

By no means should we stop working for the United Nations and friendship, and under no circumstances should we stop talking peace, but let's live up to the times, and while we preach peace, let us also let any possible aggressor know that we are ready, man for man, and gun for gun.

Russia talks of peace and still maintains a huge army—why can't we? Russia sends delegates to all peace conferences and still builds her submarines—why can't we? Russia still insists that she is our friend and ally, yet hangs her iron curtain on all her factories and industries—why can't we?

It's time we came to life and looked at the ugly picture. We are not prepared for what seems inevitable. If we were prepared—if we could match man for man and plane for plane—we could most likely scare off any would-be trouble-makers. As long as we go on slashing budgets and letting our defense posts deteriorate, we're going to be a potential hunting ground.

To be prepared demands a continual strong flow of armed might. The only way to obtain that might is through Universal Military training, adequate funds for maintenance, and the full support of the whole United States.

As in 1776, the United States is Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public.

One More Smear

Dear Sir:

The House Un-American Committee has added one more smear to its long line of successes. This time the victim is the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. The persons painted with the red brush are Clark Foreman, Frank Graham, Henry Wallace and all other Americans who have dared to speak out against the domestic and foreign policy of the present government.

This latest attack on progressive Americans by the Parnell Thomas-John Rankin combination is not an accident or an isolated case. The close of World War II saw a shift in the power of the world. The American imperialists have seized the power from the British ruling class and are now driving headlong for domination of the world. This is not just reaction: it is a step toward American fascism. Here is part of the Congressional report on Fascism in Action which may help clear up the confused thinking in America today:" The coming of fascism generally favors big business, strengthens the position fo heavy industries, retains enough of the profit system to permit the elite to build up personal fortunes. . .facilitates cartelization, and spends huge sums for military purposes. . .Labor is regimented."

American big business plus the Wall Street bankers are now driving for this world domination. Their voice is the national Republican party. Before the nations and peoples of the world can be brought under Wall Street control, the American people will have to be crushed in this fascist grip. That means that all persons and groups who fight for the rights of the American people will have to be suppressed first. The immediate attack was on the American Communist Party. Then the spotlight was switched to the labor leaders and the unions. The Taft-Hartley bill is supposed to finish the free labor movement, and if it is not vetoed, it may achieve this aim.

Students of history who have studied fascist Germany should profit by the events of 1933. After the Communists and the labor movement were shackled, the people wer divided and conquered by playing the workers against each other. The myth and pack of lies dealing with Jewish domination of Germany and the world was used. When the German fascists had told the people the same thing over and over again, some of them finally believed this mental poison; then more of them believed it. When the fascists locked the final chains on the German working class, the people were ready to believe anything.

Do not think that this cannot happen in this country. If the labor unions are crushed and the Communist Party is driven underground, the bogey of Jewish control will spring into existence. The largest minority people in the United States are the Negro people, and they will be the first to suffer additional oppression from the fascist menace. We know that the fascists have a deadly hatred for the Negro and Jewish peoples, stemming from their deranged racist doctrines of white Aryan supremacy which are based on hatred and fear.

That is why the Southern Conference for Human Welfare is now being attacked. It stands in the way of the American imperialist drive for world control. Any smear tactic and pack

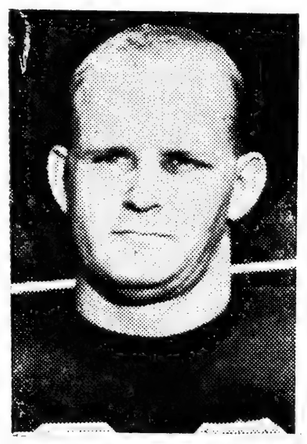
Come On Chris!

Thinly-Thatched Spurlin Standout Tar Heel Guard



By Leon Mitchell

A little boy of seven crawled out of the Kessing outdoor pool the other afternoon and walked up to one of the brawny lifeguards on duty.

"Mr. Spurlin," said the youngster, "are you on the football team?"

"No, son," replied the fuzzy-domed lad from the Land of the Sky, "I'm just one of the squad."

And that remark to the question of a young admirer typifies the modest personality of one of Carolina's leading line prospects of the coming season.

MAX SPURLIN

Max Spurlin is a stocky-built, fast-moving, and hard-hitting guard, hailing from Asheville, home of Tar Heels Joe Swicegood, Charlie Justice, Bill Britt, and Joe Wright. Now married and living in Victory Village, Max first came to Carolina in 1942 when he was first string guard for an outstanding freshman team. Remember? It had a boy by the name of Doc Blanchard that year.

The following year found Max substituting at both guard positions of the 1943 football team. As were most of that squad shortly after that season, he could be found in the service of his country. Little did he realize that during his stay in service he was to play for the outstanding Great Lakes service team.

However, in 1944 his course of duty found him at the immense Naval Station and it was there he acquired a great deal of experience playing under the capable guidance of Coach Paul Brown, formerly of Ohio State. Great Lakes that year won 9, losing only to Ohio State and Notre Dame, and tying Purdue.

Although not a starter on last year's football team, he saw action in every game except the William and Mary encounter which found him sidelined with a knee injury.

Max is a steady and tireless worker. He has made rapid gains and it is anticipated that he will see more than his share of action come next football season. He is one of those who is alert and consistently aggressive. He is quick to detect an opponent's weakness and without hesitating to take advantage of it. He loves the challenge that football offers and gets a great thrill out of playing the game.

He claims that Charlie Justice's 73-yard run against Tennessee last season was the greatest play of college football he has witnessed.

Max's hobby is fishing. Although new to the game he has rapidly acquired all of the paraphernalia needed to be a successful fisherman. So far he claims, Coach Rabb and Jim Hamilton have been doing all the "catchin" and he has been doing all the "wishin."

Max can easily be spotted on the campus as at his side you can always find the campus's favorite cocker spaniel, "Chris." Everyone may not know Max, but they all seem to know his dog. "Chris" is taking psychology this summer session so naturally Max has to tag along.

"Chris" is house broken.

Spurlin has two years of eligibility remaining and he anticipates using both as he intends remaining here to receive his masters in Physical Health and Education.

Tennis Star Seeded Sixth

Links Team Crown Determined Today

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Carolina's golf team, winner of the Southern conference championship, and Vic Seixas, the Tar Heel tennis ace, continued competition in their respective National collegiate tournaments yesterday, but as the Daily Tar Heel went to press, only early results of the day's activity were available.

In the links playoffs, being held at Ann Arbor, Mich., Harvey Ward, who was just one stroke behind the leaders Monday, posted an 81 for a 36-hole aggregate of 154. Other scores reported were Mike Nolan's 82 and Ed Ashby's 86. Their scores for Monday were not filed from Ann Arbor.

The Tar Heel linksmen will continue in the qualifying rounds of the NCAA contest today, and the school with the lowest four-man aggregate will be awarded the team championship. Beginning Thursday, the top 64 qualifyers out of the 300-odd entries will play for the individual title. Carolina's Ward, Dick Doeschler, Ray Taylor and Junie Bailey are all four possible contenders for those honors.

In the tennis picture, Seixas, from Philadelphia, was given the sixth seeded position for the beginning of the mammoth net affair which is being played on the UCLA courts in Los Angeles, Calif.

Seixas disposed of Dave Brown of Illinois in his second round match Monday with comparative ease, but his match for yesterday was unreported at press time last night. The only report from the National net affair was that George Druliner, of the College of The Pacific, upset Jack Tuero, of Tulane, who was the No. 1 seeded man in the tournament. Tuero was the only man last spring to defeat Gardner Larned, of William and Mary, who is No. 2 seeded and defeated Seixas for the Southern conference singles championship.

Intramural Sports Draw Large Fields

Competition Continues In Three Sports As Interest Mounts; No Games Friday

The summer mural program got off to a rousing start Monday with a record number of contestants participating, and play will continue in tennis, softball, and horseshoes today and tomorrow as mural activity goes into high gear.

The mural tennis singles tourneys, both open and novice, move into the third round tomorrow afternoon with doubles play in both classes beginning this afternoon.

Softball play will also be in the limelight with 32 encounters on tap for the two-day period, each diamond entry seeing action for the second time this week.

Horseshoe competition will also continue. There will be no mural activity Friday.

Coach School To Be Revived

First Session Since 1941 Set For August

The University of North Carolina's 21st annual coaching school, to be conducted at Chapel Hill August 11-16, will mark the rebirth of an established institution that was suspended after 1941 because of the war.

Primarily designed for high school coaches, this year's session will welcome college coaches as well, it was announced from Woollen gymnasiufm.

Classes will be conducted by members of the University coaching staff with emphasis being placed on football and basketball. However, classes will also be available in baseball, track, swimming, wrestling and boxing, with special instruction being offered on athletic injuries. Jake Wade will conduct a class on sports publicity.

Rounding out a full week's schedule, the school will open with football and a barbecue dinner on Monday and end with an open forum discussion on Saturday. Classes will be held from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., with evenings being devoted to athletic movies in Woollen gymnasium.

There will be no tuition fee, but a charge of six dollars per person, which covers lodging for the week, the Monday night barbecue, the Friday night dinner, and laundry for athletic equipment.

Simmons, Miller Run In NCAA Track Meet

Chunk Simmons and Jimmy Miller, two outstanding members o the 1947 Southern conference champion Tar Heel track squad, competed in the National Collegiate track meet at Salt Lake City, Utah, last Friday and Saturday, but Simmons failed to place in the star-studded event and Miller is unreported.

Simmons, who was one of the top three high hurdlers in the East last spring, failed to qualify in either the high or the low hurdles.

Monogrammers Meet

The Carolina Monogram club will hold an important meeting in the clubhouse tonight at 8:30 o'clock, at which time final plans will be made for the picnic scheduled for Saturday will be made.

John West Is Runnerup In National Contest

John Foster West, who received his A.B. degree in journalism from the University on June 9, was runner-up in a novel writing contest sponsored by the Dodd-Mead Company. The contest was a national one in which undergraduate students submitted portions of novels they had written.

The title of the novel is "Unto the Hills," and is the story of life in the footbills of western North Carolina. West, who wrote the novel in Professor Phillips Russell's novel writing class, is doing special work in the English department this summer.

ZIONIST MEETING

There will be a meeting of the University chapter of the Intercollegiate Zionist Federation of America on Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the Hillel office in the Y.

It is important that all members attend as the fall program will be discussed and the program for the speaker to be present presented in July will be formulated. Students interested in joining the organization are invited to attend.

No Damage Is Caused By Victory Village Fire

A small fire in Victory Village, started by children playing with matches, was quickly extinguished by the Chapel Hill fire department at 10:30 yesterday morning. No damage was caused.

The blaze occurred in a stack of insulation boards beneath an apartment barracks at 186 Jackson circle, and was discovered by Mrs. Tom McDade. Though this was the third fire call to Victory Village in as many months, no damage has been sustained at any of these times due to quick work by residents and the fire department, an observer pointed out.

of lies will be used to remove this obstacle. The Southern Conference has consistently fought for a higher standard of living for all the people in the South, both Negro and white. It has championed every progressive piece of domestic legislation since it was founded in 1938. It recently sponsored Henry Wallace in North Carolina and Washington, because Henry Wallace has fought against the present drive for world imperialism.

Many Applicants File For Kyser Scholarships

Many applications are being received at the University for the Kay Kyser scholarships in dramatic art and music which are to be awarded in July, according to an announcement by Edwin S. Lanier, director of student aid.

Each scholarship is a cash award, amounting to $800 for in-state students and $850 for out-of-state students, providing for tuition, fees, books, room and board for one college year at Chapel Hill.

Any boy or girl who is eligible to matriculate at the University may apply for the scholarships. The awards are made on a basis of talent, achievement and promise of future distinction in the fields of music or dramatic art.

Established here in 1941 by Kay Kyser, 1927 graduate of the University, the scholarships have been awarded to 12 students. Present holders are Peter Bucknell, of London, England, in dramatics, and William Waters, Roanoke Rapids, in music.

The courses in music which the winner will take are designed to give the student a thorough training in the practical, theoretical and historical aspects of the subject.

In dramatic art the courses are designed to give the student "a good background in the literature of the drama and theatre and an active part in all phases of theatre work, from the writing of the play to the finished production."

Applications are being received at the Kay Kyser Foundation, Box 778, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Spanish Instructor Given Fellowship

Don Walther, instructor in Spanish and Portuguese and a candidate for the Ph.D. degree at the University, has been awarded a Rockefeller foundation fellowship covering subsistence, tuition, and travel to other institutions for research. The fellowship will become effective September 1 for one year.

Announcement of the prized award was made here today by Dr. Sturgis E. Leavitt, head of the Spanish division of the Department of Romance Languages.

A native of Ohio, Mr. Walther received his A.B. degree at Miami university, Ohio, in 1938, and his M.A. here in 1940. He attended the 1938 summer session at the University of Mexico, and in 1941 was an exchange scholar on a State department fellowship to Costa Rica.

He began teaching here in 1939, and in 1942 went into war work for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, serving until January, 1946, when he returned to Chapel Hill.

The fellowship was granted for his study of "Brazilian Prose Fiction of the Amazon Region" which is the title of his doctor's thesis. He will devoted full time to this work during the coming year. Although Chapel Hill will be his headquarters, he may do some research in the Library of Congress, at Harvard and at the University of Pennsylvania.

Chamber of Commerce Institute Under Way

Following early sessions at which some 300 Chamber of Commerce secretaries convening here this week heard among others, Dean Paul Chapman, of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, daily classes for the secretaries were continuing into the latter part of the week.

High spot in early week activities for the delegates was Dean Chapman's address Monday outlining the approaching mechanization of all farming.

Dean Chapman said the one-horse farm was on its way out, turning more and more farm folk to the small towns and cities where employment for them must be provided. To achieve this, Dean Chapman suggested greater interest in agricultural industries that would work with farm products.

The delegates are assembled for the fourth annual Southeastern Institute for Commercial Organization Executives which continues through Friday.

Student Legislature Hears Recreation Shack Proposal

NSO Appropriations Bill in Committee; Ernest House on Graham Memorial Board

Considerable talk begun in party platforms last spring concerning the conversion of the unused Navy wrestling pavilion near Emerson field house into an interdormitory recreation house paid off Thursday night as Charlie Long, speaker pro-tem, put before the Student Legislature a bill calling for investigation of the possibility of converting the pavilion for that purpose.

The bill called for the naming of a three-man committee to investigate the situation, for legislative consideration of the committee's report, and for co-operation with the administration toward conversion of the pavilion.

Another bill, calling for the appropriation of $600 to cover expenses for three delegates to the National Service Organization constitutional convention in Madison, Wis., in September, was sent to a committee and will be reported out next week.

In other action, the legislature named Ernest House as temporary (summer) representative from that body to the Board of Directors of Graham Memorial. He replaces Tag Montague, not present this summer.

The interdormitory recreation shack bill, which probably topped the night's business, has since spring been the talking point of political parties as well as of the Men's Interdormitory council.

The council at its meeting Monday night discussed plans for the shack at length and will go further into the question next Monday night at a joint meeting of the Men's council with the Women's Interdormitory council.

The legislature will meet again next Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Knight Foresees Bright Future for South's Education

Dr. Edgar W. Knight of the University education department told a large gathering of Virginia educators at Harrisonburg, Va., Friday night that "the South is potentially the public educational hope of this country."

He called upon the colleges and universities and state departments of education "to join hands in advancing in this region an educational and cultural awakening such as no section of this country has ever seen, by being courageous enough to plan more intelligently the proper education and certification of the teachers and managers if our public schools, and by helping to stop dead in its tracks the present menacing tendency to mechanize and to establish a sort of politico-pedagogical priestcraft in our public educational work."

Speaking at the fourth annual institute of education at Madison college, Dr. Knight said that the most serious need in public education today is for "teachers and superintendents and principals of schools who are men and women of broad and generous education rather than of narrow technical pedagogical training, men and women who can hold their own with the best educated people in the communities in whose schools they work."

Other speakers at the institute included Prof. George Counts, of Columbia university; Dr. Benjamin Fine, education editor of the New York Times, and Prof. W. R. Smithey of the University of Virginia, who presided over the conference.

AVC Hears Report On National Meet

Members of the American Veterans committee heard a report Tuesday evening on the AVC national convention in Milwaukee from chapter delegates Winston Broadfoot and Roland Giduz, who returned to Chapel Hill on Monday evening.

According to Broadfoot, communist and extreme left-wing elements which for some time have been seeking to dominate the organization received a decisive defeat at Milwaukee. Chet Patterson, a conservative sponsored by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., won a convincing victory over the left-wing candidate to succeed Charles Bolte as national commander. Les Purcell of Atlanta, Ga., was selected to succeed Chapel Hill's Walter Spearman as southern regional director.

Discuss Congressional Action

Recent congressional action to deny the benefits of the GI bill to those veterans deemed "disloyal" by the veterans administration was strongly denounced by the majority of the chapter members. Concensus was that inasmuch as "a man's political beliefs were not questioned at the time of induction it is patently unfair to question them when veteran's benefits are being awarded."

In line with this the chapter voted to register its disapproval with the House veterans affairs committee.

SCHW to Meet Tuesday

The local chapter of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare will meet next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Graham Memorial.

Included on the agenda will be an analysis of the Un-American Activities committee charges against the Southern Conference, and a report on the community center.

All members are urged to attend because an election of summer officers is scheduled. All visitors will be welcomed.

UNC Faculty Member On European Mission

Paul E. Shearin, head of the physics department in the University, will represent the University and the U. S. navy at an international conference at the University of Bristol in England next month.

The conference will be devoted to research reports on the physical property of metals. Research specialists from England, France, Holland and the United States will participate in the sessions. The representatives from this country, besides Mr. Shearin, will be Dr. Paul Symonds of the navy research laboratory and Ira Kramer, of the U. S. Office of Navy Research.

Mr. Shearin is being sent to the conference by the Navy department in recognition of the work he has done for the navy during the last five years. He will fly to Europe on an army plane and will report to the American embassy in London before going to the conference.

Before returning home he will visit several European universities.

KENNETH ROYALL

Royall to Speak Here at Meet Of Bank Group

Conference Is Slated To Begin Next Week

Brigadier General Kenneth C. Royall, Undersecretary of War, will be among the featured speakers on the program of the 11th Carolinas Bankers conference to be held at the University which opens here Sunday, July 6, and continues through the following Friday, July 11, according to L. D. Brooks, Charlotte, conference chairman.

Bankers from all sections of North and South Carolina will attend the six-day conference which is sponsored by the Bankers Association of the two states, the North and South Carolina State Banking Departments, and the University.

Various phases of banking will be discussed by leaders in the field, a number of them from New York and other distant points.

Among them are Daniel W. Bell, president of the American Security and Trust company, Washington, D. C.; Dr. W. A. Irwin, New York, economist for the American Bankers association and educational director of the American Institute of Banking; Leroy Lewis, New York, associate educational director of the American Institute of Banking; and Preston E. Reed, Dean of Central College of Commerce, Chicago.

In addition to Chairman Brooks, the conference committee is composed of William H. Neal, Winston-Salem; Gordon Hunter, Roxboro; C. A. Spivey, Conway, S. C.; Warren S. Johnson, Wilmington; W. R. Watkins, Columbia, S. C.; Millard F. Jones, Rocky Mount; Philip Woollcott, Asheville; Ben R. Roberts, Durham; Gurney P. Hood, Raleigh; E. R. Alexander, Columbia, S. C.; John B. Woolsey, Chapel Hill; Donald E. Brown; Anderson, S. C.; and Fred W. Greene, Raleigh.

Figures Show Total of 4,445 Students Enrolled in First Summer School Term

Educators, Clergy Attend Human Relations Workshop

By Raney Stanford

The first workshop in human resources and intercultural education in the region of the south is now being conducted in the Alumni building. The workshop, under the joint sponsorship of the National Conference of Christians and Jews and the University, has attracted around 40 educators and religious leaders from six southern states for the six weeks work in human relations.

W. Carson Ryan, head of the department of education here, is serving as director, with John E. Ivey, Jr., as associate director and special consultant on resource-use education. Lester Dix, of the Bureau of Intercultural Education of New York City, is the full-time consultant for the six-weeks period.

This program, as Dix points out, is helping those participating in developing good educational processes, in improving living conditions, and guiding groups in the paths of tolerance.

"We are working with members of various regional minority groups as consultants, to find the best ways to combat intolerance and prejudices," Dix said. "Also among our consultants for this current program are religious leaders, psychiatrists, sociologists, labor and industrial leaders, and artists."

That the interest in the work being done here is greater than regional is shown by the presence of a Peruvian university professor and a Chinese school principal on the rolls of the workshop.

Committee Will Study Constitution Changes

Tom Eller, student body president, has named a five-man constitution committee to investigate difficulties arising from the unorthodox manner in which the constitution was amended in spring elections.

Chairmaned by Jim Vogler, the committee will consider whether current amendments, offered in substitution form rather than by customary addition, should be retained or reworded to comply with the proper addition procedure. The Student council will be asked to adjudicate the document before provision is made for the printing of official amended copies of the constitution.

The new committee, made up of Vogler, Bill Mackie, Dewey Dorsett, Annie Ben Beal, and Jimmy Wallace, will hold its initial meeting at o'clock Tuesday in the Grail Room at Graham Memorial.

GRADES STILL AVAILABLE

All students who have not picked up their grades for the spring quarter and desire to do so, are informed that the marks are now obtainable at the Information desk on the first floor of South building.

Interdorm Groups Will Meet Monday For Joint Session

The Men's and Women's Interdormitory councils will hold a joint meeting Monday evening at 7 o'clock in the Roland Parker Lounge No. 2, Graham Memorial to start immediate action on the procurement or erection of an interdormitory recreation shack.

At the meeting of the men's group held last Monday evening, it was decided that funds for the building be raised by sponsoring dances, but a resolution was also carried to the effect that each council member should contact other dormitory men before the next meeting for suggestions on other ways of raising money.

A resolution was approved setting up a committee of three, appointed by the chair, to investigate the feasibility of holding a dance in the immediate future, to determine what orchestra will be available and to report on these items at the meeting Monday evening.

Frank Hassell is president of the men's council, and Miriam Evans is president of the women's group.

Last Yack Distribution Set for Next Thursday

This year's Yacks will be distributed for the last time this term next Thursday from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial.

A limited number of 1945 and 1946 Yacks will be on sale at this time for $1.50. It is necessary to sell these books at this price since there is no place in which to store them, it was explained.

It is still possible to get a friend's Yack with his ID card.

Carolina Political Union To Discuss Labor Bill

Sunday evening at 8 o'clock the Carolina Political union will hold its first meeting of the summer in the Grail room on the second floor of Graham Memorial. The topic under discussion will be the Taft- Hartley labor bill, which has been passed by both houses of Congress to over-ride President Truman's veto and become al aw.

Warren Wicker, vice chairman of the CPU, invites all wh oare interested to attend and participate in the discussion, and requests all members to be present for a short and important business meeting.

Baptist Group to Meet

The Baptist Student Union will serve coffee and doughnuts at 9:15 tomorrow morning in the basement of the Baptist church. Church school classes, taught by Dr. P. H. Epps and George Neal, will begin immediately afterward at 9:45.

Tomorrow evening at 6:15, there will be a buffet supper followed by a song service and a forum discussion.

All students are invited to attend.

UNIVERSITY PARTY MEETING

The steering committee of the University party will hold an important meeting Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Horace Williams lounge in Graham Memorial.

All members of the committee who are unable to attend are requested to send a proxy.

Coeds Outnumber Men Four to One

Complete enrollment figures for the first session of summer school released yesterday set the final total at 4,445. This was the figure reached by the Central Records office after subtracting cancellations and other deductions.

Enrollment breakdowns made on the basis of a 4,706 total, before deductions had been made, showed 3,775 of the students are men and 931 women. By classes there were 333 freshmen, 852 sophomores, 1,191 juniors, 724 seniors, and 908 graduate students.

Professional School Totals

Professional school rolls show that 146 students registered for the summer law school, 29 in the school of library science, 36 in the school of public health, and 13 in social welfare.

Figures for the special institutes and conferences during the first session reveal that 23 students signed up for the third annual French House, 31 are doing work in the care of crippled children, 133 are in the intercultural workshops, and 35 are attending the child health conference.

U.S.-Russian Split Is Subject for IRC Open Meeting Monday

Summer school students are invited to participate in the International Relations club's open forum Monday evening at 8 o'clock on the subject "What basic questions divide Russia and the United States?" The IRC will meet in the Graham Memorial Roland Parker lounge .

The informal discussion comes as a follow-up to last Wednesday's faculty forum, which attracted more than 300 students to Graham Memorial. At Monday's open meeting, IRC members and visitors will attempt to clarify some of the arguments introduced by the four faculty speakers, Professors Helmut Kuhn, Carl E. Shedd, W. Carson Ryan and M. S. Heath.

Students interested in joining the IRC may arrange for interviews with membership chairman Ken Cruse at Monday evening's meeting.

Jud Kinberg Selected For Magazine Council

Jud Kinberg, University junior from New York city, has been selected as one of 10 college students throughout the country to become one of Pic magazine's college council representatives.

During his senior year here, beginning in September, Kinberg, who is a former managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel, will write a monthly article for Pic on campus trends nad interests.

This week, he, along with the other college council representatives, is attending a national job conference being sponsored by Pic for the purpose of discussing with young writers "the gap between college and a job."

Kinberg, who was a student here early in the war, entered the army during his sophomore year and served overseas. He returned to the University last fall and was managing editor of the Carolina Magazine during the past year. He is a member of the Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity.

Tryouts Set Monday For New S&F Show

Sound and Fury, campus musical comedy organization, has announced that tryouts for skits, heelzapop'n gags, and specialties will be held on Monday afternoon from 2 until 5 o'clock at a meeting tentatively set for Memorial Hall Auditorium.

Following the afternoon session, a meeting at 7 o'clock Monday night is scheduled for all persons wishing to participate in a college show. Billy Carmichael, S&F president, has invited anyone in school to attend and sign-up for work in the organization.

Lost Colony Still Going Strong After 10 Years

By Hoke Norris

Manteo.—It isn't often that a play is still going strong years after it was still presented to the public. But North Carolina has one of its own which on July 4 will be 10 years old.

It is the Lost Colony, which next Tuesday (July 1) will begin a 49-performance season in the Waterside Theatre at Fort Raleigh, three miles north of here. This record is all the more remarkable for the fact that when Paul Green's symphonic drama opened on July 4, 1937, it was intended as a more or less local, one-season commemoration of the events which occurred at Fort Raleigh—the first British attempts to colonize the New World, and the birth of Virginia Dare, the first English child born in America.

Its revival each year through 1941—when the war interrupted its run—was made possible by the enthusiastic response the play received each time it was performed. It was revived last year and witnessed then by more than 52,000 persons, and more thousands will come this season—and in those which will follow—to see history recreated in the spoken word, in pantomine, the dance, and song.

Former Governor J. Melville Broughton, chairman of the Roanoke Island Historical Association, and former Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus will make short talks on opening night. On July 4—the tenth birthday of the play—Paul Green will speak briefly. Other special days include July 17, Negro Citizens' day; July 23, Anglo-American day; August 4, Coast Guard Day; August 15, Dare County veterans' homecoming, with an address by Representative Harold D. Cooley of the 4th North Carolina District; August 16, University of North Carolina Day; and August 18, Virginia Dare Day.

New Names

There will be some new names in the cast and staff this season. One of them is that of a new Eleanor Dare, the mother of Virginia. She is Julia Meade, a student in the Yale Drama Department and the daughter of Caroline Meade, for many years Walter Hampden's leading lady. She succeeds the veteran Katherine Cale. One new husband and wife team has been added—Meade Prince, as Ananias Dare, and Lillian Prince, as Queen Elizabeth. Mr. and Mrs. Prince are making their home in Chapel Hill, where he's continuing as an illustrator for the magazines. He's done most of the pictures for Roark Bradford's stories in Collier's.

Among others new to the cast are these members of the Carolina Playmakers at the University: Porter W. Van Zandt, Jr., as Father Martin; Gene A. McLain, as Simon Fernando; Marilyn Kraft, as Joyce Archard; and Irvine Noble Smith as Captain John White. Roger Meeking, of Manteo, will play the part of John Cage for the first time, and Mrs. Mayon Parker of Ahoskie will make her debut as Jane Jones.

Returning Stars

The audiences this summer will welcome Donald Somers back in the part of Old Tom, the philosophic fool, for his fifth season. During the winter, Somers toured with Maurice Evans in Hamlet. Among others returning are Roger Quinlan, as the Historian; Foster Fitz-Simons, as Uppowoc, the Indian medicine man, and also as assistant director and choreographer; Donald Mason as Wanchese, Robert Armstrong, as John Borden; James Geiger, as Wingina; Marion Fitz-Simons, as Dam Coleman; Allan Frank, as Sir Walter Raleigh, a role he played for two weeks last year after another actor left the cast; and

Proof Enough

The recent confab between a student delegation and Coach Bob Fetzer and Chuck Ericson of the Athletic association is proof enough what can be accomplished by the students sitting down and presenting their arguments and then reaching a compromise.

Last year students here along with Georgia Tech, Duke and others throughout the nation were rather peeved at the manner in which they were being shoved toward the goal line. Political parties on campus had included in their platforms the promise that they would strive for better seating arrangements for the coming season. However, when the seating was arranged for the '48 season much disappointment was observed when the students did not get any seats in the section that embraces the mid-stripe.

The Daily Tar Heel corroborated this disappointment with an article that drew much attention and ultimately led to the confab arranged by this publication and the Chairman of the Student Party.

The final outcome of the undertaking is nearly 800 seats closer to the 50-yard line and that is what interests football enthusiasts.

Job Well Done

The only woman director of Graham Memorial student union will complete her tenure of office Monday. Martha Rice, the earnest, capable, and hard-working monitor of the Union, will not be easily forgotten by the students who used the facilities of the Union or will it be simple to pass off her two years of achievements and success with a shrug of the shoulder.

Before she assumed the Director's duties it had been a man's job and during her tenure of office it was a man-size job, but she carried the burdens of responsibility well and built a smooth-running program of activities for the benefit of the campus.

Martha Rice will be long remembered for the many features she added to the Union for student enjoyment. She took the initiative to form a Graham Memorial orchestra that would be available for student dances, and her active part in sponsoring dances and shows will be remembered for years to come. She should be commended by the student body for a job well done.

Great Reward

Last week representatives from colleges throughout the country gathered together in New York for the second annual conference of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations. Still in the formative stage, this organization has as its sole objective the furtherance of the United Nations in every possible manner.

During a busy week of observing the U. N. at work and planning among themselves, these students completed a detailed and extensive plan of operations for the Council.

Committees of the Council are to be organized in practically every college and university under supervision of the various state headquarters. The North Carolina headquarters will be formed on this campus under the direction of Lincoln Shiao Hing Kan, Carolina delegate to the New York meeting. Details will be announced in the near future.

Willing, selfless workers are needed for the tasks that lie ahead of this group. The help of any student who realizes his or her personal responsibility in the United Nations cause will be welcomed. The tasks are many but the reward is permanent world peace.—B. A.

PHI ASSEMBLY DISCUSSES DISADVANTAGES OF UMSTEAD ACT: LOCAL 403 OF UPW CIRCULATES PETITION FOR STUDENTS' SIGNATURES FOR HIGHER PAY FOR LAUNDRY WORKERS.

Last Tuesday night the Assembly of the Philanthropic Literary Society again raised the issue of more University control over mercantile interests patronized primarily by students. The fact that the peculiar situation in Chapel Hill gives merchants here an unusual advantage without the corresponding initiative to produce better goods and services was again mentioned, and the conclusion reached by the Phi was the same conclusion which the organization reached when it discussed a similar issue last year—that the Umstead Act should be repealed for the best interests of the students.

To those not familiar with this act, it should be pointed out that it was passed several years ago by the General Assembly after it was introduced by John Umstead, a representative from Chapel Hill who had been too much influenced by the lobbying and pressure of the local merchants, acting individually and collectively in the form of their Merchants' association. The Umstead Act provides that agencies of the state shall not compete with private enterprise, but it astutely makes an exception to every agency of the state except the Consolidated University of North Carolina.

That students must have special protection from business opportunists in Chapel Hill is manifest, but this protection can not come in the repeal of the Umstead Act until the General Assembly reconvenes in 1949. Until the next legislature meets, the students can be protected from unfair mercantile practices and Chapel Hill merchant monopolies by black lists (officially administered by student government) and by information supplied during orientation and afterwards by student government.

All students realize that most of the merchants of Chapel Hill are sincere in their effort to conduct businesses not only legally honest, but fair and ethical in every way to serve the best interests of their student customers. It is only a minority which offers a dangerous threat to a sixty-five-dollar-a-month student body.

Local 403 of the United Public Workers, a CIO affiliate, has circulated a number of mimeographed appeals to University students urging that those students sign petitions to help secure "decent wages and working conditions" for some 127 workers (about 65% Negro) at the University Laundry.

The DTH, told by a laundry official that the UPW was not recognized or approved by the state, was unable to raise a representative of that union for labor's side of the story.

However, these points are made in the union's petition appeal:

1) University laundry workers now earn $21.34 each week.

2) Following a 20% raise granted by the state (effective July 1) workers will actually make less ($19.98 per week), since a previously granted bonus would be absorbed in the raise.

3) Current wages to laundry workers cannot keep pace with rising liivng costs.

and 4) The University is "giving increases with one hand and taking more back with the other."

No specific examples of bad working conditions were offered.

A laundry official refuted point 2 of the union's appeal. "Some workers," he said, "will actually make more when the raise goes into effect." He did not specify who "some workers" were.

The official added that the UPW had "been on the laundry's neck" with literature and that the laundry was simply not "concerned" with the current appeal.

The situation is, of course, one of interest to University students. But in this case they are, as is the DTH, in the middle ground between management and labor—not an unusual spot in this labor-conscious age.

Whether laundry workers are actually underpaid and are subjected to bad working conditions are questions that cannot be answered until the union puts its cards on the table and deals in facts and evidence instead of accusations and innuendoes.

'King Lear' Rules Board But He's Not A Dictator

By Robert Morrison

(Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of sketches about significant personalities at the University.)

Today's column must necessarily take the form of a public apology. It was over a year ago, when I was the editor of this newspaper, that I wrote an editorial about "King Lear" (more formally called Prof. Joseph Merritt Lear, M.A.) in which he was blamed for the poor circulation of the DTH and the inability of the Publications Union board to solve the pressing problems of student publications.

Since writing that editorial, I have served as president of the Publications board, and today I testify that King Lear is the only wall between student publications and bankruptcy. He's indispensable to the Publications board, although he's far from the dictator who most students think he is.

Leads the Way

Many are the times that the Publications board has been in earnest session, locked away from everything in a little office on the fourth floor of New East or around the great table in the Grail room, and the "King" has straightened up in his seat, cleared his throat a little, smiled knowingly, and stated the problem so concisely and conclusively that every member felt a little ashamed that he himself had not thought of the same thing sooner.

Many members of the staffs of student publications hate the King bitterly, but I know of no reason for their hatred other than the fact that the King doesn't like to see student money flying around loose in the hands of every editor, managing editor, cub reporter, and office boy. This is a typical interview between a business manager and the King:

Typical Interview

B. M.: "Dr. Lear, I think that the salary of the business manager should be increased 10%."

King: "Yes, and on what grounds do you claim an increase?"

B. M.: "Well, it's a lot of hard work, and, ah, the price of living is up, and perhaps the paper may want to expand, and . . ."

King: "Is that why you have never collected for those ads you sold five months ago?"

B. M.: "Well, ah . . ."

King: "Or failed to turn some of your collections over to the auditor?"

B. M.: "Now . . . uh . . . ah . . . well . . ."

King: "Or failed several times to make your deadline at the print-shop?"

B. M.: "It just happened to happen, that's all."

King: "Why has advertising decreased so much since you became business manager?"

B. M.: "The guy last year was lucky, that's all."

King: "And most of the guys before him must have been pretty lucky, too, for they all sold more ads than you are selling."

B. M.: (Mumbling to himself as he leaves the office.) "That blank blank Lear, he's trying to throttle student initiative, that's what! Blankety blank!"

Due to the limitation of space all letters from the reader must be less than 250 words in length and typed double space whenever possible. Letters must be signed by the writer with address and phone number, however, their name will be withheld upon request. The editor reserves the right to delete any obscene or libelous matter.

"Smell Is Fidel"

Teachers, generaliy, stand for freedom of expression. They may not be very adept at the use of the typewriter in expressing themselves, but they use it any way.

One teacher, of the many here on the campus who have expressed themselves about your article by Fidel, is interested in having his say about the matter. The say is given herewith:

TO FIDEL
(With apologie sto no one)
They say there are places
Where the presence of faces
Of teachers makes the place smell.
It now transpires
That the muse who fires
The mind to write poetry well
In me is fired and has inspired
To write that smell is Fidel.

If she'll blow the foam off
Of all of that cheap scoff
That makes use of such words as "hell,"
She'll find that her troubles
Blown off like those bubbles
Reveal that that smell IS Fidel.

A SCHOOL TEACHER

'Kiss of Death'

If the kind of thinking embodied in Wednesday's WRITE AWAY letter by Jerry Pearson does not fairly represent the views of the average member of the Southern Conference of Human Welfare, the organization should, in self-defense, publicly repudiate his support. If Pearson's letter does exemplify SCHW thinking, then the Committee on un-American Activities was SO RIGHT!

Right or wrong, the characterization of the SCHW made by the Committee will probably stick in the mind of the average citizen until such time as the SCHW awakens to a realization of the fact that support from Communists is the kiss of death to any genuine liberal organization.

Beer Is Sad, Says Poet, But Order Me One Anyway

By Bob Sain

Hermione, the anarchist hashslinger, spoke confidentially into my ear. "Your friend the poet, Athelstan Boniface, has been sitting in that booth back there for three hours and twenty minutes trying to roll 13 on that set of crooked dice. He can't do it."

Apropos of nothing I said, "Hermione, my proletariat passion flower, tell me. Why is it that the word 'beer' is so ripsnorting funny? Why does the mere mention of 'Schlitz' or 'Bud' in a bunch of newsprint entitle the writer to the mantle of Marquis of Thurber? Why is it that humor columnists have to say, 'We were drinking beer at Harry's . . .,' to start off something funny? I can't see it," I said and, leaving Hermione nervously fingering her little check book, went back to join my friend the poet, Athelstan Boniface.

A die caromed off a salt cellar and spun to a stop with a deuce showing. The other had one little black spot on it.

"God's Wounds!" shrieked Ath, and sighed a more placid, "oh fudge." He scooped up the dice and flung them again. He noticed me, and looked up. "You may be seated," he said. I sat.

"Look here, Ath. I got a problem. What's funny about this word: 'beer'?"

It must not have been very funny to Ath because he didn't laugh or even smile. With a penknife he solemnly quartered a benzedrine tablet and offered me part. I thanked him and waited for his word.

He ran long, brown fingers through his lank, black hair and thought.

"Nothing," he finally said.

His big black eyes narrowed and his nostrils seemed to flare. I could tell he was going to have another fling with the muse. The light in the place seemed to grow dim. Ath rubbed a finger against his nose.

"Beer," he said, "isn't funny. Let me recite a parable." His voice was a tense, melancholy whisper. I let him.

"It was a beer joint on Franklin. Smoke—brown, blue, blown-out gray—curled and rose, crowding to cloud the low ceiling. A girl, bloated, beery, slipped a soft white finger through the long hair on a young man's neck. Laughter—loud, light, simpering—rattled against the walls and grew tired and anguished. A waitress, sweating, warm, slapped a sopping bar-rag on an empty table, sloshing beer to the floor. And through the night, the summer night, the drinkers sang and shouted and whispered and teased their girls. Outside the plate-glass window the insects came and circled and buzzed against the neon and slapped with fragile wings at a yellow, tear-drop streetlamp.

"And through the night, the summer night, the drinkers teased their girls and talked in low voices and the girls put strands of hair in their mouth-corners and toyed coyly, as outside the insects, lured by light, flung themselves against the yellow, teardrop streetlamp.

Comes the Dawn

"And later the dawn, coming gray and damp up the empty street, found the beer joint empty and outside the sidewalk strewn with broken insects."

After a moment's silence Ath rubbed his wide, sad-lipped mouth. "There's nothing funny about beer," he said, "order us a couple," and he let the dice fly against the wall.

This time they came up 13.

Seixas, Ward Remain Local Hopes To Capture NCAA Crowns

In High Gear!!!

Mural Summer Program Completes First Week

At the end of the first week of intramural play, 33 football teams have seen action and the tennis and horseshoe tournaments are well underway. Undefeated teams in the three softball leagues are Grads No. 1, Phi Gams, Chi Phi, Kappa Sig, Pi Lamb, Pi Kappa Alpha, Staycock, Men of Mullis, and Sigma Nu.

Play in all three sports will continue Monday, and schedules are listed below. The schedule for games on Wednesday and Thursday of next week will appear in Wednesday's Tar Heel.

Intramural officials announced plans yesterday for a swimming meet and carnival to be held at 7:30, Friday, July 18. All students, with the exception of varsity lettermen in swimming, are invited to enter the carnival.

Netman May Reach Finals

Local Lad Favored To Down Kovaleski

BULLETIN

Los Angeles, Cal., June 27—Vic Seixas advanced to the finals of the NCAA tennis tourney today by virtue of a stirring 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4 victory over Fred Kovaleski of William and Mary.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 27—The single entry from the land of Tar Heelia—North Carolina's Vic Seixas—continues to swarm his way through all competition in his advance towards the finals of the National Intercollegiate tennis tourney being played here on the UCLA courts.

The tall bronze lad from Philadelphia won his fourth straight match yesterday when he disposed of a fellow southerner, Bernard Bartzen of William and Mary, in two sets of 9-7, 6-4. The Carolina netter was forced to the extent of his game in the opening set as the Indian southpaw turned in a fine display of tennis, but Seixas' blistering service and outstanding volleying finally proved the difference and the rest of the match was run out in short order.

Seixas' win placed him in today's semi-final bracket with towering Fred Kovaleski, also of William and Mary whom Seixas has met before in the semi-finals of the Southern Conference event played at Chapel Hill last month. Seixas won that encounter 6-3, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

On the basis of this, vaunted Vic is favored to down the hard-hitting Virginian and advance to the finals scheduled for tomorrow.

If Seixas reaches the championship round, he will probably be confronted with a familiar face in the person of Gardner Larned, kingpin of the William and Mary entry. Larned should dispose of Jack Clark of Southern Cal., the unseeded tourney dark horse in the day's other semi-final encounter, thus setting the stage for the third meeting of the season between the two lads.

Larned captured the first two engagements, dropping Seixas in straight sets in dual competition, and then defeating the Tar Heel in a blazing four set match for the Southern Conference singles crown. The third meeting should be the true test, though, for Seixas, for the first time since leaving the Army, is at the height of his game.

Snake Killer!!!

Grid Star Roberts Also Parent, Tomato Raiser

By Leon Mitchell

Come fall the main topic of every football conversation will probably center about the talents of Justice, Pupa, Camp, Rogers, Fitch and others, but when we speak of great teams and great backs, we must also think of the men that contribute to their greatness—unheralded, yet great linemen.

Such a lineman is George R. Roberts, who came to Carolina from 'Ole Miss' where he played first string freshman football in 1941 and earned his varsity letter in 1942. A Marine transfer he made his first appearance at Carolina in 1943 whereupon he saw service as a varsity guard.

Since then he has served as second lieutenant in the Marine Military Police Corps seeing duty on Guam, in Tientsin, China and on other smaller islands. In China when time permitted he and his buddies with their high-powered motorcycles would race around the old Tientsin race track.

Return to Carolina

Returning to Carolina and its gridiron in 1946 he demonstrated outstanding ability and it was then that he was quickly prepared and molded into an outstanding guard. He started the first six games of last year's football season and in the sixth game, the Navy encounter, he displayed uncanny ability to anchor the Middies' best ball carriers.

George gets a great kick out of playing golf and it is his favorite off-season sport. It is reliably reported that George has found himself in the rough so often killing snakes that he hasn't left any for All-American John Dillon, who also happens to have the knack in reptile eradicating himself.

Barred from looking for lost golf balls on local golf course, Dillon and pal, Hardy Henry, feeling sympathetic, have furnished him with a new golf ball for every snake he has killed. The trouble now is that he has so many that he doesn't know what to do with them.

(Who is that fellow down the road who has recently set up a stand selling golf balls at a reduced price?)

GEORGE ROBERTS

Roberts married "Kirk" Armbruster, former Carolina cheerleader. His "Pride and Joy" is little Judith Ann, his five-week-old baby daughter. All the time he does not devote to his daughter he spends in his recently planted vegetable garden.

He talks with much delight of the fact that he has tomato plants at least three feet high and the tomatoes are due to ripen any day now. If you don't believe us drop out to Victory Village sometime and meet this gentleman of the Carolina gridiron.

Golfer Wins First Match

Tarboro Lad Only Tar Heel Survivor

BULLETIN

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 27—North Carolina's Harvey Ward moved into the quarter-final round of the NCAA links tournament here today winning both his morning and afternoon matches.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 27—Carolina's chances of winning national golf honors have fallen squarely on the sturdy shoulders of Tarboro's Harvey Ward, for the fair-haired lad of the fairways remains as the Tar Heels last remaining survivor in the National intercollegiate links tourney being played here this week.

Always a great match player, the Tarboro Terror presents a game easily adoptable to the lengthy fairways of the University of Michigan course. Fast becoming a favorite with the galleries Ward can be counted to give someone a lot of trouble with woods or irons.

Ward, who qualified with a 154 total for 36 holes, won his first round match yesterday when he defeated Gerald Joyce of Southern Methodist 1-up. Meanwhile the only other Tar Heel qualifier, Junie Bailey, fell by the wayside when he dropped a 2 and 1 decision to Tom Lambie of Stanford.

Ward is considered one of the dark horses in the tournament and if the former Carolina's junior champion can get by today's matches, he may become a threat to take the title.

French House Schedule Set

Talks and Old Play Planned for Week

Two talks by members of the French department and the presentation of an old French farce highlight next week's program of the French House on campus, according to the schedule of events released yesterday by Dr. Hugo Giduz, director of the French House.

Film slides of French provinces and a program of French songs will be presented Monday night at the French House, located in the ADPi sorority house on Rosemary street.

Tuesday night, Professor W. M. Dey of the Romance Languages department will speak on "The Parnassians and Symbolists" at 7 o'clock. All French-speaking visitors are welcome to attend.

Professor Alfred Engstrom will speak to the French House Thursday night at 7 on "Verlaine and His Poetry."

French Farce

An old French farce, "Le Banquier et le Savetier," will be produced Friday night at the French House by students in the house at 7 o'clock. It will be the second of a series of short plays presented by the French House during the six-weeks session.

Last night, students of the house gave a vocal and instrumental concert including piano and violin solos by Ben Shue, pianist, Nancy Derminer, violinist, Helen McCann, soprano, Curtis Butler, pianist, Mrs. Kate Dobbs, soprano, and Cornelia Keuzenkamp, pianist. A vocal duet was given by Miss McCann and Ruth Creager.

FACULTY MEN'S CLUB

Prof. Oscar J. Coffin, head of the University journalism department, will address the Men's Faculty club Tuesday at 1 p.m. in the Carolina Inn.

Coffin's topic will be "Some Peculiarities in North Carolina Politics."

Union to Show Movies Of Campus Tomorrow

Two motion pictures produced and filmed on the University campus will be shown in the main lounge of Graham Memorial tomorrow night at 8:30. The films, "Carolina in Color" and 'Memoirs of a Graham Memorial Assistant," were produced last year by the Empire Picture company, a student-owned-and-operated organization.

The first-named film features scenes shot at last fall's Sadie Hawkins Day. Baxter Coleman and Martha Rice, the director of the student union, are the featured players in this production.

"Memoirs of Graham Memorial Assistant" stars Dave Owens, and shows the trials and tribulations of student union staff worker in bringing entertainment to the student body. All the organizations that work in the building; the Grail, the CPU, the IRC, the Tar Heel, the Yackety-Yack, and various student government bodies are also depicted.

LOST COLONY

Helen Dortch Harrison, as Agona. John A. Walker, former lighting director, is general manager for his second season.

New members of the staff include the stage manager, Clifton Britton, head of the drama department of the Goldsboro High school, the technical director, Lynn Gault of the Carolina Playmakers; and the director of lighting, Wayne Bowman, also of the Carolina Playmakers. Those returning include the music director, Theos Cronk; the organist, James Malcolm Hart; the costumer, Irene Smart; and the master of properties, William Long. The technical staff has been on the job here since June 1, nad the cast begin rehearsals on June 12 under Samuel Selden, head of the Carolina Playmakrs, who has directed the Lost Colony through its six previous seasons. He has held two meetings with Dare County people to cast the more than 100 parts they play.

The Lost Colony season ends September 1 (Labor Day). Performances are scheduled five or six nights weekly, at 8:15 E.S.T.

Methodist Group Announces Plans

The Wesley foundation's summer program will get under way Sunday evening at 5 o'clock when Prof. H. D. Wolf of the economics department will speak on labor-management crisis, it was announced yesterday by Director Bob Nelson.

This is the first in a series of talks on Christianity and world community topics, which will be held in the East Parlor of the Methodist church.

On July 6, Rev. W. H. Poteat, Y M C A secretary, will address the members of the Foundation on Proto-Fascism and Civil Liberties in America. Dean Fred Weaver will speak on the 13th on the subject of A Sane Attitude Towards Drinking.

Programs to come on other social issues will feature discussions and talks by Mr. Claude Shotts, YMCA secretary-elect, panel discussions, debates, and dramatic activity by the Wesley Players. All students and faculty members are invited to attend the regular Sunday night suppers at 6 p.m., and to stay for the program afterwards.

Marty Pearsall announced plans for the formation of a speech choir, a choral speaking group open to anynoe on the campus. As a project of the Wesley Players, the choir will participate in worship programs and other activities. Having fun with the voice is the major object. Singing and acting ability is not a requirement.

First of its kind at the University, the group will be organized under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Welch. Miss Welch, director of the Beaux and Belles of Asheville, is now in Chapel Hill preparing for her dictor's degree. An authority on speech and drama, she has written a thesis on the techniques of choral speaking. She expects to remain in Chapel Hill long enough to help the students get the project underway.

STUDENT PARTY

At the Wednesday night meeting of the Student Party, Charles Lambeth and Charles Howe were elected to temporary positions on the steering committee, Chairman Charlie Long announced yesterday. Several matters of policy were also taken up and considered at the meeting.

The next meeting of the Student Party is scheduled for Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Roland Parker Lounge No. 3 of Graham Memorial.

Koch Memorial Grant Given Forest Theatre

A "Koch Forest Theatre," actually an improved version of the current Forest Theatre, is in the planning stage now with funds originally slated for the Koch Memorial theatre due to go to the development of the amphitheatre.

When the Rockefeller foundation withdrew its offer of $150,000 toward the Memorial Theatre, sponsors realized that any chance of building the theatre within the next ten years was slight and, with the consent of donors, will turn the $10,000 already in the Memorial fund toward improvement of the Forest Theatre.

Archibald Henderson, chairman of the fund committee, proposes to raise another $10,000 and apply the total toward an amphitheatre that would combine beauty and usefulness.

Proposed improvements of the Forest theatre: new approach and entrance, dressing rooms, a scene shop, rain shelters, landscaping, and other basic equipment.

BRIDGE TOURNAMENT

Bridge tournaments will be held in Graham Memorial each Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock, instead of 7:30 as was previously announced.

Jenkins to Continue Work Of Photographing Documents

William S. Jenkins, professor of political science in the University, has set out an another expedition to make microfilms of historical documents.

Jenkins, who is director of the microfilm project conducted jointly by the Library of Congress and the University, started on his filming trips in 1941. The work, interrupted in 1942, was resumed last year. The large collection of films already in the library here will be added to steadily.

With the collection is a "reading machine" by means of which the reproduction of a document is shown, greatly enlarged, on a 2-foot-square glass plate with a light behind it.

The current issue of the Quarterly Journal of the Library of Congress contains an article by Mr. Jenkins in which he describes the microfilm project.

"It's purpose," he writes, "is to compile a comprehensive documents source book to which students may have ready access and from which they may draw their raw materials as they investigate the manifold subjects relating to the origin and development of American government institutions."

Mr. Jenkins will be in New England for two or three months stay and will then go to the Southwest, having arranged his schedule so as to have good weather in each region. He and his photographer assistant will set out in their car from Massachusetts.

Dean of Library School Will Attend Conference

Dr. Susan Grey Akers, Dean of the University School of Library Science, will attend the 66th annual conference of the American Library association to be held in San Francisco June 29 to July 5.

In the absence of the chairman of the committee on the constitution and my-laws of the association, Dr. Akers has been asked to make the committee's report to the council of the association. She will also serve as consultant on one of the more important committees on library problems.

In addition Dr. Akers will attend several meetings of the Association of American Library Schools and the American Library Association Board on Personnel Administration, the latter having a personnel institute and clinic scheduled from June 28 to July 4.

New Labor Act Will Be Aired By Di Senate

President Maurice Braswell announced that the Dialectic senate will meet tonight at 9 o'clock on the third floor of New West building with the Taft-Hartley labor act heading the agenda for discussion.

Discussion will center on whether the senate approves in general the principles and aims of the Taft-Hartley act, the principle that it is within the jurisdiction of the federal courts to issue injunctions, hear evidence, and render decisions in controversies between unions and employees which endanger or damage the public interest.

The third section of the bill states that the principle of the paramount interest of the general public should be extended to allow the Attorney-General to obtain injunctions and prosecute cases in the public interests where either unions, employees or the two together endanger or damage public health, safety or the reasonable rights of individuals.

Pre-discussion pollings point to a hot debate on this, the most controversial issue passed by the 80th Congress. The public is invited to attend and air their views on the issue.

High School Principals To Hold Meeting Here

The annual conference of North Carolina principals, of which there are now approximately 1300, is scheduled to be held at the University July 28, 29 and 30, it was announced this week by Prof. Guy B. Phillips, Director of the University's Summer Session, who will be in charge of local arrangements.

Purpose of the conference is to study plans for "improving the quality of educational service rendered to children of North Carolina," he said.

E. M. Thompson, principal of the Burgaw school, is president of the Association, and he will be assisted in directing the conference by J. Paul Lentz of Fairground School, Burlington, and C. C. Linnemann, Burlington high school principal, co-chairmen of the planning committee.

The work conference will open in Lenoir Hall Monday night, July 28, with a banquet session, to be attended by a number of guests from the State Department of Education and other organizations.

Kenan Coeds Will Be Guests of UVA Tonight

The University Veterans association will honor coeds from Kenan dormitory with an open-house dance tonight in the UVA clubhouse from 8:30 till 11 o'clock.

Entertainment planned for intermission includes specialty dance numbers by Dolly Donelson, talented Carolina coed, and a piano-accordian duet by two Durham lassies, Charlotte Ford, and Marian Moss.

Kenan Coeds are urged to be ready when the escort committee calls at 8:15.

Veterans wishing to join the UVA may obtain membership cards at the door of the clubhouse.

Bill Shuford Becomes Graham Memorial Head

Bill Shuford, newly appointed director of Graham Memorial, has announced that his plans for operating the student union will be similar to those of Martha Rice, retiring director.

Shuford said that Bob Coulter will replace Ned Reap as musical director of the Candlelight room, which will be open at the same hours.

The new director, whose home is in Asheville, is o former student at the University.

JULY 4TH CLASSES

All classes, unless otherwise changed by special arrangement, will meet as scheduled Friday, July 4, Guy B. Phillips, director of summer sessions, announced yesterday.

Jim Lilly Elected Chairman Of UP Steering Committee

New Party Head Makes Plans for Activity Of Political Group During Summer Sessions

Jim Lilly has been elected by the University Party as its temporary chairman during the absence of Elwood Mixon, regular UP head.

After Mixon's unexpected withdrawal from school, the UP steering committee met Monday afternoon and chose Lilly to direct its extensive program for the summer. Lilly, a senior from Birmingham, was UP vice chairman in '46, and he is now serving on the budget committee for the second year. He is also president of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

DR. JAN PHILIP SCHINHAN

Following his election, Chairman Lilly announced that UP intends to hold weekly sessions of its steering committee throughout the summer. Every effort will be made to keep a critical eye on the activities of student government officials, to orient UP membership more adequately, to lay the groundwork for campaigns next fall, and to devise better means of stimulating student interest in campus affairs, Lilly said.

Lilly added that UP plans to restrengthen its coalition with dormitory men which, along with student government as a whole, suffered greatly during the war years.

Schinhan Selected As Music Editor Of Folklore Book

Dr. Jan Philip Schinhan, pianist, organist and composer, professor of music at the University, has been selected to serve as music editor for the forthcoming four-volume publication of the Frank C. Brown Collection of North Carolina folklore by the Duke University Press.

Dr. Schinhan has devoted himself for many years to the folk music of this and other countries and is the author of a new book on the American Indian, which will be published in the fall.

16 Others to Help

The collection, consisting of manuscripts and records accumulated by the late Dr. Brown of Duke university, has been in the process of classification and editing for some time. Dr. Newman Ivey White, head of the English department at Duke, is in charge of the publication. Sixteen editors have been delegated to edit special assignments.

Dr. Schinhan, who has been a citizen of the United States for more than 25 years, is a member of a distinguished Viennese family, prominent for generations for their musical achievements. He studied music in European schools and received his Ph.D. from the University of Vienna. After teaching a year at Columbia university, he took up his present work here.

Deposits Being Taken For Room Reservations

All students now living in dormitories who desire to retain dormitory space for the second term of summer school must make a $10 deposit. Deposits will be accepted beginning July 1 and not later than July 10 at the cashier's office on the ground floor of the South building.

It should be understood that this is for the second summer session only and has no bearing on the fall term assignments, Housing Director J. E. Wadsworth announced.

To clarify room reservations and application procedures for men students, assignment to a dormitory room this summer has no bearing on the fall quarter assignment. It should be pointed out again that a separate fall quarter deposit of $6 should be made at the cashier's office on the ground floor of the South building. The housing office has no other way to know who desires to remain on the dormitory waiting list, Wadsworth said.

SHEPARD HEADS "WILDCATS"

F. Carlyle Shepard, University veterans adviser, was elected state commander of the 81st (Wildcat) division at a reunion of the veterans of both world wars held in Statesville last weekend.

The group voted to hold next year's reunion in Burlington.

Grad School Sets Quizzes For Students

All students now enrolled in the University graduate school on a provisional basis and who have not taken their record examinations are advised by W. D. Perry, institutional examiner, that the registration deadline for these quizzes is 12 noon, Thursday, July 17.

Students in this category can register with Perry in room 103 of Peabody hall between the hours of 8:30 in the morning and 4:30 in the afternoon.

The examination, which will measure general education in eight fields with advanced tests in the student's major subjects, is generally given quarterly. By registering before July 17 and paying a fee of $5, the graduate will be eligible for the next tests, to be given on August 4 and 5.

Students who cannot take the exam at the regularly scheduled time will have to pay a fee of $15 in order to take it at an irregular time or place, Perry said.

Legislature to Convene In Gerrard Thursday

A sheaf of at least half a dozen new bills is expected to be put before the Student Legislature at its meeting Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

In addition to consideration of new bills, student lawmakers will hear a report on a bill concerning expense appropriations for three delegates to the National Student Organization conventilon in Madison, Wisconsin, this fall.

The bill, which was introduced last week by Finance Committee Chairman Bill Mackie, would provide $600 in expense money for the delegates.

Legislators may also expect to vote on several new appointments made by Student Body President Tom Eller to fill summer vacancies.

Report will also be heard from Herman Baker's committee on the interdorm recreation shack bill, which was put before the body last week.

DTH Notice

All organizations desiring publicity are requested to turn in copy to the Daily Tar Heel office, second floor of Graham Memorial, on Mondays and Thursdays, respectively, to appear in Wednesday and Saturday papers.

This is necessary, Managing Editor Bill Lamkin explained, because of the early deadline set by printers of the DTH.

Convocation Thursday Presents Address by Illinois Educator

Dr. George Stoddard Headed Commission Assigned to Advise MacArthur in Japan

By Raney Stanford

Dr. George D. Stoddard, president of the University of Illinois, will deliver the first convocation address of the summer session tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Dr. Stoddard, who has recently returned from heading a special War department commission working in Japan with General MacArthur on Japanese educational problems, will speak on "Education, East and West."

DR. GEORGE D. STODDARD

The convocation speaker is an outstanding leader in American public education. Before asuming his present position at Illinois he served for a number of years as commissioner of education for the state of New York.

Guy B. Phillips, director of the summer session, said that all students, faculty, and townspeople are cordially invited to hear the lecture, and that regularly scheduled classes of the 10 o'clock period will not be held to facilitate this.

The local chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, an honorary educational society, will hold a banquet in Dr. Stoddard's honor at 6:30 tomorrow evening at the Carolina Inn. The Chapel Hill chapter of the organization has about 100 members, and all the members throughout the state have been invited to attend the informal supper meeting.

Last Yack Distribution Slated for Thursday

This year's Yackety Yack will be distributed for the last time this term Thursday from 2 to 4 p. m. in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial.

A limited number of 1945 and 1946 Yacks will be on sale at that time for $1.50. It is necessary to sell these books at that price since there is no place in which to store them, it was explained.

It is still possible to get a friend's Yack by presenting his identification card.

Sound & Fury Tryouts Set For This Evening

Sound and Fury will hold tryouts for its summer minstrel show tonight at 7 o'clock in Memorial hall.

All persons interested in taking part in skits, specialties, chorus or technical work are asked to be on hand. Applications for membership to S and F may also be made at this meeting.

7,250 STUDENTS EXPECTED

Director of Admissions Roy Armstrong expects 7,250 students to enter the University this fall, according to recent estimates.

"We can't take care of any more than that," Armstrong said, "because of the shortage of living quarters."

UNC Senior Drowns On Swimming Party

John Arthur Lewis, 27-year-old University senior from Bethlehem, Pa., drowned at Hogan's lake, five miles north of Chapel Hill, about 11:30 p. m. Friday. Coroner H. J. Walker of Hillsboro ruled the death accidental.

Lewis was on a party at the lake with a group of friends. He and several others were swimming when Lewis went down on the north side of the lake, according to reports received by Dr. E. McG. Hedgepeth, University physician.

Dr. Hedgepeth said artificial respiration was administered, but to no avail.

The victim was a resident of Lewis dormitory. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Lewis of Bethlehem.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at Bethlehem.

Congress to Consider Cashing of GI Bonds

A bill to cash GI terminal pay bonds, passage of which has been continuously encouraged by the University Veterans Association and the local chapter of the American Veterans Association through their representatives in Washington, was added to the "must" program of Congress as it entered the last scheduled month of the session.

An armed services sub-committee expects to conclude hearings this week on the bill which would permit cashing of the five-year terminal leave bonds issued to former servicemen and women. It may reach the House floor next week.

Involved are an estimated $1,800,000,000 in government bonds which now cannot be cashed until five years after their date of issue. The Senate has not acted on the legislation.

Interviews for IRC Will Be Held Today

Students interested in joining the International Relations club may attend membership interviews this afternoon from 1:30 to 3 in the Graham Memorial Roland Parker lounge.

Special summer membership for students attending one or both of the sessions have been arranged, IRC membership chairman Ken Cruse announced.

Last week, the IRC accepted six six new members as follows: Anne Brewer, Evalyn Waddell, Banks Talley, Fred Bates, William Greene and William Murphy.

STUDENT PARTY MEETING

The Student party will meet tonight at 7 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge No. 3, Graham Memorial, Chairman Charlie Long announced.

Co-op Grocery Is Great Aid to Married Veterans

By Ken Rothwell

"It used to be like packing supplies in the Aleutians to haul our groceries all the way from Franklin street out here. Now we just step across the street, and when you don't own a car you appreciate that," said a student-veteran recently when asked about the new co-operative grocery store at Victory Village.

His statement is a fairly good indication of the reception which this latest addition to the fast growing community behind Kenan stadium has received since it was added early in June.

Although the store opened only recently, there is a long story behind it which goes back to September of last year. At that time prices in town were soaring higher and higher and married veterans found that in order to live on $90 per month a rigid diet was a prerequisite. Led by people like ex-infantryman Tom McDade, Dr. Frank J. Kottke of the economics department and formerly of the U. S. Army, and with the support of the American Veterans committee, a group of married veterans organized a buying club.

The buying club was designed from the beginning only as a stop-gap measure until the group could open a store. Of necessity, however, the buying club was forced to operate for an entire year before the present store was opened. During this interim the group met once a month in Bingham hall for what was termed a "buying meeting." There they would make up a consolidated grocery order for the entire organization.

At the Victory Village co-operative grocery store Mrs. Louise Bragaw, wife of Mayor Bill Bragaw, makes a purchase from clerk Sammy Grist with the aid of daughter Louie. In the background Mrs. Vincent Patrick checks over the stock.

Following this, volunteer workers purchased the order at wholesale prices, hauled it back to Chapel Hill, and finally distributed it. This was a rather troublesome method to buy a pound of beans, but rather than see a good idea drown in a sea of apathy many loyal members inconvenienced themselves to aid the cause.

Their persistence bore fruit early this spring when the University board of trustees approved the establishment of a co-operative store for the use of veterans only out at Victory Village. Since that time the store has been built, stocked with canned goods, produce, frozen foods and all the other items that go in a grocery store.

Inasmuch as the store is a co-operative each married couple is requested to purchase ten shares of stock at $1 per share. On this stock dividends up to 5 per cent per annum are paid from the profits of operating the store. In addition each member receives a patronage dividend based on the total amount of his purchases.

Until the store was opened, the Chapel Hill Mutual Distributors, Inc., their official title, was accustomed to cutting down on overhead through the use of volunteer workers. Now, however, the store boasts a full-time staff. Mrs. Charlotte Hayes, wife of a veteran and long active in the organization, is manager. Mike Pochna,

Education Cures

In an address to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People last Sunday, President Truman sounded a note that harmonized in the gathering, but as the strains of the note drifted it sounded in discord. He declared that he was going to do all in his power to wipe out racial discrimination.

To his immediate audience, it was received with a longing hope for the actual practice. To the land of the "half and half" it was heard as an idealistic thought that seems at least one generation removed—a theory that involves months, years, and even generations to perfect.

It takes more than just passing legislation and word phrasing to make all men have equal advantage and respect in the community. The printed text of our constitution rings out against discrimination and yet it is far from reality.

The real method to end racial discrimination rests in education. And when we speak of education we do not mean the education of the Negroes alone. Both the Whites and the Negroes must be educated. All must be indoctrinated to live and work in the same community.

Whites must be educated to realize that there should be compensation for the man who strives to excel in his work no matter what his color might be. The Negro must be educated to make him want to better himself and realize that he wants more than just an existence. He must steer clear of any notions concering inter-marriage.

It will be a slow process. But the crow could not get himself a drink of water by turning over the pitcher. All of the water would have been overturned and would have seeped into the ground out of reach—and his throat would still be parched. He had to place pebble after pebble into the pitcher so that the water would rise high enough for him to drink.

Everyone must join in and keep placing pebbles into the pitcher so that the water will rise to a level that will be within reach for all to drink.

Win Yourself A Car

If a project now being conducted by the Assembly of the Philanthropic Literary Society is enthusiastically supported by the student body, not only will some student win a 1947 4-door Kaiser, but the historic Phi art collection will be fully restored and Phi Chamber, the cradle of the honor system and student government, will be supplied with carpets and desks as it was before World War I.

The need for a beautiful Phi Chamber is great, for Phi in recent years has opened its doors to the citizens of the University, offering them a place to discuss their problems formally and to perfect forensic skills. The Phi portrait collection, forming together with the Di collection one of the best known portrait collections in the nation, has suffered for lack of maintenance. The Phi portraits are of former students of the University societies who have become prominent.

The Phi has anounced that anyone may donate any amount, and each dollar donated a receipt will be given, the stub of which entitle the owner to a opportunity to win the 1947 Kaiser sedan.

The project will be raising funds for a worthy purpose. The DTH hopes that enough will be raised fully to redecorate the Phi Chamber, and restore the art collection. The Interdormitory Council has also considered a similar project to raise funds for a club house for dormitory men—this project, too, is worthy, but we feel that the Interdormitory Council was wise in postponing their project until it is learned that the Phi has met with success.—R.M.

Kan's Report from UN

Delegate Finds Challange and Call to Duty As Collegiate Group Meets at U. N. Sessions

By Lincoln Shiao Kan

A few weeks ago, this writer attended the National Collegiate Council on the United Nations in New York. My mission was to discover how we in Chapel Hill could contribute our small bit to the United Nations.

Any doubt that I might have had as to the importance of this conference was immediately dispelled, when I was greeted by the delegate from University of Maryland, and in turn, introduced from Wellesley college. (Incidentally, very lovely.) The whole nation was represented, including a young lady of 16 from Sheboygan, Wisconsin, who was the national high school winner of the American Association on the United Nations information contest. To everyone at the conference this girl, named Beatrice Hauser, was a constant reminder that we had a duty and a challenge to perform.

At Security Council

During a visit to the Security Council meeting, we heard a ringing defense of freedom by the Australian delegate. The subject of discussion was the draft from the Military Staff committee. On the motion that this draft be debated in open, rather than closed session, there was general agreement from everyone but Russia and her satellite. The delegate from Australia had these inspired words: "the question should be discussed in the light of day, subject to the scrutiny and examination of the world." To this writer the impression was left that there are other peoples who desire freedom of press and information besides ourselves.

Chester Williams, a member of the United States mission to the U. N. wakened the fatigued and sleepy college delegates one morning with thse startling words ". . . idealists are trouble-makers, they try to make 'think pieces' of the world . . ." Everyone bent forward to listen as Mr. Williams continued ". . . the United Nations is the best facility we have to keep civilization progressing . . . we are not building one world, God has already created the one world . . . our problem is to adjust to that one world . . ."

"It is harder to win the peace because it is less glamorous than winning a war," were the opening words of Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, who spoke to the conference. She emphasized the fact that "day by day in your community, in your own work you are building the peace of the world. If your community is a good community, it will build that peace." Her reason for the past war was expressed in these words: "This war came from the abrogation of Human Rights . . . writing an International Bill of Rights is no easy job, because of 55 nations with different customs, religions and languages, different definitions of the same words . . ."

Mrs. Roosevelt Impressive

We were much impressed with Mrs. Roosevelt's final words which were, "the older people of the United Nations always have the fear that it will go the way of the League of Nations, and it is from the enthusiasm of the young people who work for the United Nations and from the young peoples' support, that the United Nations will be made to work." The realization came to us that, despite all her troubles and her years, she still maintained her charm, spirit, and progressive thoughts.

No amount of criticism can rob Mrs. Roosevelt of her stature as a great woman. An interesting and encouraging incident concerning her came a few days later. The college representatives were lunching in the United Nations cafeteria, when our former First Lady walked to the serving line, picked up a tray, and proceeded to get her meal. In no other nation besides the United States could this have happened. The dignitaries of other states would not have dined with the people, but instead would have been flanked by guards and served in private stateliness. To us, it was real-life democracy in action.

What Is The Honor System?

It recently has come to the attention of the Honor Councils that there is considerable confusion on the part of several new students here at Carolina for the summer as to just what our Honor System is and means. This is also true for many of the old students who failed to go through proper orientation when they entered and for perhaps an even greater number who once knew but have just forgotten.

The Men's Council cannot personally reach each one of you, but by reprinting the following and asking that every student—new and old—seriously read it, its members hope that many questions will be cleared up and that the present lax attitude on the part of many of our students will be replaced by something closer resembling that "old" Carolina spirit once so famous.

Carolina's Spirit of Living

(Prepared by the Student Council of 1938-39)

The principles upon which Carolina student government is based are a way of living. As the creed of University life, it stands for the individual assumption of an active policy of honesty and fairness, of gentlemanly conduct. So keenly is this spirit felt that it has become a social as well as personal responsibility. We Carolina students have pledged never to lower our standard of honor, and we have set up from among our number a Student Council (now Men's and Women's Councils) to whom we send those who do not respect our self-imposed code of life.

To think and act the truth is the heart of our way of life. The Honor Principle states: A student is on his honor not to lie, cheat, or steal; this is a personal, living principle by which we strive to live, and its practice is its own reward.

A second self-imposed and self-mantained standard in our University life is the Campus Code. Simply stated it is: A student is on his honor always to conduct himself as a gentleman. Listing no offences, it leaves its interpretation broadly to the student and relies upon Carolina's long-standing traditions to mark the channel.

The Honor System can be, and is, easily perverted in the minds of many people. The idea that reporting an offender is spying and tattling, is a relic of childhood when reporting to an external authority was to "break faith with the gang." Here at Carolina, the authority is self-imposed. We report to an internal authority, to fellows whom we elect to do our bidding. With this change of circumstances, not to report is to "break faith with the gang" in a larger and more important sense. We accept the fact that we have entered a new life in a self-determining democratic society where we have responsibilities both to ourselves and to our fellowmen. To retain the freedom which we now know on this campus, to help ourselves and our fellows learn and live honestly, to maintain our self-imposed standards, we must at all times act promptly to prevent and correct violations of this trust.

Tuition Going Up Elsewhere; But It's Status Quo at UNC

By Edward Oka

Tuition is not going up.

Anyway not for the average undergraduate student of the University of North Carolina. For despite the fact that the cost of operations has increased more than 90% in the past six years, and is still in the process of rising, Chapel Hill administrators are not contemplating any higher general tuition fees for the coming school year.

University administrators throughout the country have found it necessary to demand as much as a 30% increase in fees. The University of Miami (Coral Gab[illegible] for example, charged $17[illegible] a semester for the '46-47 year. [illegible] boost prices up to [illegible] the coming [illegible]

According [illegible] Teague, University [illegible], gross receipts expected [illegible] coming year at the Uni[illegible] be approximately $3,20[illegible]

"The state [illegible] budget for the University of some $4,500,000," declared Teague, "and we must not exceed that amount. The remaining $1,300,000 will have to be appropriated by the legislators to fill the gap."

The business manager made it clear that although no tuition rises were anticipated for the general undergraduate, rising costs of equipment for students in the professional schools such as pharmacy and medicine would necessitate slightly higher fees.

Campus Keyboard

Friday will mark the 171st anniversary of the birth of our nation. In every part of the United States people will stop their work to honor their beloved country. Thousands will congregate at Monticello to hear the President speak in honor of Thomas Jefferson, small town mayors will speak to their citizens in town halls and public parks, and thousands of the nation's citizens will flock to the beaches for a day of rest.

Due to administrative complications it will be an ordinary day in Chapel Hill, for there will be classes as usual. It is not the purpose of this article to attack the administration for GI subsistence red tape and required length of school sessions present a difficult problem; but we can still have our Fourth of July even if in spirit only.

We will have to go to classes, but we will never forget the ingenuity of our forefathers or the great country that they built for posterity.

Freshman Fudway Fuming, Viewing Virile Veterans

By Bob Sain

"I'm jiss gittin dawgone tarred uv it. Thet's awl."

That is what Homer Fudway said to me just the other day. Homer is a very freshman. He doesn't know what's funny about the Confederate soldier's gun, nor how to pronounce arboretum. Also, he is tremendously impressed by the lazy young men who sit on frat house verandahs.

He is such a freshman! Just the other day I saw him try to blow a head off a glass of Viennese coffee at Danziger's.

But getting back to what he was tarred uv.

"I'm jiss sick uv all this to-do about veterans."

We were in a rather exposed position—at the soda fountain in the "Y"—so I looked around to see if anyone had heard him. This was treason! He would really be tarred if anybody heard him — and probably feathered. We were in luck; no one had heard. The girl behind the counter was flirting with a guy down at the other end and the counter-boys were busy polishing the counter's metal portions while half-a-dozen customers waited. Anyway, no one heard him.

Trenchbound

I grabbed his arm, and not wanting to miss what he had to say, led him to a newly-dug trench in front of the library where we could talk in private.

He climbed down into the trench, scraping his shoes in the mud. "Jiss lak home," he said.

We sat down and then I whispered, "Now what's this about veterans? And be careful what you say. Not too loud."

He looked about carefully and then said quietly, "I'm juss tarred uv 'em. Whut I mean," he continued, "is that evuhtime I tunn aroun' somebuddy is askin me if I'm a vet and wheah I suvved an I jiss tell 'em I ain't an they look at me lahk I'm frum Dook, or somethin."

I could see his point.

"Well, you have to remember, Homer, that it is the way of the times. Veterans," I said, "are the salt of the earth." I said that and casually flashed my discharge card under his nose.

Mammy Loves Him

And he answered, "I know but whut am I? I ain't a vet and still my mammy loves me and sends me boxes of cookies and candy and sometimes Pap will send me a five-dollar bill when the crop is good. Yeah, I reckon vets are okay but so am I an I don't lahk to be left out uv things."

Now we had reached the heart of the thing. Homer felt slighted.

"Homer," I said in my best sympathetic voice, "nobody is condemning you because you didn't get drafted."

"I know," he said, "they ain't nobody actually sayin nothing to me because I ain't one, but you can tell. I mean the girls frisk me fer a discharge card when I ask fer a date and nobody will tawk with me cause they think I'm not very smaht."

What could I say?

"Look," I said. "I know just how you feel and maybe you're right. Maybe people do act that way. But there's nothing you can do about it.

Intramural Swimming Plans Announced As Activity Continues

Ward Defeated In NCAA Golf

Tar Heel Dropped In Quarter-Finals

Carolina's chances of winning national golf title fell by the wayside last Saturday when the Tar Heel's remaining entry in the NCAA links event played at Ann Arbor, Mich., Harvey Ward, dropped a close 2 and 1 decision in the quarter-final match.

Up until that time the Tarboro lad had won his first three matches in the individual play after qualifying with a 154 total for 36 holes.

Ward met his master in Oregon's Louis Stafford, runner-up in the 1946 National Public Links championship. Stafford was rated as one of the pre-tournament favorites, but he too, failed to complete the long road to the title, being bounced out in the semi-finals by Dave Barclay of Michigan, the eventual winner of the crown.

Ward made a very favorable showing while he remained in the tourney and is becoming recognized as one of the nation's leading collegiate golfers.

Ward, together with the remaining members of the Carolina team who competed in the national event, return home this week.

Snavely Conducts Coaching School

Head Coach Carl Snavely of the Tar Heel football team returned to Chapel Hill yesterday after an extended trip north and a four-day stay in Stroudsburg, Pa., where he conducted a football coaching school.

Snavely will conduct the North Carolina coaching school's gridiron division in August, and he is back at work in preparation for the 1947 season. He also confirmed the fact that Ernie Williamson had definitely signed a pro contract.

Mt. Airy Madman!

Sparger Considered One Of Best All-Round Ends

By Leon Mitchell

Big, silent George Sparger, who hails from Mount Airy, is currently considered one of the best all-around ends on the Tar Heel squad. He excels both on offensive and defensive play, and although seemingly nonchalant and unconcerned between plays, with the snap of the ball he is very much awake as many of last year's opponents can very well testify.

GEORGE SPARGER

George played freshman ball n 1941, and while playing varsity ball against North Carolina State in 1942 he caught five consecutive passes thrown him by tailback Billy Myers.

He claims that Charlie Justice is the greatest broken field runner in the ranks of college football today and that coach Carl Snavely gets more deception out of the single-wing than most coaches get out of the T-formation.

George likes to swim and sun-bathe, but thus far every atempt to acquire a tan has failed as the sun seems to disappear everytime he plans to appear. What other reason does the Kessing pool have his daily visits? We won't say it's because Jean Baskerville can be found there—but it could be! By way of old discovery, Billie Goodwin, Jean's swimming partner informs us that Jean's great uncle, Charlie Baskerville, was the first Editor of the Daily Tar Heel and also served as captain of Carolina's football squad.

Overheard discussed in a local soda shop was both Sparger's and center Chan Highsmith's claim of being the symbol most used of that representing the University of North Carolina. Of course, they both admit that occasionally the Old Well is used.

The most unique thing that he saw occur in college football was Highsmith's 34-yard run to the one-yard line against Florida on an intercepted pass. Chan attempted to lateral the ball off to a teammate during the entire distance of his run but seeing no one near he had to carry it himself. And that thing was so heavy! "I guess the boys just couldn't keep up with me so I had to hold on to it myself" was his reply.

In the past season's Sugar Bowl against Georgia, Sparger blocked one of the attempts for the extra point. It was one of the very few trys for extra point that the Georgia star had blocked against him all season. He converted 52 out of a possible 56.

Sparger, during spring practice, made a successful showing as blocking back and it may be that a switch may be made. He was very impressive in the past season of play and demonstrated a bang-up game in the Sugar Bowl Classic. With the added experience acquired he should prove to be a vital cog in the Tar Heel gridiron machine come next fall.

BULLETIN

Baxter Jarrell, outstanding guard on the Tar Heel football team last fall, has signed a contract to play pro football with the Green Bay Packers, it was learned by the Daily Tar Heel last night. Last season was Jarrell's last year of eligibility.

Moody, Simmons To Participate In AAU Contest

Jack Moody, the newly-found Carolina high jump star, has been selected to participate in the National AAU track and field championships, representing the New Jersey AAU. He will compete with the nation's best in Lincoln, Neb., Thursday and Friday of this week, as will Chunk Simmons, who will be representing the Carolinas AAU.

Just last week Moody, in the New Jersey AAU meet, cleared the bar at six feet, seven and one half inches, which is one of the best jumps ever turned in in New Jersey. This betters by four and one half inches Moody's own Southern conference and University record.

Moody, who was on the All-American scholastic track team before entering the service, is considered one of the best college high jump prospects in the country, and he stands a good chance to place high in the National meet in Lincoln the end of this week.

Simmons, who failed to qualify in the NCAA meet at Salt Lake City, Utah, weekend before last, is also expected to be a strong contender in the annual AAU track and field classic.

Mrs. Page Fifth In National Open

Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, Chapel Hill's gift to the realm of women's golf, turned in a 72-hole total of 306 to come in fifth in the National Women's Open golf tournament held last Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday over Greensboro's Starmount Forest Country club course.

Nearly 12,000 Season Ducats Already Sold

With the alumnia priority period over, the University ticket office yesterday opened the sale of football tickets to the general public with indications of a sellout of several games well in advance of the contests.

The advance sales so far have been far the heaviest in the history of the University. Approximately 12,000 season tickets have been sold, including orders for the Georgia, Wake Forest, Tennessee and Virginia home games. Tickets to the game with N. C. State here November 8 are being handled through separate orders because of the recent shift of the game site from Raleigh to Chapel Hill.

Approximately 10,000 tickets each to the Georgia and Tennessee home games were made available to the general public today, including some 7,000 seats in the end zones and 3,000 in the upper-level. Approximately 12,000 seats to the Wake Forest and Virginia games remain available.

Water Carnival To Feature Bait-Casting, Stunt Dives

Softball Tournament To Remain In Play Until End Of First Term; Tennis Ending

By Gus Lacy

Summer intramural play continued on a high plane of activity this week, and the final rounds of the tennis and horseshoe tournaments are rapidly approaching. The present softball schedule, now in its second week, will continue on until the end of the first summer session.

Officials of the intramural office have announced plans for a gala water carnival to take place in Kessing Memorial pool on Friday, July 18, at 7:30 p.m. The carnival, a new wrinkle in swimming tournaments, will feature regulation swimming races plus a number of novelty and comedy events.

All students are invited to enter the meet, with the exception of varsity swimming lettermen. Anyone wishing to enter the 50-yard freestyle, breaststroke or backstroke races should report to the lifeguard at the pool between July 8 and July 14. Lifeguards at the pool will conduct time trials for those events between 5:45 and 6:30 p.m. during those dates.

All entries close on Monday, July 14, and semi-finals will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, July 17. Team scores will be kept, and suitable awards will be made.

One of the main features of the carnival will be bait-casting contest, in which all students, faculty members and townspeople are eligible to enter. Entry blanks will be placed in prominent places around the campus and should the number of entries be large, a semi-event will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, July 17th. All entrants will be required to furnish their own rod, reel, and line.

Both boys and girls are eligible to enter the tournament, and team entries may be mixed. In addition to the regulation events, such novelty races as a honeymoon special, spoon relay, watermelon scramble and ping pong ball retrieve will be conducted also.

VIC SEIXAS

Seixas Runnerup For NCAA Crown

Southern conference tennis for 1947 took over the nation's collegiate spotlight last week when two William and Mary and one Carolina net stars climbed into the semi-finals of the NCAA championships at Los Angeles, Calif. Out of this trio of SC contestants, Gardner Larned, of the Indians, repeated his Chapel Hill performance of last spring in turning back Vic Seixas, of the Tar Heels, in five sets for the national singles crown.

The final match between Lerned and Seixas was one of the most bitter of the entire tournament, with Seixas taking a 2-1 advantage in sets before going down in defeat in the last pair. After dropping the initial set 6-4, Seixas came back with a teriffic game to take Larned in an 11-9 canto and then sweep a second set 6-4.

However, Larned rallied to win the next two, 6-3 and 6-1 for the title, which was vacated by Bob Falkenberg. Even in losing the final set 6-1, Seixas carried Larned to match point seven times before giving up before the championship onslaught.

At present, Seixas is in Salt Lake City, Utah, to participate in the National Clay court championships, and from there he will move to Denver, Col., for another summer tournament.

Diary Reveals Strange, Romantic Story Of Two Sisters and Young Baptist Minister

By Roland Giduz

Martha and Varena Mason, aged 24 and 20 respectively, were "called away in their radiant bloom within a few short weeks of each other.". . . And around their mysterious and untimely deaths has arisen quite a story, part fact, part legend.

Martha, born Oct. 16, 1857, and Varena, born June 22, 1861, were the daughters of James Pleasant Mason, minister of the Chapel Hill Baptist church, and Mary Elizabeth Morgan. The children grew up on the Mason plantation, located about two miles southeast of Chapel Hill.

Attractive though they were, they "languished on the vine," as one old-timer put it, until 1876 when Amzi Clarence Dixon, a fiery young Baptist preacher, came to town. The brother of Thomas Dixon—author of "The Clansman" and "The Leopard's Spots"—young Dixon quite naturally frequented the Mason plantation, due to his religious ties with his fellow Baptist minister.

Shortly talk arose that Dixon was interested in one of the comely Mason daughters, and town gossip seemed to think it would be a grand thing if he would marry one of them and settle down in Chapel Hill.

It is true that Dixon did visit the Mason daughters and sometimes took them riding in his carriage, but it is thought that he was completely impartial as to which one he liked the better.

But suddenly Dixon left Chapel Hill. He went to New York and later to MARTHA AND VERENA MASON (left and right, respectively) both died in 1881—some say of a broken heart—within two months of each other, after the sudden departure of the Rev. A. C. Dixon, handsome and fiery Chapel Hill Baptist preacher.

London where he became well-known with the Metropolitan Baptist Temple. In following years he traveled all over the world, and wrote more than two dozen religious books.

On January 1, 1881, the temperature was 10 degrees above zero, and a deep snow was yet on the ground from a fall on the night of December 29, 1880, when Mason made the following entry in his diary: "I commence this Diary praying that I may live to write something good on every page in it and that if I live htrough the year I may be helped and glorify God. . ."

But on Saturday, December 31, 1881 he shakily wrote: "This ends 1881, a fearfully sad year.—See September 6 and November 22."

For on these days Martha and Varena, his beloved Mattie and Rena, who seemed to have lost all interest in living with the departure of Dixon, both died.

Though she had been ill a number of times during the year and was unable to attend the University commencement of 1881 due to measles, Varena's mysterious and fatal illness seems to have begun on August 17 when the notation "Varena is right sick. Dr. Mallette came today," was entered in the diary.

Dreadful Night

As things became worse during the next two weeks, he wrote, "Dr. Mallette came on his 19th visit today. . . .," then "Varena despaired. . . The doctor still hopes. . ." September 5 he described as "the most dreadful night in my life," then simply, on Wednesday, September 6: "At day's dawn Varena died. Buried at 5 P. M."

With Rena's death Mattie also seemed to become despondent likewise and she soon came down with an incurable fever. Finally on Tuesday, November 22, Mason tersely wrote, "Mattie died 1 a. m."

For another decade Mason tilled his farm, dying on June 24, 1891. He was buried under the magnolia beside Martha and Varena, and on his gravestone was written: "James Pleasant Mason . . . For forty years a faithful minister of the Baptist church . . . In labors abundant, in weariness and painfulness . . . Light is given to him that was in misery . . ."

In his will he left a grant of $1,000 in the name of Martha and Varena to the University, the income of which was to go for "the education of indigent students."

His wife at her death in 1894 bequeathed their 800-acre plantation to the University with but two provisions: (1) The family burial plot to be kept up by the University; (2) Portraits of the daughters, their father, and herself, to be hung "in a public hall at the University." They may be seen today in the University library.

Graham Is Named To Red Cross Board

The Chapel Hill chapter of the American Red Cross has received from the area office in Atlanta notification that President Frank P. Graham of the University has been named to a three-year term on the Board of Governors of the American National Red Cross.

He is one of 12 members-at-large elected at the annual convention recently held in Cleveland.

Under the reoganization plan of the Red Cross, adopted and put into effect at the convention, the governing board consists of 50 members, 30 of which are elected by the convention—on nomination of a committee representing the chapters of the Red Cross—eight members appointed by the President of the United States, and 12 members-at-large named by the board.

The 12 were "chosen with a view to obtaining outstanding individuals with a national outlook, and also to obtain the affiliation of religious, professional, scientific and other elements with which the Red Cross should work closely."

President Graham has previously been a member of the governing board. He has long been interested in the work of the Red Cross, both in this chapter and nationally. Mrs. Graham, also, has for some years been very active as head of the knitting work done by the Chapel Hill chapter. During the war she and President Graham turned over the large living-room in their home to the chapter as a bandaging room.

Student Legislature Hears Proposal of Dozen New Bills

Three Controversial Measures Awaiting Consideration by Committees This Week

A dozen new bills are before Student Legislature committees this week after a short, full meeting Thursday night at which the legislature answered Speaker Jack Folger's request for activity last week with a rush of proposed legislation.

Topping the flood of bills were three that seem bound to cause controversy.

The first of these bills, a proposal that student activities submit written and verbal financial reports to a legislative committee, was presented by Speaker Pro-Tem Charlie Long. Long later tried vainly to have the rules suspended so that his bill might be considered before adjournment Thursday night, but he was voted down.

Other Bills

Another bill probably due for quite a lot of discussion is a proposal for a new construction of the campus budget.

A third bill, to provide for reapportionment of legislators under direction of the elections committee, may meet with opposition next week.

Some committee heads expressed doubts that their committees would be unable to come to agreement on a number of the bills presented. If the bills are delayed in reaching the floor, Speaker Folger will not be able to adjourn legislative sessions for the first term following next week's meeting as was his plan.

NSO Appropriation

In other business, legislators approved a bill, reported out with only one minor amendment by the Finance committee, to appropriate $600 to cover expenses for three delegates to the September meeting of the National Student Organization in Madison, Wisconsin.

A report from Herman Baker, head of a committee appointed last week to investigate possibilities for a new interdormitory recreation shack, was heard. Baker said further investigation of the situation would require more time.

Next meeting of the legislature is set for Gerrard Hall, Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Veterans May Recieve GI Checks Next Week

Veterans on campus may have to wait a few more days before they get their subsistence checks.

That's the information received yesterday by veterans advisor Carlyle Shepard, after he and J. A. Williams, University legal adviser, had made inquiries through the regional Veterans administration office in Winston-Salem.

The regional office in turn contacted the Richmond branch, where checks are mailed from, and found that the holdup of subsistence payments was due to deficiency of appropriations by the federal government.

However, the Richmond office pointed out that on July 2 a bill was passed by Congress which will alleviate the situation.

Shepard said the Winston-Salem office told him the checks should be on their way in a day or two, and possibly will arrive in Chapel Hill at the beginning of next week.

CCUN Holds First Meeting

The first full-fledged meeting of the North Carolina chapter of the Collegiate Council on the United Nations was held Thursday night at the home of Randall McCleod. With State Chairman Lincoln Kan presiding, planning for statewide activities of the C.C.U.N. was evolved.

Plans include the widespread distribution of information about the United Nations, through press, radio, and speaker presentation, establishing of committees of the North Carolina chapter on campuses throughout the state, and generally acquainting the public with the vital importance of the U.N.

As the C.C.U.N. grows in strength and influence, it plans to hold essay and poetry prize contests, and a campus "United Nations Week" this fall.

Chairman Lincoln Kan announced that the Association for the Study of World Affairs on the campus has been dissolved by unanimous consent of its members, in order to avoid conflict and competition with the C.C.U.N.

Members at the Thursday meeting were Lincoln Kan, Roberta Stirling, Randall McCleod, Charlie Long, Bill Mackie, Barron Mills, and Bill Armstrong.

IRC Plans Discussion On Military Training

The International Relations club will discuss the "implications of the proposed Universal Military Training program on American foreign policy" at Monday evening's open forum meeting at 8 o'clock in the Graham Memorial Roland Parker lounge. All summer school students are welcome to participate in the informal discussion.

Fred Bates, newly-elected IRC member, will give a report on the government's projected youth training program. Universial Military Training has been strongly urged by many educators, scientists and military men. Congress may take the problem within the next few months, and the fate of the proposal will largely depend on the state of world affairs.

UP Committee Meeting

A meeting of the University party steering committee has been called for 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in Roland Parker lounge No. 1 by Jim Lilly, newly-elected UP summer chairman.

All committee members who are unable to attend this meeting are urged to delegate proxies. It is important that some plan be formulated Tuesday for improvement of U. P. solons' attendance at sessions of the legislature.

This schedule approved by the Committee of Deans.

Featured in the Carolina Playmakers' first summer production, "The Late Christopher Bean," will be Elaine "Bootsie" Stevenson, Winston-Salem, top left, who will have the role of Suzan Haggett. Mrs. Marion Miller, Aberdeen, Md., top right, was chosen to take the leading role of "Abby."

Next Playmaker Production Features Miller, Stevenson

Mrs. Marion L. Miller and Elaine "Bootsie" Stevenson hold the feminine leads in "The Late Christopher Bean," which is being produced by the Carolina Playmakers next Thursday and Friday in the Playmakers theatre.

Mrs. Miller is from Aberdeen, Md., and is now a special student at UNC in creative writing and dramatic art. By profession, she is an English and music teacher in a high school in Edgewood, Md.

A veteran in musical comedy, Mrs. Miller has directed plays and operettas, written a book of poems, worked summer stock in the Reginald Goode theatre in New York, and is now working on a series of one-act historical plays for high school production. A student here during the summer of 1945, Mrs. Miller's one-act play, 'To Count Thirteen," was produced by The Playmakers as an experimentol.

Miss Stevenson, a tarheel from Winston-Salem, is a student at Converse college in Spartanburg, S. C. Attracted by the Playmakers, she is concentrating on music and dramatic art at UNC this summer.

Verifying her ambition for musical comedy, she has had experience in high school dramatics, opera at Converse, radio workshop in Winston-Salem, and has been a prize-winner four times in amateur contests. A voice-scholarship student, she is also noted for her singing at Converse recitals.

Phi Discusses Anti-Red Bill

The Philanthropic Literary society met Tuesday night in a regular session to discuss the bill passed by the North Carolina General Assembly to outlaw the Communist party in the state. Prof. Paul W. Wager of the Political Science department opened the discussion and cautioned the assembly to consider the possibilities of prosecution of any liberal in the future under the guise of being a Communist.

Members of the society joined in the discussion and a heated debate took place on the floor. The resolution to go on record as favoring the legislature's action was accepted by a vote of 8-6.

Art Exhibition

Speaker Robert Morrison announced plans for an art exhibition September 30 when the Phi will make a display of their famous collection of portraits. At the exhibit a 1947 Frazer will be given away through a drawing for some lucky ticketholder. The money raised through this campaign will be used by the Phi to redecorate the hall in New East and to repair the portraits.

The Phi will meet again Tuesday night in New East at 7:30 to discuss a bill to insure "Work or Fight Legislation" in the event of another war in which the United States is involved.

Di Open Forum Set Wednesday

The Dialectic Literary society will present a forum on world government next Wednesday night at 9 o'clock, president Pro-Tem John M. Zucker has announced. The forum will be held in the Di senate on the third floor of New West, and will be made up of a number of outstanding speakers.

While the list has not as yet been completed, it will include Professor Henry Brandis, Jr. of the law school; Dr. Joseph W. Straley of the physics department; and Harold Bock, a special student at the University.

Prof. Brandis is well qualified to speak on world government, being president of the local town and faculty chapter of United World Federalists and very active in the world government. He has spoken out for world government on numerous occasions, and much of the growth of the world government movement at the University and in this section of the state is attributed to his tireless effort.

Dr. Straley, as most scientists, is probably world government's most ardent advocate at the University. Being a physicist, he is more aware than most of the truly great danger of the atomic bomb.

Harold Bock has long been active in the world government movement. Before coming to the University, he was a leader in the world government movement at Northwestern University.

Students Register Next Week For Second Session and Fall

Procedure Is Outlined for All Departments Except Schools of Law and Public Health

Instructions for registration for the second summer term and the fall quarter have been released pertaining to all schools of the University except the schools of law and public health, both of which will announce registration policies at a later date.

For students registered or registering in all other schools, the procedure is as follows:

Procedure

(1) Those now enrolled who have already preregistered for the second summer session will make any changes in their courses for the next term by following the usual drop and add system, first going to their faculty advisers and deans and then taking their tentative class schedules to Memorial hall. This should be done whenever advisers can be contacted during the periods from July 7 to 22 or July 24 to 26, inclusive.

(2) Those who are registered for only the present term who want to register for the next summer term beginning July 23 may do so through the drop and add procedure referred to in item (1).

(3) Those now in school who expect to return in September are urged to preregister for the fall quarter. General college students should sign appointment sheets at the information desk in South building beginning July 7 for consultation with their advisers from July 15 to 18. All others should see their deans from July 16 to 18.

(4) Students not enrolled for the present term may register for the next summer term to begin July 23 through their faculty advisers or deans in Memorial hall.

Eller Founds Second HPB

President of the Student Body Tom Eller has issued instructions for the reconstitution of the much talked about House Privileges board. He has taken this action in order to comply with the student constitution.

In a letter to the Speaker of the Coed senate, Barbara Cashion, and the chairman of the Interfraternity council, Leon Todd, he made the following suggestions as to how the Board might form its policy:

"(1) The old system of 'flying squadrons' and 'spot checks' is not in the spirit of our honor system and, should no longer be practiced;

"(2) . . . the HPB is nothing more than a rule-making body and should leave all questions of trials, etc., to the appropriate councils;

"(3) The Legislature should review its agreement with the administration before it is adopted."

President Eller expressed hope that the board would adopt the existing agreement between the Interfraternity council and the administration. This agreement runs until August 29, 1947.

The new House Privileges board will be composed as follows: the executive committee of the Interfraternity council, the speaker of the Coed senate and three coeds appointed by her, and one representative from the Women's council.

The HPB will meet in the near future at which time a chairman will be elected.

S&F Rehearsals Begin For 'Weep No More'

Sound and Fury's summer production, "Weep No More", goes into production this coming Monday with tentative playing dates set for the 18th and 19th of this month.

Exactly what the production will consist of has not been announced, but the leakage coming from early meetings seems to point to a part minstrel, part vaudeville with a reported bit of Chaucer being thrown in for good measure. The outcome should be worth seeing.

Although the cast of the show has been almost completed, several spots still remain open in the acting, technical, and business end of the organization. Any interested persons should contact President Billy Carmichael at the Daily Tar Heel office or drop by the rehearsals, the majority of which will be held in Memorial Hall.

Room Deposits Due For Summer and Fall

All students who wish to reserve dormitory rooms for next fall should make a $6 deposit at the cashier's office in the basement of South building as soon as possible, the University housing office has announced. Those who hold rooms this summer are reminded that unless this deposit is made, they have no assurance of keeping their present space next September.

Housing director J. E. Wadsworth added that $10 deposits as reservations for the second term of summer school will also be received at the cashier's office no later than next Thursday.

It should be understood that the two deposits are separate but must be made promptly to clarify dormitory records for both the next summer session and the fall quarter, Wadsworth said.

MOORE COUNTY CLUB

The Moore County club will hold a short business meeting in Horace Williams lounge Monday evening at 7:30. All members are urged to attend.

Stoddard Calls UNESCO Key To Maintaining World Peace

Maintenance of world peace will depend in large measure upon the success of the newest member of the United Nations family, the UN Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization. That's what Dr. George D. Stoddard, president of the University of Illinois and chairman of the United States Education commission which last year studied Japanese educational problems, told a general convocation of the University in Memorial hall yesterday.

Speaking on "East and West in Education," Dr. Stoddard said, "The past of Nagasaki is the future of every city in the world, unless within the lifetime of students in college today we can make of the United Nations what those two words mean in plain English.

Lack of Time

"The greatest danger to education, east or west, is that we shall not have enough time. Hitherto war has been a slow fire, even when declared; now it is sudden, universal and completely destructive," the Illinois educator asserted.

"If we really had books, teachers and the mass media of education, freely available over the world, we should indeed lessen the danger of war," he continued.

Success of the UNESCO program depends in large measure on its reception by the children and teachers of the former Axis nations, and the response to American education methods in Japan to date is very encouraging, President Stoddard said.

He quoted a report by Mrs. Elizabeth Gray Vining, formerly of Chapel Hill, who since last fall has been tutor for Crown Prince Akihito, the empress, and peers and peeresses, and who found "a sincere desire to understand and an earnest effort to communicate the true meaning of that much-used word 'democracy'."

Chancellor Robert B. House presided over the convocation, and President Frank P. Graham introduced Dr. Stoddard.

Subs Warfare

The latest installment in the fight for increased GI subsistence has taken a slight turn for the better. The most recent development is the Senate Labor and Public Welfare committee's approval of a $10 per month increase for single veterans and $15 per month jump for married men without children. The approved increase still has many barriers to overcome.

Sometime ago in the House committee, the group voted not to increase the subsistence allowance for single veterans, but married veterans would be allowed $105 per month and an additional $15 for each child. The committee failed to realize that if the living costs of the married veteran increased then undoubtedly those of the single veteran had also.

Senator Wayne Morris, fresh in the minds of students here, for his speech in Hill Hall last term, is one of the main stalwarts for the increase in subsistence. He has taken considerable interest in the bill and urges the Senate to take immediate action. Meanwhile veterans living on the $65 and $90 a month checks had better hold their breath.

It is rumored that this session of Congress will probably adjourn before the end of this month and the subs increase bill may be shoved to the bottom of the agenda.

Action from your part in the form of telegrams and letters may put the pressure on your congressman and representative at the most opportune time and help press the bill through the mill.

Parkyalisis

Currently the University is badly afflicted with automobile parkalysis, the disease which cripples traffic. Such symptoms as blocked streets and driveways, and excessively crowded parking lots are to be found everywhere in Chapel Hill.

To diagnose a remedy for parkalysis, a committee of students, faculty members, and townspeople has been at work for almost a year on a plan finally nearing completion. Posters on display throughout the campus already prescribe special parking regulations, and now insignias are being designed to recognize those who will manage vehicles in such a manner as to encourage healthier traffic.

Still, the only sure panacea the committee guarantees is a triple dose of courtesy, co-operation, and carefulness. Several suggestions have been made. The thoughtful auto-owners who live in nearby dormitories and fraternity houses might walk one block to class before cruising perhaps two or three blocks beyond the correct building, locating a parking space at last, and then walking back. The Carrboro or Durham students who commute by car daily might try parking once for the entire day instead of scrambling from crowded lot to crowded lot between classes. To avoid waiting in additional lines behind a steering wheel, more observant drivers might pick such little-used lots as the areas provided behind Smith dormitory or Graham Memorial in preference to the highly congested spaces behind Steele dormitory, the Playmaker theater, Memorial hall, and the library. More room might be put to advantage if cars were placed orderly in ranks and not haphazardly in roadways, especially behind Memorial hall. When the spot to the rear of the library is filled to capacity, parking might continue on both sides of the Raleigh highway as the law permits.

Parkalysis is not incurable. This summer can begin a convalescence period before the record enrollment expected next fall complicates an even wider epidemic. The traffic committee and its suggestions can be supported voluntarily now before firm penalties are instigated for student car-owners' own benefit to hold their noses and force them to take whatever medicine seems necessary.—C. Union Answers

Dear Mr. Mills:

I should like to offer "facts and evidence" that may permit you to supplement your article of Saturday, June 28 on the campaign of the workers of the University to better their pay and working conditions. I am confident that upon consideration of these facts you will be able to get off "middle ground" and as leaders of the student body of one of the nation's great universities find common cause with the people who work in that university.

Firstly, I am sure that the workers of the University have no intention of indulging in "accusations and inuendoes." They hope through their own unity and democratic action to correct a situation which, while of immediate, critical hardship to them, brings discredit to the University and the ideals of justice and decency which it strives to inculcate.

Secondly, while the Union is concerned with the working conditions of its members in the laundry it is actually pleading for its members in all sections of the University. As you indicated in your article, laundry workers receive impossibly low wages, amounting to a total of $22 a week or less of take-home pay. Hourly wages are actually 33c an hour. A typical bonus runs $2.16 plus $4.23. Multiply 33c by 45 hours, add the bonus and subtract deductions for tax and pension and you can see what the wages actually are.

Workers in the dining room, preparing food and washing dishes for university students go to work at 6:30 in the morning and do not end their working day until 8:30 at night. Their take-home pay runs from $22 down to $19 a week. If a special crowd of visiting officials force extra work the workers are subject to losing what little free time they may have during the day, with no extra pay.

Janitors, maids and building attendants generally work a 48 hour week and receive a take-home pay running up to $27 or $28 a week. Some workers of the University are granted Christmas as a paid holiday. Many, as in the laundry are not even paid for that one day of grace in a year. Other paid holidays or paid vacations beyond one week a year are unknown.

But please do not take the story just from me, the "paid agent" of these men and women. You'll find our local union officers happy to tell you their story and add many details which I have neglected or been unable to include suggest that you contact, in particular Leroy Clark, chairman of the negotiating committee who works I believe, in the Physics building and may be reached also by writing General Delivery, Chapel Hill. He would be in a position to offer you copies of the petitions or direct you to ther of the Union officers.

Who's a Windbag?

Olsen a 'Bellowing Bull', But He's Very Interesting

By Robert Morrison

A promising candidate for the position of My Favorite Professor is Prof. W. A. Olsen (Public Speaking Division of the UNC English department). A former vice-president of the student body called him a "wind-bag" type of public speaker, but I think that he is the "bellowing bull" type. Now he talks more interestingly, it must be quickly added, than either of these names imply.

Prof. Olsen teaches two English courses, Nos. 44 and 56. All persons in need of a good elective—not too difficult, but substantial and instructive—are advised to sign up for Eng. 44 at the next registration, that is, if they are so lucky, for the classes taught by Prof. Olsen are limited to about twenty-five students, and many students must necessarily be turned away.

Sure-Fire Way

Here is a sure-fire way, however, of obtaining a front seat in the course: Drop in on Prof. Olsen (unexpectedly, of course) at his office in Caldwell Hall, introduce yourself, talk about sematics, golf, swimming, journalism, and public speaking, but be sure that the professor does most of the talking—then quietly and quickly steal away, for there undoubtedly will be several other students lined up to have interviews. You will be duly impressed, your name will be remembered, and you will have a valuable friend.

Prof. Olsen has a wonderful wife who understands her Bill and takes good care of him. At the present time she's working on a novel about Negroes in South Carolina, and I predict that it will be a good novel. The Olsens are part of the Chapel Hill literary tribe which includes Paul Green, Betty Smith, Phillips Russell, Noel Houston, James Street, Foster Fitz-Simmons, and numerous occasional characters. Sometime Prof. Olsen will get around to writing a book, but he has plenty of time and is enjoying life too much now.

Won Scholarship

Carolina's professor of public speaking was born in Copenhagen, Denmark, not too many years ago; he has been thoroughly Americanized, however. He won a scholarship to Cornell University and entered the engineering school there—that was a mistake, however, for he never had any love for engineering. For three months, he worked an eleven-hour night shift on a lathe in New Haven, Conn., and held such minor jobs as driving a taxi (until the taxi was burned up by a drunk). A bouncing extrovert, a lover of people and parties, Prof. Olsen was forced into work requiring personal contacts. A short journalism career led him to a course in public speaking.

Courting Days

Prof. Olsen has an interesting story to tell about his roys of courtship: "During a graduate course I met Sahah Duncan of Greenwood, S. C. While waiting in the living room of her home to have the family meet the prospective damyankee husband, I picked up a lone golf club to ease the tension, and took a back swing. A wrecked glass chandelier came down on me just as my new family entered. This is why Dr. Lawson can do nothing with my golf."

CCUN Plans to Assemble, Distribute All Available Information about U. N.

By Lincoln Shiao Hing Kan

Ever since the first announcement was made about the formation of the College Council on the United Nations and the selection of Chapel Hill as North Carolina state headquarters, the questions have been raised, "Is this just another campus organization?" "What is it going to do?" The various programs to be carried out will not be itemized here, but rather an attempt will be made to clarify one of the most important "Whys" for the birth of the C.C.U.N. That "Why" is belief!

We will surely agree on certain basic facts. We have seen that most of the basic entities of society have found it almost impossible to keep pace with the advancing rush of civilization; therefore making it hard for us to find a fresh and concrete basis for existence. We have advanced technologically and scientifically, but doubts persist in our minds and hearts, as to the sort of world we live in, the sort of world we would like to live in, and as to the meaning of life itself.

Ideas and Ideals

We know also that civilization is a combination of ideas and ideals which are found in our institutions and concepts of life, and which provides our lives with a singleness and worth. Without them, our lives tend to be humdrum and ineffectual. World War II was a war of ideas and ideology; a fight between two poles, different not in their scientific and mechanical achievements, but in ideas, ideals, and methods of approach to the problem of living.

It is often said that the important thing is 'doing' and not 'beliveing.' This emphasis in 'doing' is not in itself wrong—the C.C.U.N. intends to do in the largest sense of the word—but we must realize that ideas are the very root of action. One cannot do a good job unless he firmly believes in what he is doing. The greatest pitfall facing us is the lack of a deep faith and the inclination to snatch at false and destructive ideas which beset the world today. Let us view the totalitarian states and their desire to influence the thoughts of their citizens. Normally one world think that, since they control everything, the opinions of the common man do not matter. Yet we see every possible method used to guide and direct the thoughts of the dictated. The "Hitlers" know that when you control the minds of men you also control their future actions, and their relationship to the state and society.

Convictions and Ideals

"This capacity to believe in the most significant and fundamental human faculty, and the most important thing about man is what he believes in the depths of his being. This is the thing that makes him what he is; the thing that organizes him and feeds him; the thing that keeps him going in the face of untoward circumstances. . .Let neutrality, confusion, indifference, or skepticism enter this inner place, and the very springs of life will cease to flow. Men will quit, lose heart, yield, give up, become bitter or cynical, become sunk in bleakness or emptiness, commit suicide, turn to criminality, or retreat into the realm of fantasy."

Now, in college, is the time that we ordinarily shape our beliefs. It is our desire to think for ourselves and make our convictions consistent and fruitful for the good of all. With this thought in mind, the C.C.U.N. was formed. It is our primary duty to gather and disseminate all available information about the United Nations. It is our duty to bring to the attention of all those people who are searching for a belief, the Charter and the motivating forces behind the United Nations. It is the desire of the North Carolina chapter to carry out the objectives in a positive manner. It is the sincere hope of the students now actively engaged in the Council that the partisanships, personal gain and prestige be wholly subordinated to the job of making the United Nations work. God help us if the U.N. fails!

Brock Cites Historical Data to Create Doubt In Minds of Military-Conscription Advocates

By Harold Brock

"U. S. Tradition of Un-Preparedness Must be Broken Soon to Insure Peace" is the title of an article by Bill Buchan which appeared in this paper last Wednesday, June 25. I recognize the limitations in presenting even a partial picture of any one of the complex factors in this all-important issue. Nevertheless, I should like to cite some interesting historical data which must create some little doubt in the minds of the supporters of military conscription and "preparedness."

Block, in his "Future of War," points out that in the past 2,500 years the world has enjoyed peace only one year in twelve. Since 1878 there have been four "peace" years, the last being 1910. Modern military conscription was introduced by Napoleon around 1800, and Europe has been pretty consistent in using it for the prevention of war. Between 1815 and 1929 the world had 252 wars. Professor Quincy Wright, with a number of associates, recently completed a two-volume "Study of War" in which he credits the United States with thirteen wars in 150 years.

Grew from Unpreparedness

Now I am sure that these conflicts grew out of our unpreparedness. In the first one hundred and thirty-five years of the republic, the total expenditure of the Federal treasury was approximately $66,000,000,000 of which approximately $56,000,000,000 was for warfare—roughly, about seventy-eight cents of every dollar. "More than $3,500,000,000 is spent annually by all the nations of the world in war preparations or so-called 'national defense'." ("The Fight for Peace," Devere Allen, 1930.)

Last year, our nation, in the second year of peace after World War II, made this figure look mild. Of an appropriation of approximately 37 billion dollars over 13 billion dollars went directly to the army and navy and another 15 billion dolars was used to meet obigations as a result of war. For a nation which is unprepared either for war or to "scare off any would-be trouble-makers" we seem to be in a rather precarious position. I have been told that we have occupation troops in more than forty nations, that we have the greatest industrial potential in the world, a navy equal to the combined navies of the world, the largest air-force in the world, some 11,000,000 ex-G.I.'s who probably know as much about war as the universal trainees would two years after and, I almost forgot, the atomic bomb. AND we are "unprepared."

Arsenal of Peace

In 1914 all of Europe was unprepared, a veritable arsenal of peace. In 1939, the only European country which did NOT have the great peacemaker, military conscription, was Luxemburg.

Now I know that there are good reasons why the world has had two blood baths in the past generation but if lack of preparedness is one of them, then I wish that someone would explain the meaning of that word. If preparedness is a good peace-maker for "the United States, the protector of the world" then surely it should be a good peace-maker for Russia which is "generally shuddered over," and the conscription advocates, of all people, should be the last in the world to oppose this great force toward world peace when practiced by other nations, including Russia.

This idea that huge armaments will prevent war, is simply too preposterous and absurd to be considered seriously by anyone who is interested in investigating the causes of war. Fear has not been a peace-generating factor in world history. The isolationist policy of withdrawing from the world behind a wall of

King Carl Rates Texas Toughest Test In 1947

CAROLINA'S 1947 EDITION of the Tar Heel football team is going to have probably its roughest time on October 4 next fall. That's the pre-season opinion of King Carl Snavely of the Tar Heels who just returned from Stroudsburg, Pa., where he conducted a gridiron coaching school.

October 4, you see, will find the Carolina Southern conference champs in the little village of Austin, Tex., where it will be their chore to turn back the gridironic finesse of the vaunted Longhorns.

"From what I hear," said Snavely, "those Texans down there have the strongest squad in the history of the school. And they are always tough anyway." The boot-wearing lads from the Lone Star state have back for the fall Bobby Layne, the famous passing fullback who was mentioned on several All-Americans last season. This is in addition to the fact that they are reputedly "loaded" in all positions and ready to roll under a new coach and the famous "T" formation—something they instituted with considerable success in spring practices.

The loss of Ernie Williamson, the giant tackle, to the Washington Redskins has come as quite a blow to the plans for the season which will get underway here in Chapel Hill against Georgia September 27, but it is hoped that several newcomers and a few reserves will be in shape for elevation to possibly fill his spot. Also, the return of Bill "Earthquake" Smith is none too certain.

On the more cheerful side of the picture—and it is cheerful as a whole—August will find the return of Paul Rizzo, the starting blocking back from the 1945 Snavely eleven. And at the beginning of the second summer session Bill Wardle, also a member of that 1945 Carolina team, will be back in school getting prepared for line duty come September.

Old man football seems to know no bounds in his production of surprises around Chapel Hill. We're speaking now about the advance ticket sales for the Carolina home games, the sales which have soared already to unexpected heights.

The entire concrete stands were sold completely out in season tickets alone for the home games, and after the first three days of single ticket sales across the counter in Woollen gym, a sellout for all five home games seems assured.

Carolina's tennis ace, Vic Seixas, deserves plenty of praise for his performance during the past few weeks. The Tar Heel star, who is ranked 16th in the nation, fought his way in superb fashion to the finals of the NCAA championships last week before falling again before the felt-pound of Gardner Larned of William and Mary in five bitter sets.

From Los Angeles Seixas has moved to Salt Lake City, Utah, for the National Clay Court championships. He won his opening round match, but was upset Thursday by Herbie Flam, the Southern California star who was fourth seeded in the NCAA matches. The Carolina ace is expected to continue on the summer tourney circuit and participate in the National Amateur championships at Forest Lawn, N. Y., late in the summer.

While we have the opportunity for recognition and a word of praise, we want to offer our congratulations to Coach Chuck Erickson and his Tar Heel golfers who recently participated in the NCAA playoffs in Ann Arbor, Mich. Early round high scores ruined the Tar Heel chances in the matches, but Harvie Ward, the Tarboro Terror, made it to the quarter finals before getting eliminated.

Varied Events Mark Program

Bait Casting Tilt To Be Highlighted

Intramural officials have completed final plans for the water carnival scheduled for Friday, July 18, in Kessing Memorial pool, and P. A. Lee has issued a list of 17 events to take place in the campus-wide tournament. The carnival, open to both boys and girls, will have competitive events ranging from the 50-yard freestyle for men to one listed as the "honeymoon special."

All students on the campus, with the exception of swimming lettermen, are eligible to enter, and a team score will be kept. Awards will be made to the individual swimmers and the championship team.

One of the main features of the carnival will be a bait casting tournament, which is open to students, faculty and townspeople. All contestants in this event must furnish their own equipment, and items of fishing equipment will be awarded to the first place winner and to the runner-up.

Time trials in the 50-yard freestyle, breaststroke and backstroke will be conducted by the life guard at the pool from 5:45 until 6:30 p. m. each afternoon next week. A list of the other events on the program will be distributed to various points around the campus, and all entries must be in by Monday, July 14.

Semi-finals will be held at the pool at 7:30, Thursday, July 17, and the finals will take place at 7:30, Friday, July 18.

During the program prizes will be awarded to the children who have been participating in the children's swimming class during the summer.

Tandy, Grade-A Gridder, Also Performs In Class

By Irwin Smallwood

"I got a B in Spanish," chirped someone. "You did? I got a C," another voice replied.

About that time a black-haired young gentleman meandered into the "Y" court, and as it was the day grades were given out, one of the court residents instinctively asked him his grades. With a broad grin on his face he handed over the yellow sheet and it read in succession A-A-A. The onlookers gasped, took another look to be sure who it was. But they were right the first time—it was John Hargreaves Tandy, the John Tandy who was a star flanker for the Southern conference champion Tar Heel football team last fall.

JOHN TANDY

Tandy, who is married and comes from Westfield, N. J., entered Carolina as a freshman in 1941, and after a shot at frosh ball, he was an alternating starting end on the 1942 Tar Heel eleven. After that one year of varsity ball, Tandy went into the Navy, where he stayed until shortly before returning to school in March of 1946.

Immediately upon his return to Carolina in the spring of 1946, Tandy went out for Drawling Dale Ranson's track squad, and by the time summer rolled around he had lettered in the sport as he did in high school in the javelin and discus events.

He was a mainstay of the 1946 edition of the Tar Heels, playing heads-up ball throughout the campaign, and his big scoring thrill came in the Carolina cleanup of the visiting Dukes from neighboring Durham. In the 22-7 triumph, he scored a touchdown on a pass from Charlie Justice.

At present, Tandy is looking forward to graduation next December and one more season with the Tar Heels. His daily life at Carolina, which before the war would have been a little unusual but which is nothing unusual today, consists of plenty of family life. You see, Tandy and his wife Elizabeth have a third party—that being little Jessica Marie.

John—"Triple-A" as he is beginning to be known as—takes particular pride in his tomato garden (there were 24 plants until Monday's rain) and is proud of his fishing, which is "I don't like to brag, but I'm just a darn good fisherman." It has been about his No. 1 hobby. Says Tandy, rumored by his associates that he once caught a whale with an anchor in the Navy, but the validity of this is not too well established.

The outstanding Carolina end will receive his bachelor's degree in physical education in December, and after that he plans to remain in Chapel Hill for a master's degree.

Seixas Loses To Flam In Clay Courts Event

Vic Seixas, Carolina's lone entry in the National Clay Court championships being played in Salt Lake City, Utah, has fallen by the wayside in the third round of play.

Seixas, seeded seventh, fell victim to little Herbie Flam, national junior champion, who advanced to the quarter-finals by dropping the Tar Heel, 4-6, 6-3, 8-6.

Locals Defend Senior Crown

Jamerson To Send Eleven-Man Entry

Carolina's summer swimming team will splash into action for the first time this afternoon when it journeys eastward to Tarboro to compete in the Senior Open AAU event being held in the tobacco city.

The Blue Dolphins, who have been working under the direction of Coach Dick Jamerson, will be the defending title holders in the meet, having captured the crown last summer.

Eleven locals are set to swim for the Tar Heel entry in the four event Senior meet which is being held in conjunction with the boy's and girl's division. The four races will consist of 100 and 400 meter freestyle, 100 meter backstroke, and the 100 meter breaststroke.

A break down of the local team finds Mike Morrow doubling in the freestyle events, receiving support from Sidney Gardner and Walter Carnes in the 100, and Sam McCauley, Bob Hutton, and Roland Basecu in the distance race. Breaststrokers Pete Hexner, Ben Ward, Dan Breeden, and Jerry Cook will carry the Carolina colors in that speciality, while Mac McCoy will handle the backstroke chores.

The meet will be the first of several summer competitions in which the Blue Dolpins will take place. Other sessions will be held at High Point and here in Chapel Hill the latter being the Junior AAU championships.

Monogram Meeting

There will be a special meeting of the Monogram club on Monday night at 7:30 at the club house. All monogramers are requested to be on hand for the short session.

AVC to Hear Report On National Convention By Chapter Delegates

A continuation of the report on the recent national convention will head the agenda of the local chapter of the American Veterans committee when the group meets in the Presbyterian church Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Preliminary reports on the national meeting were given at last week's session by delegates Roland Giduz and Winston Broadfoot. Another item to be considered will be a report from the national policy committee, which expects to give complete information regarding the AVC-sponsored bill to increase GI subsistence now being considered by Congress.

According to Acting Chairman Garry Fullerton, the latest information on this bill is that it has been approved by both House and Senate veterans committees, but it will not get to the floor of either body for consideration unless there is more demand by interested persons.

The local policy committee will report on the wages of student employes, laundry workers and fire prevention at Victory Village.

Duke Bar Association Hears Talk by Graham

University President Frank P. Graham spoke on "The Basic Policies of the War Labor Board" at the luncheon meeting of the Duke Bar association on Wednesday. The program was held in the Union Ballroom of West campus.

A war-time member of the National Defense Mediation Board and the National War Labor Board, Dr. Graham discussed the problems of and soultions reached by the War Labor Board.

Faculty members and students of the Duke law school association joined in the discussion with Dr. Graham.

Lineback Is Appointed To Calendar Committee

Kenneth Lineback has been appointed by Student Body President Tom Eller to succeed Jack Booream as student representative to the calendar committee for the coming year.

Booraem was successful in securing a holiday Thanksgiving day for this year for the students and an additional day during the Christmas holidays this year.

PRE-DENTAL SOCIETY

A local chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national pre-dental society, is being formed on campus, and all interested pre-dental students are invited to a "get-together" meeting Monday evening at 7 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge No. 1, Graham Memorial.

The society is composed of undergraduate students, both male and female, who in their preparation for dental school have done work worthy of particular recognition.

Charles Berman may be contacted for further information at the TEP house, phone 4011.

WESLEYANS TO MEET

The Wesley foundation will meet tomorrow night featuring its regular Sunday night program, supper at 6 o'clock, followed by a worship and a discussion program. Jimmy Wallace, speaker for the evening, will discuss "Christianity and Civil Liberties."

This will be the third in a series of discussions on "Christianity and World Community." All students are welcomed at the regular Sunday night programs.

Historic Colonial Inn Attracts Many Visitors

Nearby Hill-boro boasts of a distinctive hostelry whose history reaches back deep in American tradition. The famous old "Occoneechee Inn," (above) which once served as headquarters for Gen. Cornwallis, is still standing, and the picturesque old building is not a far cry from what it was in those days.

Completely outfitted with modern conveniences, it is now known as The Colonial Inn, and as such attracts hundreds of guests who would spend their vacations in a mixed atmosphere of the 18th and 20th centuries. Most of the original charm has been preserved and in fact such hotels, boasting of historic backgrounds, can one find the true reminder of the colonial period and real Southern hospitality.

The Inn boasts also of an excellent cuisine, offering both table d'hote and a la carte service. Tea is served on the terrace under umbrellas from 2:30 to 5:30 in the afternoon, while dinner is served from 6 to 8 p. m. The dining room is closed Mondays.

Japanese Educational System Compared with U. S. Schools

By Bob Sain

Far from desiring ivy-covered walls, most institutes of learning in Japan would settle for wall-covered classrooms. With many colleges and universities bombed out and with classrooms in those remaining schools bitter cold in winter, Japanese students are finding the pursuit of education a grim and business-like procedure. Such was the gist of remarks on Japanese education by Dr. George D. Stoddard, president of the University of Illinois, Thursday afternoon when he talked with reporters in the Carolina Inn.

Dr. Stoddard, tall, balding, and mild-spoken, was top-man in a special War department commission which, a short while ago, completed work in Japan with General MacArthur on Japanese educational problems. Dr. Stoddard's official recommendations have been presented in a War department booklet, "Report of the United States Education Mission to Japan."

Comparison Between Schools

However, he ventured a comparison between United States schools and Japanese universities.

Admitted to institutes of higher education only through careful and demanding examinations, the Japanese student is following a severe and formal path to learning. He is studying in such fields as law, medicine, and the sciences. While there are liberal arts courses, they seem to have little place in the current program.

Fraternities and social clubs have found no place in the Japanese system. True, Dr. Stoddard said, there are political clubs and discussion groups but their function is determinedly educational.

There is no "gay campus life"; alumni of Japanese universities will have no "golden days" to celebrate with drinking songs at class reunions.

No Coeducation

There are no coeds. Coeducation is unknown, except in the early grammar school days. (The Education Missions report, by the way, recommends more education for Japanese women, coeducationally and otherwise.)

The attitude of most Japanese students toward education, Dr. Stoddard said, is one of reverence, of complete acceptance of anything written in a book or spoken by a professor. Their system of learning consists of memorizing by rote whatever is read or said and in answering exam questions by direct quotations. That, too, would be changed, Dr. Stoddard said. Students would be taught that education is a two-way process, that thought must have its origin in the mind of the students.

There is little similarity between colleges and universities of the two nations now, but Dr. Stoddard's work should soon make learning less of an ordeal for the boys of Tokyo and Yokohama.

Mystery Aircraft Whizzing over Durham Recall German Radio Directed Missiles

By Sam Hughes

Rhea L. Adams, UNC student, and his father-in-law, T. A. Broocks of Durham, claim to have witnessed the my;sterious aerial phenomenon which has the entire nation skeptically scanning the sky. At approximately 7:20 p. m. Monday, reported Adams, he and Mr. Broocks saw the controversial "saucer-like disc" which has reportedly been observed in flight over more than 38 of the 48 states.

Adams said that while they played with their dog, Bruce, in the backyard of their home, he heard a distinct "swishing" noise from above. Looking up, he saw a number of objects silhouetted against the clouds off to his left.

Ex-Marine Pilot

An ex-Marine pilot, Adams tells of watching three of the objects about three miles away as they traveled along one behind the other. He estimated that they were 2,500 feet high and shaped similar to the discus used in field sports. He had never seen any aircraft which traveled as fast as the discs. In color, he hesitated to describe them definitely, because of the evening dusk. Watching them for less than half a minute, he saw them disappear over the tree tops, still skimming the cloud bottoms.

No, he did not think that they could be man-bearing aircraft, said Adams, but they immediately made him recall the radio-guided missiles upon which the Germans were experimenting toward the close of World War II.

Other "Saucers"

Associated Press report told, also, of one of the discs being seen near Raleigh the same day. Fred Cloud of Lilesville reported that he and his companion, E. A. Goodman, also of Lilesville, "noticed a peculiar saucer-like object with a bluish center and a yellow ring," as they approached Raleigh in Cloud's private plane.

Another North Carolinian, Albert Riggs of Charlotte, said that he saw three of the flying-saucers in Greensboro.

Meanwhile, there is still no explanation of the mystery by Washington officials.

Di to Sponsor Open Forum At 9 Tonight

A five-man forum on world government, moderated by Jimmy Wallace, is scheduled for a meeting of the Dialectic Literary society in the organization's hall on the third floor of New West tonight at 9 o'clock.

Listed for the forum are Professor Henry Brandis, Jr., and Dr. Frank W. Hanft, both of the Law school; Dr. Joseph W. Straley of the Physics department; Dr. Frang Kottke of the Economics department; and Harold Bock, a special student at the University.

Forum Members

All members of the forum are well-acquainted with the world government movement. Prof. Brandis is president of the town chapter of the United World Federalists; Dr. Hanft has long been interested in the movement; Dr. Straley offers his knowledge of physics and the relation of atomic energy to world government; Dr. Kottke's economic knowledge qualifies him for the forum; and Harold Bock was a leader in the world government movement at Northwestern university.

The forum will be followed by a question and answer period.

Di President Maurice Braswell explains that the society is departing from its traditions as a debating society because world government "is the most vital issue facing the world today."

Interdorm Councils Attempt to Procure Monogram Hall

The members of the Men's and Women's Interdormitory councils have requested that the University administration assign the Monogram club building to dormitory residents for recreational purposes.

At a joint meeting Monday night, the members carried the following resolution:

"Whereas, the dormitory residents do not have adequate recreational facilities, and

"Whereas, the building now used by the Monogram Club is ideally located, and

"Whereas, the construction of another building for recreational purposes would take a long time even if funds were available.

"We now, therefore, request that the University Administration make this building available to the dormitory residents beginning with the Fall Quarter and continuing until other facilities are provided."

Dance Planned

Plans were also formulated at the Monday night meeting for a jointly sponsored dance to be held the second Friday of next summer session on August 1.

Music for the event will be furnished by a local orchestra, and the floor show will be under the direction of Bud Robinson, president of Grimes dormitory.

The purpose of the dance will be to help raise funds for the erection of an interdormitory shack which will be open to all student groups.

Miriam Evans is the president of the women's group and the officials for the men's organization are as follows: Frank Hassell, president; Bill Hight, vice president; Edwin C. Bagby, secretary; Frank A. Holman, treasurer.

Legislature Will Consider Dozen Bills

Nearing the climax of first term business, the Student Legislature will meet at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night in Gerrard hall with a dozen new bills due for the test by vote.

Thursday night's meeting will probably be considerably different from this summer's previous sesions—in its effect as well as in its length. So far this term meetings have been cursory, seldom exceeding half an hour in duration. This has been due to lack of business to hold the lawmakers in Gerrard hall.

This week, however, there will be no shortage of business. At least three controversial bills and a number of by-laws changes are expected to be reported out by committees.

If all these bills are cleared by committees and if the legislature stays in session long enough to vote on the large sheaf, this will probably be the final legislature meeting of the first term for the group. But if some committees have difficulty in agreeing on such bills as the reapportionment proposal, or the bill to require financial reporting by student activities, or the bill to put campus budget construction into a stricter mold, the legislators may then have to return once more before the term ends.

In addition to the new bills, legislators may have to hear a report from Herman Baker's interdorm recreation shack committee which was appointed two weeks ago by Speaker Folger to investigate the possibility of re-modeling the wrestling pavillion near Emerson field as a recreation house for those students living in dorms.

Dean Spruill Urges Early Registration

Students in the General College who have not yet registered for the fall quarter should sign appointment sheets at the information desk in South building as soon as possible for consultation with their advisers from July 15 to 18. C. P. Spruill, Jr., dean of the General College, urged promptness in making these appointments so that registration might move smoothly next week.

Veterans to Entertain Coeds of Carr, Aycock

The University Veterans association will honor the coeds of Carr and Aycock dormitories with an openhouse and dance tonight in the UVA clubhouse from 8:30 till 11 o'clock.

Coeds in the two dormitories are urged to be ready when the escort committee calls at 8:15.

Veterans wishing to join the UVA may obtain membership cards at the door.

Summer Room Deposits Must Be Paid Thursday

Tomorrow is the last day that $10 deposits as room reservations for the second term of summer school will be accepted at the cashier's office in the basement of South building, Housing Director J. E. Wadsworth has announced.

All students who also wish to reserve dormitory rooms for next fall should make an additional $6 deposit at the cashier's office as soon as possible. Those who hold rooms this summer are reminded that unless this deposit is made, they have no assurance of keeping their present space next September.

UVA Obtains Aid for Campus Veterans With Subsistence Checks Still Missing

Love interest in the Playmaker production "The Late Christopher Bean" is aptly provided by Bootsie Stevenson (left), as Susan Haggett, and James Waddington as Warren Creamer. The comedy opens at the Playmaker theatre Thursday night at 8:30 o'clock for a two-day run.

Room Deposits, Eating Tickets To Be Advanced

By Bill Lamkin

Steps have been taken by the University Veterans association in cooperation with the University administration to relieve veterans on campus who have not received last month's subsistence checks.

When still no checks showed up in yesterday's mail, UVA President Hugh Wells and Veterans Adviser F. Carlyle Shepard formulated a plan whereby veterans who are short on cash won't have to go hungry, and they also may be assured of a place to room during the next summer session.

Room Reservation

The plan as announced by Wells would dispense with the required room deposit for the second session, in the case of veterans who have failed to receive their subsistence pay. Those veterans may reserve dormitory rooms by reporting to the University Housing office, 207 South building, no later than tomorrow, last scheduled day for reservations. They must bring their C-number in order to take advantage of this plan. The veteran must pay a $10 room deposit when he gets his check.

The UVA was able to secure this arrangement through a conference with J. E. Wadsworth, housing officer, and T. H. Evans, University cashier. If the veteran fails to make his deposit or reserve his room under this plan, his room will be reassigned, the housing office said.

Meal Tickets

Meal tickets have been drawn by the UVA from Lenoir dining hall and are available to veterans as a loan in the office of Mr. Shepard, 208 South building. Wells pointed out that these meal tickets will be issued on a loan basis, and the veteran will be expected to repay the loan as soon as his check arrives.

Extensive inquiries were begun last Friday when subsistence checks failed to show up. Shepard and J. A. Williams, University legal advisor, were unable to obtain a satisfactory explanation of the delay from Veterans administration officials in Winston-Salem or Richmond. However, VA officials were of the opinion that the holdup was due to a deficiency of appropriations by the federal government, possibly caused by the ending of the budget fiscal year on June 30, Shepard said.

Playmakers Comedy to Open Thursday for Two-Day Run

Tickets are now on sale for The Carolina Playmakers' first show this summer, "The Late Christopher Bean," a comedy by Pulitzer prize-winner, Sidney Howard. The play will open tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the Playmakers theatre, and a second performance will be given Friday evening.

All seats in this theatre are reserved. Tickets are available at $1 (including tax) and may be purchased, prior to the opening of the theatre box-office, at Swain hall or at the down-town ticket office in Ledbetter-Pickard's stationery store.

A cast of nine experienced student-actors have been in rehearsal for the past three weeks under the direction of John W. Parker, who recently staged "Macbeth" here in the Forest theatre. Norman Mattis, visiting professor of speech from Amherst, is playing "Dr. Haggett," the role created on the screen by Lionel Barrymore. The famous "Abby" (Marie Dressler in the screen production) is played by Marion Miller of Aberdeen, Maryland. Others in the cast include Bootsie Stevenson, Catherine Covington, Henriette Neal, A. E. Westover, III, William Hardy, Herbert Mork, and James Waddington.

Theatre-goers who are concerned with the hot weather will be interested in knowing that the Playmakers have recently installed three large, high-powered electric fans.

Language Exams Set

Examinations for a reading knowledge of French and Spanish for students in the School of Commerce or those planning to enter the School of Commerce will be held Friday, July 18, at 2 o'clock. French examinations will be given in Murphey 215; Spanish in Murphey 207.

CCUN Meets Tonight In Graham Memorial

An important meeting of the Collegiate Council on the United Nations will be held tonight at 8:30 in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial. The purpose of this meeting is to enlist the aid and support of the campus organizations and groups in a campaign to get the whole campus squarely behind the CCUN.

Chairman Lincoln Kan urges all persons interested in actively supporting and aiding in the CCUN drive to be present. The program outlined by the CCUN is enormous in its scope, and willing, capable workers are badly needed to insure its success, according to Kan.

The meeting will be informal in character, and suggestions from all present will be welcomed and considered. Dr. Frank Graham will attend in an advisory capacity. It is hoped that the leaders of as many campus organizations as possible will attend in order to acquaint themselves with the CCUN and its aims, and in turn, to enlist the support of their respective groups in the drive, Kan said.

Through this meeting the CCUN hopes to convince the campus of the vital importance of its projected program, and the responsibility of every student in the work of keeping the U.N. alive, he said.

VESPER SERVICE

Dr. Bertram Yontz, Lutheran minister of Chapel Hill, will be guest speaker on the Vesper program tonight.

Gardner Is Named New S and F Head

Sound and Fury, campus musical comedy clan, has elected Douglas Gardner as its new president to speed preparations for the combination minstrel-vaudeville show to be presented July 17 and 18.

Other new officers included Grey Adams, secretary-treasurer; Pete Strader, sets and costume designer; Frank Matthews, music director; Grey Adams, dance supervisor; and Dolly Donaldson, choreographer. The veteran S&F director is Ben Kistler.

"Weep No More"

The forthcoming musical comedy opening the S&F schedule for the summer is to be entitled "Weep No More". It will feature fresh campus talent and songs of the past and present arranged by a fifteen-piece pit orchestra organized especially for this show. Comedy to range from Chaucer to end-men is indictive of a variety show well worth seeing.

This show is being given especially to acquaint students enrolled at the University this term for the first time with S&F's place in campus activities. All interested newcomers with theatrical talent are invited to apply now for S&F membership.

Green's 'Common Glory' Opens Soon

Paul Green has done it again. To be more explicit, the Pulitzer prize-winning author of North Carolina's classic "The Lost Colony" has written another drama dealing with the early days of American colonization—entitled "The Common Glory"—and this time the scene is laid in Virginia.

Set to open July 17 and run through September 14, "The Common Glory" is sponsored by the Jamestown corporation in cooperation with the Virginia Conservation commission. Serving as honorary head of the sponsoring group is Virginia Governor William M. Tuck. Former-Governor Colgate W. Darden, newly-elected president of the University of Virginia, will serve as president of the group.

An amphitheatre to seat 2,600 has been built on Matoka lake, beside the Jamestown road, just a short distance from colonial Williamsburg. Built in a 12-acre wooded area beside the lake, the amphitheatre has a 62-foot wide stage flanked by scenery docks and dressing rooms for the cast.

Author Green's home state is well represented as plans for formal opening are rapidly progressing. Not only is the author a North Carolinian, but also several members of the production staff were trained at the University of North Carolina. Roger Boyle, associate director, received his Master's degree in drama at the University; Robert Dale Martin, narrator, received both his B.A. and M.A. at the University and taught radio production classes there. Martin also served as radio announcer and production man with stations WRAL and WPTF in Raleigh. Organist for the drama is Johnny O'Steen, University student, who was the first to hold the Kay Kyser award in music in 1941.

PAUL GREEN

The Chapel Hill author made the following statement regarding the production: "What 'The Lost Colony' shows as getting started, namely a settlement and a creed of government in the New World, 'The Common Cause' will show as actually coming to fulfillment in democracy. I hope that all who see this Virginia historical drama will be encouraged to believe more and more in the great American drama, which is not the vision of one nation as opposed to another nation or one people precedent over anther people, but a vision of the common glory, common to all men—freedom, justice and a righteous society of men as brothers all over the world."

Keep Your Bonds Dry

A possible presidential veto that has not fazed the Republican Congress in the least is the bill making it legal for a veteran to cash in his terminal leave bond after September 1. The roll-call vote that summoned the full strength of the House down to the last man, will soon go before the Senate, and it is certain to pass.

But why shouldn't the bill pass? The only group that has had one word to say against it was the Treasury, and it has not worked against the issue. It simply stated that it will cause inflation.

There are many things in favor of the measure that would give the GI's an opportunity to convert their bonds into cash. The money is rightfully theirs and it should be available for their use when they need it. The Army Times Vet-Letter discloses the story of the "sharp operators" who are on the job to convert the veteran's bond into ready cash. The bond owner gets 50 per cent of the face value of the bond in cash now. When the bond owner signs the bond upon maturity, he receives an additional 25 per cent. Rackets like this will be smashed by the new bill—and veterans will be able to get ready cash in case of emergency for the paper that today is not worth a cent.

But bond owners should not liquidate their bonds just because they have the opportunity. The bonds should be kept until they mature, or until the owner is in dire need of additional funds. Remember, they are drawing two and one-half percent interest per annum, and are helping the owner as well as combating inflation.

Destructive Pastime

Vandalism has again become a favorite pastime in Chapel Hill. Dr. Lawson, who mapped out the local golf course and has supervised its activities since its beginning, reports in a letter elsewhere on this page an account of property destruction at the privately-owned country club.

In willing the property to the club Dr. Coker made the request that no hunting, fishing or nature destruction be allowed on the property. The clause was also inserted in the deed.

Since the golf course was constructed around 18 years ago there has been continuous trespassing upon it. Students have persisted in holding parties, and the like, on the greens and on the porch of the clubhouse at night. During the past year it has grown to such a degree that wives of the club members have hesitated and even refused to play on the course because of the debris that is left on the greens, marking the spot of the activities of the night before.

But until the fourth of July there had been no vandalism. The club property will be strictly policed from now on to prevent such future displays of ungentlemanly conduct. Let us hope that patrolling of the property will not have to be a permanent feature of the club and that vandalism and deliberate trespassing and devastation of private property will cease.

WRITE AWAY

Vandalism

The country club and its golf course is owned and conducted by a distinct organization. Its entire property, club house and golf course, has clearly, visable, posted placards advising that trespassers, hunters, fishers etc. will be prosecuted. Students have been using the property as a rendezvous for petting and drinking parties—almost daily the caretaker must visit and clean waste matter from the "greens". It has become a disgusting nuisance, and recently vandalism occured. The night of the 4th of July, a party parked around the little storage house at No. 1 tee—window panes were smashed, benches wrecked, a drink stand overturned, four crates of empty bottles were broken and thrown over the entire No. 1 fairway.

This is not the first time destruction of private property on private land has occurred. These occasions, and the evidence at hand, points clearly to some vicious, unscrupulous, student drinking party which may result in the club's elimination of student participation.

Plans are to have the property (entire acreage) patrolled nightly. The officer with full legal power may arrest any trespassers after 8 o'clock on the property and the officers of the club, with full agreement and promise of the Dean of Students, will prosecute any and all to the full extent of the law in the Chapel Hill court.

"Remember the property is posted land."

The officers of the golf club have offered the students (those who play golf, not beginners) the privilege of playing the course. However, these are days when the course is crowded with members and students, consequently many are turned away and not permitted to play on such days. In the future, if the practice is continued of allowing students to play, they MUST do as the members of the club and arrange themselves in foursomes (not including a beginner) before they appear at the course. They must respect the greens and fairways, and replace divots. Any violator will be excluded from the privilege of playing the country club course.

Dr. Robert B. Lawson
Chairman Club Directors.

Carried Away

Dear Sir:

Could it not be possible that Harold Brock in discussing the connection between preparedness and wars was carried away by his thesis and erred in too freely applying generalizations to a specific case? This is a failing so common that one need not be ashamed too much if caught in it.

In order to try to bring order out of a riot of statistics gone wild, it may suffice to mention a few simple facts. In the first place, we are considering the question of preparedness of one nation only, the United States, which is no more to be grouped, either geographically or ideologically, with nations of the Eastern Hemisphere than is a policeman to be identified with a gang of quarreling boys. In the second place, one marvels at the facility with which the lack of preparedness of the United States prior to the two World Wars is passed over, this which may be the crux of the while question. Finally, this is perhaps the first time that anyone suggested that isolationism on the part of the United States be concommittant with arming rather than disarming. Historical precedent seems again disregarded when convenient.

There is undoubtedly some truth in what Harold Brock says, but let's have it more calmly and coolly and less hysterically.

Your truly,
FREDERICK MILLS

The Plebian Gentry

Worker's 'Birth of Thought' Credited to GOP Activities

By Earl Heffner

Whatever else the wild wanderings of the Republicans are creating, the activities of the paunch politicians at least are giving birth to thought—although sometimes by Caesarean section—to some of the nation's more plebian gentry. Several night ago, I was unfortunate enough to ride in one of the Rockefeller's Rolls (We roll your pocketbook), Riders, more commonly known as the careening cabs.

While I bounced along with the driver in his over-sized jeep, two night owls, back seat politicians, were discussing the Taft-Hartley labor miscarriage. Their conversation went something like this:

Mike: "You know, Jim, it's gettin' to whare a man's 'fraid to quit his job without breaking one of those damn laws."

Jim: "Yea, I know. Those crooked devils we have in Congress want to turn this country over to the Russians."

Mike: "Maybe they aren't so bad at heart. It's just that they drink that damn vodka that Molotoff gives 'em so they won't know when he's pulling he wool over their eyes."

Jim: "Damned if 'in it doan look thata way. Why look'it that bill that Taft got passed. Even Truman couldn't stop the — — — — from making it a law."

Mike: "Yea, but you just wait. Our labor men in Washington ain't agonna stand for stuff like that. I was reading just the other day where Sidney Hillman of the A. F. of L. and Green of the C. I. O. doan like the bill. They'll tell Taft a thing or two and then we workers will show Congress how America should be run."

At first glance, this appears to be a profane, shameful conversation. Profane it is. Shameful? Yes, to an extent.

Sure, the character didn't know that Hillman has been dead lo these many years. But he probably never thought much about anything until the present Congress began its Republican-sponsored program. History will record the worth of this program.

But the program itself marks a new trend, a trend of thinking by the working man. That in itself is a major accomplishment. For a thinking nation never yet has fallen to the wiles of subversive peoples whether these be Fascists or Communists.

Maybe their thinking wasn't straight. And maybe their facts were completely in error. But never was a baby born talking save Gargantua who left from his mother shouting, "Drink! Drink! Drink!" And maybe he heard of Jeff's.

Cement-Mixer World

Outside World Proves Hard As Poet Deserts Arboretum

By Bob Sain

"Athelstan," I asked, "where were you last week? We missed your goatcry; the arboretum was empty without your satyr-sounds to startle young lovers on their grassy couches." My friend, the poet Athelstan Boniface, was democratically sipping coffee with me at the Y. He stroked his long chin, on which a goatee was a-growing.

Looks at World

"I looked at the world last week. I grew tired of the village and ventured into the cement-mixer fury of the industrial world."

"And you found . . ." I prompted.

"I found many things. I found people with their forearms tooth-gnawed to the elbow—the result of fingernail-biting about the prospects of a war. I found one man certain that the flying discs were little reconnaisance planes with Russians in them. I found a housewife saying, 'I don't worry about food prices; I've quit eating,' and I found one young woman who said, 'I like Chapel Hill even if it is a hot-bed of Communism.' Needless to say, I inquired as to how she had ever decided that the village was a pint-sized Moscow. 'Well, that's what the papers say,' she answered me, and I told her forthwith not ever to believe what the papers said."

No Parlor Pinks

Athelstan shook his head doubiously, "I have found many things in this sequestered hamlet. I have found reactionaries and Republicans; I have found Jew-baiters and Negro-haters; I have found would-be liberals who regard Westbrook Pegler as a second Jehovah; I have found simple, happy souls content to gaze at the coeds without regard for their political leanings; but so help me Thomas Wolfe, I have never seen one single communist, nay, not even a parlor pink! If there is communism in Chapel Hill, it has already gone underground," he concluded.

Foul Situation

Ath turned his cup up and drained the last of the muddy fluid. "It's a foul situation," he said, "and I am growing tired of it. I do not care whether a man is a Communist or a Jehovah Witness; I do not care whether he is a fundamentalist or an existentialist; I do not care what he is. It is none of my business."

I tactfully changed the subject. "Have you written any more poetry, Athelstan?"

"Yes," he said, "I have been watching the moon. Last night the moon was like a great glowing wound in the phosphorous body of night . . ."

And he continued in that vein until he saw a girl he know, whom he followed out.

Carolina Spirit Becoming Ghost Due to Formality, Haste, Neglect

By Russell G. Baldwin

Greatness is a combination of simple things. The University of North Carolina is great because it contains enough of those simple things vital to greatness. I cower before the thought of naming the many things which contribute to Carolina's greatness. It is beyond the ability of any man to define greatness, and I am not one to attempt the impossible. One of the pillars of greatness of a university, or of any organization, is "esprit de corps"—the spirit of the group. Beyond that, I will make no dogmatic assertions.

Dead Spirit

The famed Carolina spirit is becoming a ghost. It is dying because of smugness, formality and haste. It is dying because those who must foster it are overly concerned with more tangible things. Students who knew pre-war Carolina sigh wistfully and get that far-away look in their eyes; and, at times, a tear finds its way into the stream of saddened emotions. That magical air of friendliness that pervaded the pre-war Carolina campus is no more. It fell before the onslaught of war and there it lies today, trampled in the dust of apathy.

Several Factors

School spirit is composed of several factors; but chief among them is the relationship which exists among its students. The traditional spirit at Carolina has been one of friendliness and informality; a common pervading spirit of enthusiasm, devotion, and jealous regard for the honor of the group. That spirit, great and essential as it is, has been deserted and left to die.

When I was a member of the A.S.T.P. (Army Specialized Training Program), I had the good fortune of being assigned to Auburn, Ala. The campus with its stately buildings had a forbidding look and I quite naturally felt ill at ease. But not for long. Even before the college paper, The Plainsman, blared forth with, "Make those A.S.T.'s speak" and numerous other slogans, we were captured by the friendly atmosphere, the warmth of fellowship.

Rarely do two students on this campus speak unless they know each other. That is a mistake. The exchange of greetings is the recognition of a common bond of kinship, a vicarious sharing of the joys and sorrows of others, an expression of friendship.

Victory Village Grows Up: Council Tackles Problems

By Dan Sapp

Victory Village has suddenly become an honest to gosh village and finds itself faced with honest to gosh problems. The village council wrestled with some of these problems in its regular meeting Monday night.

Dick Balance, who is chairman of the fire-fighting committee, reported that progress is being made, though slowly, toward getting a chemical fire extinguisher for each apartment in the village. The present equipment is something less than adequate and the need is great.

* * *

Lamar Ager reporting for the safety committee brought word that the roads are actually going to be paved after all. Ager reported that top soil is being laid on the roads and that paving will begin the first of next week. The safety committee has also been at work on speeding. Ager told the council that road signs giving the speed limits had been ordered and are expected soon. He expressed the opinion that thre is a real need for someone to enforce the 15 and 10 miles per hour speed limits which have been agreed upon for the village area. Bill Bragaw, chairman of the council, asked that all council members and everyone living in Victory Village observe these speed limits until they can be enforced by law. He said that only through cooperation of the entire population could these rules be enforced.

* * *

Aside from matters weighty and governments, there are problems in our village which cannot be legislated. There is a feeling in certain quarters that the children of the recently arrived Jackson Circle citizens cry louder and longer than do those of the "Old Guard." This may be partially due to the fact that the offending children have been suppressed for so long by Chapel Hill landladies. Perhaps as soon as they realize that they may cry whenever they wish without fear of eviction they will lose interest, and peace will be restored.

* * *

From another quarter comes the story of an irate father who wishes to pass a law limiting the amount of noise and length of parties. It may be difficult to ascertain just how loud a loud party can be but maybe by means of a seismograph this can be done.

* * *

The creative urge is running rampant among the newly arrived. Anywhere you may see an astonished victorian sofa getting a coat of orange paint or having its legs removed.

* * *

One couple has gone to the bathroom for inspiration. What was once a very necessary article of bathroom furniture has been converted into a dressing table bench with hooks around the inside for shoes.

* * *

This column is dedicated to Carolina's forgotten women, the student wives. If you have anything of interest which you want published, scandalous or otherwise as long as it isn't libelous, come by apartment 196-A, Jackson Circle or the D.T.H. office.

Smiling Len . . .

Szafaryn Grid Standout, Campus Personality Alike

By Leon Mitchell

You would never suspect it if you were to encounter Lanky Len Szafaryn's friendly smile on the campus, but the Ambridge, Penn., native is one of the best tackles the Southern conference has had in several years—and the prospects of his exceeding his performances during the past two season's this fall are nothing but the best.

LEN SZAFARYN

He first broke into the starting lineup as a member of Coach Carl Snavely's 1945 Tar Heel eleven, and on last season's Southern conference champion Carolina team, Szafaryn was one of the most valuable men in in the stalwart forward wall that went a long way toward carrying the Tar Heels into the Sugar Bowl classic.

Picked on the 1946 All-State squad, Szafaryn is slated to be the regular right tackle for the Tar Heels when hostilities begin against Georgia September 27 here in Kenan stadium. He has shown steady improvement ever since his freshman year, and he may easily be the outstanding Carolina lineman during the next campaign.

Besides playing football, he has shown a great deal of interest in Campus functions and has been recently elected as president of the Monogram club. He has also been selected as a member of the Grail, one of the school's highest honorary societies. While being initiated into the Grail, Len was made to drive a horse and buggy down one of the main streets of the campus, and while doing this the horse got out of control and wasn't halted until he had went through every conceivable space. He hasn't been near a horse since!

Although not claiming to be a skilled ferformer, Len plays a lot of tennis, and the rest of his leasure time is spent between golf and swimming. He likes to keep active for he realizes the competition for next season of play will be plenty tough and there will be the need for every player to be in the best possible shape.

One of Len's greatest plays came in the Navy encounter of last season when he had the rare thrill of intercepting a pass. The entire past season saw him ever alert and consistently in the ball game. He rushes fast and hits hard, and is a hard man to keep out of the opponents back field.

Len is one of the few single men on the Tar Heel squad, and if female readers are interested he can be found in Lenoir dining hall most every morning at 9 o'clock. Of course you may run into some stiff competition in way of a certain blond, but what can one gain without trying?

Len Szafaryn is a natural to the game of football. He is good natured in character and a credit to the game.

UNC CLASS RINGS

Lee H. Blackwell, representative of Balfour company, will be in the Y today from 9 to 1 and 2 to 4 to take orders for University of North Carolina class rings. The sales are sponsored by the Order of the Grail.

Simmons to Go Overseas with A.A.U. Stars

Floyd "Chunk" Simmons, Carolina's talented hurdler, has been selected to join the National AAU track team which will tour Central and Southern Europe in competition with the best European athletes this summer. The team will leave New York by plane on July 17 for the tour.

Simmons, one of nine stars placed on the Southern European squad, gained his position with a brilliant performance last week in the National AAU meet in Lincoln, Neb.

The Carolina speedster added to his national fame by finishing a close second to Harrison Dilliard, the Baldwin-Wallace hurdler who dashed across the finish line in the time of 14 seconds flat. The time of this event is one tenth of a second faster than the recognized Olympic mark. Chunk also took first place in the National Junior 110-meter hurdles with a mark of 14.3, a tenth of a second short of a meet record.

He will run the hurdles, dashes and relays in Europe. The popular trackster will also take part in the National Decathlon at Bloomfield, N. J., before leaving the states. His chief rival in that event will be a teammate on the overseas excursion, defending decathlon champ Irving Mondschien of N.Y.U.

Another star of the Carolina track squad, Jack Moody, participated in the high jump in the AAU meet last week under the colors of the Warinanco A. C. of Elizabeth, N. J. Moody finished in a tie for third place in the high jump with four others with a jump of 6 feet 4⅝ inches. The effort was nearly three inches below his record leap of 6 feet 7½ inches in the New Jersey AAU meet recently.

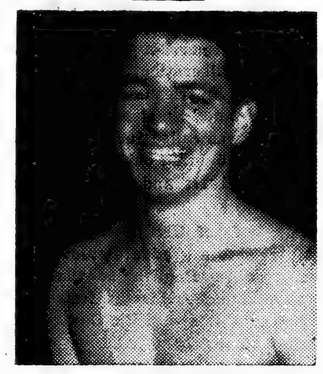
Crone, Sper Win Positions On All-American Tank Team

Ed "Buddy" Crone and Norman Sper, standout divers for the Blue Dolphins this past season, won honorable mention berths on the 1947 All-American swimming team, selected recently by college swimming coaches throughout the nation.



Sper was placed on the one-meter and three-meter diving group, while Crone, National Junior AAU swan champ, was named to the high board squad. Crone is currently swimming director of the Old Town Country Club in Winston-Salem.

Carolina's powerful swimming aggregation swept to victory in the Senior Men's Division of the Open AAU meet at Tarboro last Saturday by amassing 47 points in outclassing a strong field of opposition.

The summer tank crew, under the supervision of Ben Ward, captured first place in all events. Mike Morrow won the 100-freestyle with an impressive time of 55.3. Mac McCoy edged out Bill Ward of Tarboro in the 100-backstroke. The winning time was 1:10.

Ben Ward grabbed first place in the breast stroke event by swimming the 100-yard distance in 1:07. Sam MacCauley, stalwart freestyle performer, copped the 220-free race in 2:30. Other Carolina swimmers making good performances included Dan Breedon, Pete Hexner, Jerry Cook and Ronald Besthen.

The next meet for the local Dolphins will be here on July 19, at which time the National Junior AAU championships will be staged. Coach Dick Jamerson extends an invitation to all potential swimmers to come out for the team. The squad drills in the Bowman Gray Memorial pool daily.

Seixas Goes To Finals In Clay Court Doubles

Carolina's Vic Sixas continued his march through national tennis competition Sunday when he and Seymour Greenberg dropped the men's doubles championship of the National Clay Court tournament to Ted Schroeder and Jack Tuero.

Seixas and Greenberg had a 4-2 lead in the matches before dropping the next four games in a row and the subsequent crown. From Salt Lake City, wher the clay court championships were held, Seixas will go to Denver, Col., for another stop on the summer circuit.

Folk Songs by Ligoa Hoskins On Program for French House

Ligoa Duncan Hoskins, born and raised in Paris, and well known to thousands of American troops for her concerts after the liberation of the French capital, will present a vocal concert Friday night at the French house on Rosemary Street.

The highlight of this week's program at the French House, Madame Hoskin's concert will trace the transformation of the French song, from the songs of the provinces to the creole songs of the Louisiana colony back to the Parisian songs of today with perhaps, as she puts it, "a touch of the Americal ballard."

Other Entertainers

Included on the program will be the folk songs, Bercepse Breaonne, Corbleu Marion, and En Revenant de Noces; French creole songs, Pauv' Petit Mam'zelle Zizi, Gue Gue Solingaie; and the popular French ballads, Nuages, and Jardin du Mois de Mai as popularized by Charles Trent. Madame Hoskins will be accompained by Earl Brockman.

Madame Hoskins is the daughter of the celebrated dancer Raymond Duncan and a niece of Isadora Duncan. Having grown up in the artistic atmosphere of her father's arts and crafts school on the Left Bank of the Seine, she chose singing as her form of artistic expression.

"It was the Negro spirituals which inspired me first to sing music which comes from the deep heart of a people. This led me into the study of folk music of many peoples."

"During the German occupation of France," she recalls, "we had concerts of American music under the very noses of the Germans. It was in this way that I learned many of the more recent American popular songs."

After the liberation, Madame Hoskins sang American songs at the Olymphia and Empire theatres in Paris and was called for appearances before such fighting outfits as the 9th Air Force, 101st and 82nd Airborne divisions.

Wife of UNC Student

Married to a graduate student and instructor in English at the University, Madame Hoskins feels quite at home in Chapel Hill. One of her biggest thrills since coming to this country was a concert she gave with her father last March at Town Hall in New York.

An additional highlight of this week's program at the French House was a talk given last night by Walter Creech of the French department who spoke on his experiences in France during the war.

Next week at the French House will be marked by the annual celebration of Bastille Day on Monday with a banquet at the Carolina Inn. A representative of the French Embassy in Washington is expected to attend. On Wednesday night in Graham Memorial, members of the French House will present a French farce, L'Anglais Tel Qu' On Le Parle.

WORLD FEDERALISTS MEETING

The student chapter of United World Federalists will meet Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Grail room, Graham Memorial. Everyone is invited to attend and take part in the activities of the group.

The world government movement is reaching new heights of popularity now that the inadequacies of the U.N. have been so notably demonstrated, proponents feel. Those who believe that world government is the path to peace may join with those who are already working actively to that end.

State Highway School For Novice Patrolmen Launched by Institute

One hundred and nineteen novice state highway patrolmen arrived on the University campus last Monday to begin a six-weeks course in highway patrol duty under the direction of the Institute of Government. The new patrol candidates are being housed in the Institute's barracks to the east of Woollen gym.

The future law enforcement officers will take classroom and practical work in the handling of automobiles, self-defense measures, and state highway laws during their stay here. The textbooks for the courses were prepared by the Institute and classes are being taught by various patrol officers, FBI agents, and Institute staff members.

Terry Sanford, assistant to Albert Coates at the Institute, is working with Col. H. J. Hatcher, state commanding officer of the patrol, and Capt. Lester Jones, administration officer, in directing the school, the second of its kind given at the University.

Katz Speaks Today At CIO Conference

Isadore Katz, general counsel and head of the legal department of the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, will be one of the principal speakers at a training conference of the organization which opens today at the University and continues through Friday.

Katz will address approximately 20 local union business agents and joint board directors from Virginia and North Carolina on the interpretation of federal and state labor legislation recently passed.

Next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock he will also speak at the opening session of a week's program for officers, stewards and leaders from local unions in this state, along with a few from other southern states. His topic will be "The Outlook for Labor in Light of Labor Legislation Recently Passed." He will conduct a similar session on Wednesday, July 14.

These sessions are two of a series of similar conferences being held in educational institutions in various sections of the country.

Mr. Katz, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law School, taught philosophy in that institution for seven years.

Durham Bank Official Speaks Here Thursday

H. A. Rinehart, vice president of the Fidelity Bank of Durham, will speak on "Job Possibilities in the Field of Banking" tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Faculty club room of the Carolina Inn.

Mr. Rinehart's appearance is being sponsored by the University chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, professional commerce fraternity, and the public is invited to attend.

CAROLINA SPIRIT

What You're Missing

You don't know what you're missing by not speaking to your fellow students. So I'll tell you. You're missing one of those little pleasantries which make a day pleasant and memorable. You're missing a simple greeting, a friendly smile that will add zest to your spirit and fortify you against disappointment and the many unsmoothed edges of life.

If you're afraid the greeting won't be returned, just remember that it's a two-to-one bet the other person is thinking the same of you. Forget about it! Sure, you'll run into a snob now and then, but you're not going to let that make a snob of you, are you? At Auburn it was, "Make those A.S.T.'s speak." At Carolina we can use, "Make those teachers speak," or "Make those furriners (better known as Yankees) speak." It isn't important that we have a slogan but it is important that we regain the good old Carolina spirit. Say "hello" or "howdy" or what you will, but smile and . . . SPEAK!

State Peace Speech Program Will Be Continued Next Year

The first North Carolina World Peace Speaking Program, recently concluded, proved such a great success that it will be continued during the coming scholastic year.

This decision was reached at a meting at the University this weekend at which reports were made by Oscar K. Merritt, Mount Airy businessman, through whose generosity and initiative the program was launched a year ago; Harry F. Comer of the University Extension division, who directed the program; E. Ralk Rankin of the Extension division, and other members of the committee.

The report indicated that approximately 125,000 North Carolina citizens heard peace programs discussed as the result of the contests in 203 North Carolina high schools. A total of 5,00 to 6,000 boys and girls took part. The winners were awarded gold medals and in some instances additional awards.

Directed by the University Extension division, 101 of the programs were sponsored by bar associations in 29 counties, 21 were sponsored by local school activity funds, while many others were held under the auspices of PTA associations, women's clubs, civic clubs, and other groups.

In response to queries, only one school reported it did not care to conduct another program the coming year, Mr. Comer reported.

The program has been heartily endorsed by Governor R. Gregg Cherry and State Superintendent Clyde Erwin. The University Extension division supervised the program and served as a clearing house for preparing and distributing background material and performing other functions in connection with the contest.

Primary objects of the program is "to stimulate interest in world peace among the masses of our people, upon whose collective conviction eventual world peace must hinge."

General theme of the program this coming year will be "How can the United Nations be strengthened for world peace."

Those atending the committee meeting here, in addition to Merritt, and Rankin, were A. C. McIntosh, Henry P. Brandis, R. W. Madry, C. B. Robson, H. W. Straley, Walter Spearman, and Earl Wynn.

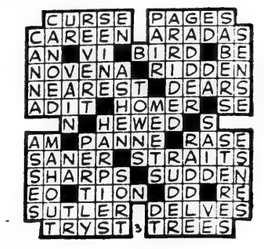
House Votes to Cash Terminal Leave Bonds

GI terminal leave bonds are one step nearer being negotiable as a result of the unanimous approval by the House Monday of the bill before Congress which would permit 9,000,000 holders to cash the bonds after Sept. 1.

By a vote of 386 to 0, the House passed the legislation on to the Senate in the face of a possible presidential veto. The Treasury department has continuously opposed the bill on the grounds that cashing of the bonds would have an inflationary effect.

Representative Overton Brooks, Democrat of Louisiana, estimated the legislation will save the federal government $200,000,000, or a rate of $60,000,000 annually, in interest.

Under previous legislation granting former enlisted personnel the terminal pay, it was stipulated that the pay would be in the form of bonds, which could not be cashed until five years had lapsed.



The estimated value of the outstanding bonds is $1,800,000,000, and the House Armed Services committee expects about $1,000,000,000 to be cashed.

Bankers Convene Here For Six-Day Program

Bankers from all sections of North and South Carolina, some 200 of them, began Monday morning at the University an intensive six-day study program, designed to prepare them better for the many problems of the postwar period.

Indications were that attendance at the 11th annual Carolinas Bankers conference will set a new record, according to advance registrations with Conference Chairman L. D. Brooks, Charlotte, and Treasurer Fred W. Greene, Raleigh.

Special attention will be given to credit and investment problems and the importance of a proper approach to public relations, as well as internal bank relations.

Fall Quarter Registration To Be Started Next Week

General College Students Now Signing Appointment Sheets in South Building

By Raney Stanford

All students now in school who plan to return for the coming fall quarter, may preregister for courses next week. General College students should sign appointment sheets at the information desk in South building now, for registration July 15-18. All others will register July 16-18.

Students not now scheduled to attend the second term of summer school but who wish to enroll, may do so through the regular channels of their faculty advisors, deans, and Memorial hall on July 23.

Changing Courses

ond term who wishes to change any course should do so through the regular drop-and-add procedure referred to above; seeing their advisors between now and July 22, or from July 24 to 26.

The law school and the school of public health will announce the special registration details for signing with these schools to their own students.

Central records office heads estimate that many students only enrolled for one session, will decide to stay for the second, and therefore there will be very little difference between the two enrollment totals.

Carolina Band To Give Concert Thursday Evening

Director Earl Slocum of the University band will present his summer school musicians in their first concert of the season next Thursday evening, when the Tar Heel music-makers give a "pop" performance under the Davie poplar on the campus at 6:45 o'clock.

It will officially terminate band activity for the first summer session, and the first concert will include such selections as "The Fortune-Teller" by Victor Herbert, "Manhattan Serenade," and several traditional marches

Following the concert, band activity will be discontinued until next session, when Assistant Director Hubert Henderson will be in charge in the absence of Slocum.

Di Senate Stages Open Forum Here

More than 50 persons attended the open forum on world government held by the Dialectic senate Wednesday night. Di President Maurice Braswell dispensed with the regular order of business so that the forum could get under way.

The forum consisted of Dr. Frank Kottke, Dr. Joseph Straley, Dr. Frank Hanft, Prof. Henry Brandis and Harold Bock. Jimmy Wallace acted as moderator.

Dr. Kottke, a member of the economics department, spoke on the economic problems related to world government. He said economic stability will not insure peace. Better economic conditions will make individual nations more independent instead of promoting international cooperation.

Dr. Straley, who is a member of the physics department, spoke on the threat of the atomic bomb, while the political problems connected with world government were covered by Dr. Hanft and Prof. Brandis, both of the law school.

"Don't over-rate the U. N.", Mr. Brandis warned. "I do not say that we should scrap it; we must work through the U. N., but we must be realistic enough to see it as it is. The U. N. must be strengthened into a world government. I believe the only alternative is another world war."

Next Wednesday night the Di will debate a resolution favoring world government. Visitors are urged to attend and take part in the debate.

CLASSES NEXT SATURDAY

Classes will be held in all departments of the University next Saturday, Guy B. Phillips, director of summer school, has announced.

Albright Quits as Head Of World Federalists

R. Mayne Albright of Raleigh has resigned his position as executive director of the Board of United World Federalists of North Carolina, Dr. Frank P. Graham, chairman of the advisory board of the organization, announced this week. The resignation is to become effective August 1.

Albright, a candidate for governor in the 1948 Democratic primary, is expected to concentrate his efforts on his candidacy, Dr. Graham said. No announcement has yet been made concerning his successor.

In accepting the resignation with regret, Dr. Graham stated: "Last year a small group of workers for world peace through world government within the framework of the United Nations called on Mr. Albright to organize and direct the North Carolina program for world government.

"Under his leadership, and with the support of a representative advisory board and executive council, North Carolina has been a leader among the states in the cause of world peace."

UVA Insurance Clinic Scheduled Next Week

A National Service Life Insurance clinic will be held next Thursday under the sponsorship of the University Veterans association, UVA President Hugh Wells announced yesterday.

The clinic will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the UVA clubhouse, located behind Lenoir hall.

Wells said all questions pertaining to NSLI policies will be answered by a staff of experts who will be on hand. Any problem concerning reinstatement, conversion, change of beneficiary or others can be cleared up promptly, he said.

Phi Society Auto Lottery Is Suspended

Sales of tickets by the Philantrophic Literary society in a lottery with an automobile as its prize have been suspended for three days in accordance with a directive issued by Tom Eller, president of the student body, to Robert Morrison, Phi chairman.

To raise funds to redecorate the Phi chamber and to restore its famous art collection, the lottery was started last week with approximately 87 tickets already sold at a dollar each to students who chanced winning a 4-door Kaiser car. Action now before the Student Council to be heard Monday evening will determine whether refunds must be made on these tickets or whether the lottery is to continue.

Reasons for Suspension

Eller gave several reasons for suspending the lottery temporarily. "Despite the fact that the cause is a worthy one," he said, "I believe the lottery method to be incompatible with the spirit, tradition, and general best interests of the student body. In my opinion it would be a most detrimental precedent to set.

"As far as I know, no authorization was obtained for the program either from the student government or from the University administration. The funds are not being handled through the Student Activities office. In addition, there is a section in the general statutes pertaining to the University which prohibits all forms of chance except under direct authorization from the president of the University.

"Pending an announcement by the Student Council, I think it will be extremely unwise for anyone to purchase further tickets. I would like to discourage any other organizations which are now contemplating a similar project of fund-raising."

UP Group to Meet

The University Party steering committee will meet Tuesday evening in Roland Parker lounge No. 3, Graham Memorial. Committee meetings will be held at that time each week hereafter in hopes that better attendance will be possible that at the afternoon sessions held so far this summer.

All steering committee members are urged to attend Tuesday's meeting or to appoint a proxy for the evening.

Student Legislature Passes 11 Bills; Adjourns for Remainder of Summer

Eller Displeased With High Cost Of Conventions

By Bob Sain

After five sessions, totaling in all no more than five hours, the Student Legislature has closed for the summer after at its final meeting passing 11 bills Thursday night.

Bills okayed by the student lawmakers were measures to: add $315 to the Yackety Yack budget; tighten construction of the campus budget; investigate "the composition and activities" of the Student Welfare board; reduce the Men's Interdormitory council and the Women's Interdormitory council to the status of independent campus organizations having no connection with the legislative branch of student government; require reporting of all student activities using student funds (Reporting will be required only after the winter and spring terms); to set up a legislative liasion committee with the Publications board; require reapportionment of legislators; authorize proxies during the summer session of the legislature; forbid the suspension of rules to consider budget and money bills; authorize the sergeant-at-arms to act as a miscelleaneous disbursing officer, and stipulate that there be no changes in election laws within 13 days of spring elections.

All bills save the one setting up the liaison committee for the publications board, were passed unanimously.

Eller Speaks

Student Body President Tom Eller, in a message to the legislature, gave his approval, "with misgivings," to a bill passed last week authorizing the appropriation of $600 for delegates to the National Student Organization convention in Madison, Wisconsin, in September. Eller's message indicated that he did not believe the student body was getting its money's worth from such delegations. He suggested that the legislature consider the reduction of the number of delegates to similar meetings, thereby cutting down the amount of expense money necessary.

Legislators, said Speaker Jack Folger Thursday night in adjourning the body for the summer, must remain on call during the second term in case an emergency should arise. He advised legislators who would not be present during the second term to appoint proxies immediately and report them to the clerk of the legislature.

French Consul Will Speak At Bastille Day Banquet Here

Mademoiselle Marcelle Campana, one of the first women ever to be appointed a French foreign service officer and at present consul for France at the French embassy in Washington, will be the principal speaker at the annual Bastille Day banquet to be given Monday night at the Carolina Inn.

Sponsored by the French House on campus, the banquet is one of the highlights of the special six-week session which ends next week. The banquet will begin at 7 p.m., Prof. Giduz, director of the French House, announced.

Mademoiselle Campana is the daughter of a French diplomat and received her education in Australia, England, Paris, and Stockholm where her father was Minister for France. She was graduated from the Ecole des Sciences Politiques in Paris.

Varied Activities

After the death of her father, Mademoiselle Campana entered the French Ministry for Foreign Affairs and was appointed archivist at the office of Asian and Oceanian Affairs. Following the liberation, she became assistant-director of that office and retained the post until September, 1946 when she was appointed consul for France in Washington.

For her activity in the underground during World War II, Mademoiselle Campana was awarded the Medaille de la Resistance. She is expected to arrive in Chapel Hill late tomorrow.

Other features of next week's final program of the French House for 1947 include the presentation of L'Anglais Tel Qu'On le Parle, a French farce, Wednesday night in Graham Memorial. The performance will be open to the general public and will be held in the main salon of the student union.

AVC Asks for End Of Congress Group

Members of the American veterans committee at last Tuesday's meeting voted to urge the abolishment of the house committee on un-American activities as "an excellent economy measure." At the same time it was decided to write President Truman requesting the appointment of an impartial committee to report on communist and facist activities in this country.

This action followed a report by chapter member Junius Scales, who pointed out that "the committee is in itself un-American in that it flaunts the civil rights of citizens, serves as a sounding board for the prejudices of its members, and has consistently overlooked the activities of fascist groups."

Local Report

From its local affairs committee the veterans heard a report on Local 304, United Public Workers of the C. I. O. which is at present seeking to organize University workers. According to Garnet McCoy, present aims of the union do not include a demand for wage increases but they do ask that present wages not be reduced. The union is also asking eight paid holidays per year in place of the present one, and two weeks paid vacation per year. Following McCoy's report the chapter went on record as endorsing the union's program.

The ex-GI's made plans to aid negro veterans in Carrboro in filling out applications for their terminal leave pay and to furnish them information on GI insurance.

A telegram protesting the new congressional income tax bill as a "lopsided measure which relieves upper income brackets at the expense of the lower" was authorized.

IRC Will Discuss Future of France

"The Future of France" will provide the spark for Monday evening's International Relations club open forum at 8 o'clock in Graham Memorial's Roland Parker lounge. All summer students are welcome to participate in the discussion.

John Bristow, IRC president, will deliver a report on political conditions within France to open the meeting. Communist power and France's economic plight will probably come up for critical examination by IRC members and visitors.

Monday's meeting brings to a close the club's active programs for the first summer session. An overflow audience of about 300 students and townspeople heard four professors discuss the question of world communism during the IRC faculty forum and summer reception early this term.

Europe's economic troubles, universal military training and the basic questions dividing the United States and Russia provided the topics for discussion at previous meetings.

CPU Convenes Sunday

The Balkan situation will be the topic for discussion at a meeting of the Carolina Political union tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

All interested persons are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

CCUN Meets to Formulate Extensive Campus Program

An extensive program for the Collegiate Council of the United Nations was planned at Wednesday night's meeting in Graham Memorial by the executive council and other campus leaders, with President Frank Graham acting in an advisory capacity.

Chairman Lincoln Kan announced that next Wednesday night a combination rally and meeting for the entire student body will be presented by CCUN in Hill Hall. An address by a prominent speaker will highlight the program, details of which will be announced in Wednesday's Daily Tar Heel.

At last Wednesday's meeting, Dr. Graham stressed the importance of a positive and ambitious program for the CCUN on the campus as well as throughout the state, promising his aid and support with every means at his command.

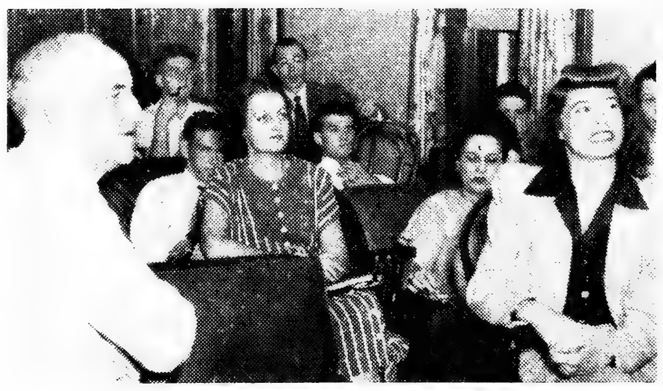
Tom Eller, student body president, also pledged his efforts in securing the cooperation of campus activities, adding that " this group has the greatest potential strength of any organization on the campus."

The CCUN office is now located in the basement of Graham Memorial.

Record Enrollment Expected In Fall Term by Armstrong

From 700 to 800 new high school graduates will help swell the fall enrollment at the University to 7,250, Director of Admissions Armstrong estimated yesterday.

"The extent of time spent by students in the state public school system was increased last year from 11 to 12," Armstrong explained. "Therefore the number of students coming straight from high school to the University this year will be much larger than those entered last fall."



Armstrong predicted the increased number of returning veterans entering next year will aid in boosting the new total over last year's record-breaking average of 6900 students.

"Only about 125 to 150 new out-of-state students will be admitted though," he continued, "as this is the first year that the new state quota law will govern the entering process."

This new statute says that the number of new non-state students cannot exceed 10 per cent of the student body total.

The admissions director pointed out that this does not apply to old students, who were here before passage of the law, or to graduate school candidates.

"We expect several hundred of our old out-of-state students to return," Armstrong concluded, "and we think the number of women students will stay the same."

Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the Greater University, is shown at an organization meeting of the Collegiate Council for United Nations which made its appearance on campus last week. Meeting with State Director Lincoln Kan, the group got down to work Wednesday night and formulated plans for the preview of the CCUN to the campus next Wednesday. (Staff photo by George Conner.)

366 Arts, Sciences Students Made Dean's List Last Term

A total of 366 students made the Dean's list during the past spring quarter in the School of Arts and Sciences, a count of names released by Dean William Wells revealed. Only students who make all A's and B's are included on the list, and those whose overall average might have been equal to A or B, but who made some grades lower than B, are not included.

The list follows in alphabetical order. Names will be published in installments; those not included on the list today will be run at later dates.

No Frosh Dorm -- Yet

The Quonset huts that mushroomed on the macadan tennis courts last winter will steal the limelight in the housing difficulties for next fall. Men who lived in the huts with some degree of discomfort and inconvenience during last spring, and in some cases since last January, are more than a trifle perturbed over the fact that they may have to return to them during the coming year, while some of the in-coming freshmen will have priority in Alexander dormitory, which is slated to be the freshman dormitory.

Old Quonset area residents bring out a good point when they say that when they were assigned to the Quonset huts it was the understanding that it was only temporary, and that soon as vacancies appeared in the dormitories, they would be foremost on the list for these vacancies. Now it seems evident that they will have to resume their old homestead and like it.

The arguments for having a dormitory that is specifically for freshmen are rather skimpy. It is true that it may be of some assistance to the orientation committee to have 150 freshmen centralized under one roof. Since it would be impossible to put the 900 freshmen who will enter the University for the first time next fall in Alexander, it would be just as practical, or more so, to congregate all of the newcomers in the Quonset huts (which will accomodate around 600).

Rightfully the old quonset hut residents deserve the vacancies in the dormitories. If Quonset huts have to be used, then the new freshmen should be housed in them and wait their turn for dormitory vacancies.

Push Mundt Bill

The fate of a most important measure, selling the American way of life to the people of the world, will be partically decided upon next week. The Mundit bill, officially designated HR 285, which provides for the establishment and maintainance of cultural and educational centers in every nation in which we have an embassy, goes before the committee for discussion next Monday.

Much interest has been shown by students over the endeavor. At the Southern Council for International Relations conference, held in Columbia, S. C. last May, the group favored the perpetuation of such centers. Their move was corroborated by resolution passed by the CCUN in New York last month, emphasizing the necessity for Congress to provide "sufficient funds for implementing and maintaining a program of education about the United States to further understanding between nations," since the "charter of the United Nations stresses education and the exchange of information."

Several media will be used if the provision is passed. Information booths, libraries, movies, lectures by the exchange of speakers between nations—even the publication of newspapers and magazines for that sole purpose, will be used.

This move is perhaps the most effective plan that has been proposed to date for the better understanding between nations. It would behoove the American public to take up the cause for the spread of our culture and for peace through better understanding between one another.

An egotist is a man who talks about himself when you want him to talk about you.

Money may not bring happiness, but most people like to have enough of it around so they can choose their own misery.

To achieve that suave, long-lined look, Charlotte Laurence, of Mutual's "Real Stories From Real Life," demonstrates the appropriate method of attaining the first prerequisite — graceful legs. "Stretching and bending keep your legs in graceful proportion," says Charlotte, shown here doing the popular bicycle-kick exercise. Every part of the body can be molded to near perfection—and legs are no exception. Heavy massage followed by epsom salt packs will work wonders too in streamlining, but since most of the fault lies in flabby muscles, exercises to tighten and shape them will be more advantageous.

High School Theatrics

Dust-Gathered 'Chris Bean' Proves Big Disappointment

By Pete Strader

As a Little Theatre and small college favorite "The Late Christopher Bean" is one of the oldest plays in captivity, and has been long gathering dust on library shelves. The Playmakers' production Thursday night gave no evidence why it should be revived. Hampered by a plot that broadcast its movements 30 minutes in advance, the play dragged its way through a bog of forgotten lines and slow cues.

An organization as capable as the Playmakers can certainly do better than the disappointing "Bean." Though a proficient cast and crew struggled (a little obviously at times) the performance never rose above high school theatrics.

Casting Good

Fortunately, casting was above par. Each member not only looked his part, but gave evidence of a complete characterization luring somewhere in the background, waiting to be brought to life with a little more rehearsal. Regrettably, a lack of pace and lines kept the characters two dimensional, and a vain attempt at New England accents gave the cast the appearance of having just left the cotton fields.

Marion Miller as the faithful and victorious Abby came through with the evening's best performance. Actress Miller caught the humor and pathos and some of the nostalgic memories of Abby with a characterization that rarely slipped. Dependable Catherine Covington was in there pitching as Mrs. Haggott, and daughter Henriette Neal's petulant Ada was alive though a trifle strained, while Bootsie Stevenson, the other daughter, often forgot to become her character until she was completely on stage. Buddy Westover played Rosen with a Yiddish accent and received—as usual—more than his share of laughs. Messrs. Mattis, Waddington, Hardy and Mork were adequate if forgetful.

About Face

When some 17 masterpieces of paintings are discussed, why must the cast be so obvious about keeping their faces away from the audience?

"Christopher Bean" can never be a very entertaining play, but with a semblance of pacing, direction and a few hours spent in memorizing lines, the cast might have made it a pleasant one.

First-Niter Comments

Wiley Williams. Hamlet. (commerce)—"I didn't enjoy the beginning; I thought it dragged out too much. Act II was the best act of all. Act III like Act I was drawn out."

Edgar E. Folle, Wake Forest college, (English Faculty)—"Splendid performance, with parts well played. I liked Mattis especially."

Esther Seay, Franklin, (education)—"Act I acting overdrawn—not living the part they are portraying (exceptions for Abby and Dr. Haggett). Acts II and III much better than first. All in all, it was a grand play. Abby did a grand job of making audience feel warm toward her."

Art Xanthos, Wilmington, (Gen. College)—"The first act started off slowly. The lines weren't too well memorized. Things picked up after the first half of the first act. The second and third acts were much more enjoyable. Tallant seemed to have portrayed his part naturally, and, in my opinion, he was the outstanding actor of the group. All in all, a very good performance."

Plagiary Abhorrer

Cotten Glad He's Not a Jap Even if He Is 'Damyankee'

(Editor's Note: This is the fifth in a series of articles about significant personalities at the University.)

By Robert Morrison

Dr. Lyman Cotten, I'm sure, is one of the best lecturers in the University, and together with Dr. Harry Russell, forms the only part of the UNC English department which is aware that any literature has been produced in the Twentieth Century. Thus Dr. Cotten is doubly interesting—he talks well and about literature which is still alive.

Southern Background

Dr. Cotten, the son of a Naval officer, was born in Newport, R. I., but spent his early life in many different nations. "I was much relieved when my younger brother was born in Japan," Dr. Cotten said, "for if I was a damyankee, he was a Jap." Dr. Cotten is not without a solid Southern background, however, for his uncle is none other than Dr. Archibald Henderson, once of Salisbury; his grandmother was Sallie Southall Cotten, a well-known North Carolina poet; and his mother is the keeper of the Southern Historical Collection in the UNC library.

"My avocation is my vocation," says Dr. Cotten. His chief interest is in modern poetry; his chief pasttime is reading.

When he left Japan at the age of 14, he spoke Japanese fluently, but his desire was so great to become indisputably an American that he soon forgot all the Japanese he had known. During the war he was approached by the United States government with an offer of a position as Japanese language propagandist, but he had to admit that the Oriental tongue was no longer familiar to him.

A.B. at Carolina

When his family decided that he must have a formal education, he was sent to Woodberry Forest where his interest in English literature was augmented. He earned an A.B. from Carolina and a Ph.D. from Yale.

Dr. Cotten has always seemed to me to have the makings of another Dr. Hardin Craig (but deliver him from the field of Elizabethan literature!), but unfortunate health prevented his being a 90-miles-per-hour worker in the art of abhoring the plagiarism of one while wallowing in the plagiarism of many.

World of Fancy

English 98 (modern poetry) is an excellent elective course for any student to take. One is never bored while Dr. Cotten lectures, and he often wakes some students to the astounding realization that away from everyday affairs there is a world of fancy—a mingling of subtle feelings.

Is This Education?

Veterans Survey Education, Suggest Many Alterations

Education under the GI Bill of Rights is discussed by veterans studying at six American universities and colleges in the Summer Forum of The American Scholar.

In "Is This Education?", the GI contributors from the universities of North Carolina, Iowa, Wisconsin, Stanford, Antioch college and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, agree that colleges and educators have done a commendable job in absorbing the veteran flood, but offer diverse criticism and recommendations in their examinations of the subject:

"Basically, the progarm subsidizes education (but), view as a constructive social function, we need additional funds so we can, without losing any time, enter productive and useful careers. . . ."

"It is in lack of curriculum flexibility that the school has failed the veteran. Courses should be adopted to the greater maturity of the veteran, who is particularly interested in all studies treated from the contemporary point-of-view. . . ."

"Professors have failed to utilize the specific knowledge and experience of this particular group . . .Despite pressure of GIs themselves for specialization, educators must teach the importance of the philosophic outlook which can relate pursuits and give direction and meaning to education. . . ."

"The fact remains that the GI Bill has placed the federal government in the business of education. We have made a beginning in the task of widening democracy in the colleges. When the veteran tide recedes, we must exploit the wedge to open new oportunities for social welfare. With will and vision, we can transform a temporary windfall into a permanent triumph."

WESLEYANS TO MEET

The Wesley Foundation will meet at 6 o'clock tomorrow night for its regular Sunday night supper program. Dean of Men Fred Weaver will lead a discussion on "A Christian Answer to the Alcohol Problem."

The meeting will be in the basement of the Methodist church and students are invited to both the supper at 6 and the program at 7.

FACULTY MEN'S CLUB

The Faculty Men's club will hear a discussion by Lester Dix on intercultural education when the group meets Tuesday at 1 p. m. in the Carolina Inn.

It's a Hup and Two for Me and You When Ike Takes Over at Columbia U.

By Bob Sain

"The time has come," the poet said, "to talk of many things, of shoes and ships and generals who want to run universities."

"You are speaking of . . ." I queried.

"Eisenhower," he said, "General of the Armies Ike Eisenhower who will quite soon exhibit his stiff, military carriage up and down the thoughtful halls of Columbia university."

Grand Llama

Athelstan Boniface, my friend the poet and individualist, was talking about the recent disclosure that Ike would be grand llama at the big granite pile in New York.

"Hup, two, three, four, it will go up and down Columbia's halls." Ath said, "Hup, two, three, four, open books, present fountain pens." His face was wreathed in a rare, wry smile.

"Do you mean to say," I asked him, "do you mean to tell me that you think Ike isn't the man for the job, that the glorious hero who led our glorious soldiers across the glorious English Channel to glorious victory in Germany wouldn't be the man to run an institution dedicated to higher education? Do you mean that?"

"I do," Ath said. It was said with spartan simplicity, with King James Bible austerity.

But then he broke. He had been standing there in quiet dignity, puffing on an Egyptian cigarette. But he broke, and his high, ivory brow wrinkled.

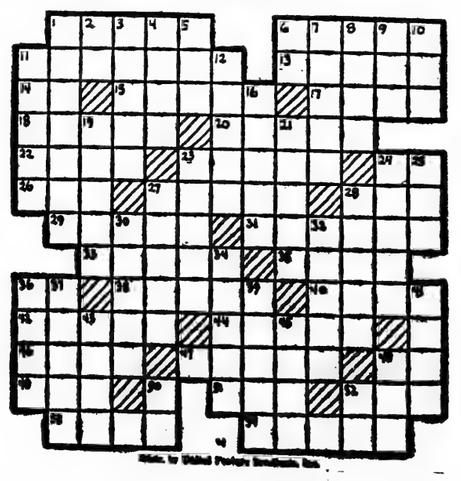
"Maybe I'm wrong," he said. "Maybe Ike won't have anything to do with the academic goings-on at Columbia. Maybe the chancellor or somebody will handle that. Maybe the dean of men or a clerk from the book store. Maybe Ike will sit in an oak-panelled office and smile at visiting dignitaries and tell good newspapermen just how Columbia stands on this foreign policy or that foreign policy. And then again maybe he will have something to do with the scholastic side of the university. And maybe that would be good. Maybe the students of today, facing a world forbidding and fraught with danger, need regimentation."

Military Thinking

"But, look, Ath," I said, "aren't you assuming too much? Aren't you assuming that Ike will carry over his military way of thinking? Aren't you assuming that he hasn't had enough classical training to run a university?"

"I am. I am assuming," Ath said, "that Ike can't shake off three or four decades of army training about the right way and the Army way, and I am assuming that learning his lessons at the War college and being taught how to adjust a gas mask isn't going to help out a hell of a lot when it comes to philosophy or Cicero. How would it be, my friend, if an undergrad approached Ike and asked something about Baha'i scripture and the good general couldn't answer? How would that be?"

"Well," I asked, "just what are the qualifications of a university president, anyway?"



"Who cares?" Ath said, giving up the argument. "What I want to know is what are the qualifications for a United States President?"

P.A. Lee Valuable Member Of Intramural Sports Staff

PERMILLAS A. LEE, Jr., the golden-haired assistant director of intramurals here at Carolina, seems to be very talented in keeping himself in obscurity through a sense of modesty that has made him one of the most respected up-and-coming members of the local athletic department. That is why we are taking time out today to pay a debt to the jovial physical education major whose efforts during the past year have been invaluable to the cause of mural activity.

Ever since he took the position as assistant to Director Walter Rabb, he has worked diligently at the task of making intramural sports at Carolina something of which we can be proud. And in all fairness, it must be said that his efforts have been very successful.

His most important contribution came last spring when the veteran Rabb was called upon to take over the reins of the Tar Heel baseball team when Coach Bunn Hearn was taken ill. Said Rabb, "P. A. was more than valuable when I was called out of my regular position. He was essential. He carried on like an old hand in the administration of the program, and through his hard work we had one of the most successful spring intramural programs in history."

(As a matter of passing, it must be noted that Rabb himself did no little job in laying the groundwork and directing the mural department last year. Even when he was allocated to the varsity coaching staff for baseball, he continued to spend many extra hours in the service of his life blood—intramural athletics.)

Persistent P. A., who hails from Dunn, is in his last year as a member of the undergraduate school of physical education, and after he receives his bachelor's degree, he plans to stay in Chapel Hill and with the intramural department to obtain a master's.

His progressive plans and continued efforts promise to help considerably to keep building up the Carolina mural department into what will be the best in the entire South. It's not far from it now—due to a great extent to the ability and willingness to work of the same Permillas A. Lee.

BY WAY OF SPORTS. The nation's No. 1 fan may be on the scene of action next November when Duke plays Missouri in Durham. In fact, it's almost assured according to Drew Pearson, the Washington correspondent whose column appeared in the Daily Tar Heel last year. This No. 1 fan, of course, is none other than Harry S. Truman, the former Missouri haberdasher who now resides in the White House. Said Truman when invited by the Missouri and North Carolina senators, "I imagine Missouri will need some rooters and I could help out, but unfortunately, as President, I'd have to be nonpartisan." . . . Football teams in the Southern conference, in accordance with the rule for practice reinstalled this season, cannot begin fall drills until September 1. This gives the Southeastern conference schools—Georgia and Tennessee included—a jump on Carolina since they have no such rule and are hard at it this very moment. Texas, whose Longhorns are considered about the toughest foe the Tar Heels will face, also have to wait until September 1 by virtue of a Southwestern conference ruling . . . We say it gives Carolina a disadvantage, but it may work differently. The Tar Heels—the ones now working together—have been working as a unit since a year ago this spring, and the rest may prove the best thing. The spring drills were highly successful, and all that is left now is to whip the Tar Heels into shape and blow the opening whistle . . . Following the unfortunate culmination of events last winter that resulted in Carolina's 1946 All-American hook shot artist, John Dillon, sitting on the bench a large part of the 1947 season, it was rumored that the drawling Georgian might not be around when the cage sport gets rolling again late this fall. That will not be the case, however, for Dillon will definitely be there when the initial call comes for candidates—and he'll be there trying to regain his starting position from where he scored an average of nearly 15 points a game in 1946.

There is no need to make any more applications for tickets to the Duke-Carolina game. The reason is that the allotment is far below the applications already submitted . . . However, applications for tickets to the State-Carolina game are still being accepted . . .

Total of 67 Get Spring Monograms

A total of 67 athletes have been awarded varsity monograms for their participation in spring sports—baseball, golf, tennis, and track—it was announced yesterday by the University athletic department.

A breakdown of the total figure finds the diamond men receiving 20 awards, and linksmen seven, the netters 10, and the tracksters 30.

With the day of the three letternmen definitely a thing of the past, only 10 double monogramer winners are present on the new list. They are the trio of Jim Hamilton, who combined basketball with baseball as did Jim Hayworth, and Bob Cox, who turned the trick in football and golf; along with seven track distance men who composed the Conference championship cross country team.

The complete list is as follows:

Varsity Golf—Edward C. Ashby, Edgar H. Bailey, Robert V. Cox, W. H. Doeschler, Michael M. Nolan, Ray H. Taylor, Harvie Ward.

Varsity Tennis—Heath Alexander, Stanley Gruner, John Kenfield, Ray Morris, James Nicholson, Charles Rice, Victor Seixas, Don Skakle, William J. Stubbs (Mgr.), Clark Taylor.

Varsity Track—L. R. Briley, Mark Burnham, J. D. Corpening, Walter Francis, T. E. Haigler, H. D. Heggie, R. H. Holden, R. A. Hollander, G. M. Joyner, R. L. Kirk, L. J. Klosterman, M. D. Lentz, J. A. MacKenzie, S. H. Magill, Norman McLeod, J. O. Miller, J. H. Milne, Jack Moody, R. K. Morrow, E. H. Nelson, Jack Ross, E. F. Russell, R. B. Seligman, E. B. Shultz, F. M. Simmons, Alvin H. Smith, R. F. Taylor, M. C. Terrell, T. J. Turner, Frank W. Hardy (Mgr.).

Simmons To Depart For Europe Thursday

Carolina's Chuck Simmons, national up-and-coming hurdle star, will leave New York by plane next Thursday on a tour of central and southern Europe as a member of a nine-man AAU track team from the United States.

Before leaving on the tour, Simmons will participate in the national decathalon in Bloomfield, N. J., and his performance in this meet will go a long way toward determining his chances of making the 1948 American Olympic aggregation.

Simmons won his berth on the AAU team by virtue of his showing in the National AAU meet held last week in Lincoln, Neb.

Staycock, "Men Of Mullis," Grads To Participate In Final Tourney

By Gus Lacy

The final games in the three softball leagues were played Thursday, and Grads No. 1, Staycock, and "Men of Mullis" emerged as winners in their respective leagues. The three teams will begin a double elimination tournament on Monday to determine the winner for the first summer session.

Both Staycock and "Men of Mullis" hung up season records of 10 wins against no losses, while Grads No. 1 won 9 while suffering no defeats. By virtue of the flip of a coin, the Grads drew a bye in the first round of the three-team tournament, so "Men of Mullis" and Staycocks will meet in the opening game at 4 p.m., Monday, on field No. 7. Tuesday's game will match the winner of the Staycock-"Men of Mullis" contest against the Grads, this game also to be played on field No. 7. Since this is a double elimination tournament, one loss does not knock a team out of further competition.

In the semi-finals of the novice singles tennis tournament, Milton Cash defeated Powell for the right to meet Charlie Lamberth in the finals. Lamberth won in the semi-finals over Griff Holland. Cash and Lamberth will meet in the final match of the tournament at 4 p.m., Monday, on varsity court No. 13. A doubles team of Stratford and Lamberth will meet Smith and Aenchbacher on the same court Tuesday to determine the doubles championship.

Semi-finals in the horseshoe tournament will begin Monday, with Gerringer meeting English, and W. Reid facing Westall. The winners of these two matches will meet in the finals on Tuesday.

Thursday's softball results:

16 KA	ATO 7
10 Phi Kap	Old West 9
8 Staycock	Kappa Sig 0
8 DKE	St. Anthony 6
11 Pi Lamb	BVP 6

Deadline For Entries In Swimming Monday

Monday, July 14, is the deadline for all entries in the gala water carnival to be held under the auspices of the intramural department in the outdoor pool at 7:30 p.m., Friday, July 18.

Some individual and team entries have already been turned in, and others are expected before Monday's deadline. Intramural director Walter Rabb has invited all students to enter the 17-event carnival, which will include both regulation swimming races and novelty and comedy stunts.

Many of the events are set up so that teams composed of both boys and girls may enter together. All entrants are urged to get together in a boy and girl combination, and anyone desiring to obtain a partner for the meet should call the intramural office, where the officials will be glad to make the necessary arrangements. The woman's athletic department will also be glad to cooperate with any boy or girl desiring a partner.

Rabb reports that a good entry list has been obtained for the bait casting tournament, which is open to students, faculty and townspeople. According to Rabb, there are no experts in the tournament, but just "good country fishermen."

Hardy Henry May Turn Out To Be Valuable Man In Fall

By John Wander

Hankering Hardy Henry may have his hankering to play plenty of football fulfilled this fall. The reason for this is that the regular end of 1943 who played with the jayvees last season has shown improvement since then that may make him a valuable member of the Tar Heel varsity eleven come September and the toughest season in years for the local footballers.

A native of Tuscaloosa, Ala., Henry first came to Carolina as a V-12er in 1943, and that year he played first and second string on the same team with Hosea "Rock 'em" Rodgers and Jack Fitch, a pair of V-12ers of the time who are also back to strengthen the Tar Heel forces.

He played freshman and sophomore ball at the University of Mississippi—Ole Miss—at Oxford, Miss., and after he concluded his Marine training here in Chapel Hill he was commissioned and was shipped to the Pacific for duty. Henry returned to Carolina in July of 1946, exactly a year ago, and since that time he has gradually won his place in the campus life of Carolina both as an athlete and a personality.

Married but as yet non-paternal, Henry lives on West Cameron avenue. Says he, "I don't live in Mudville and don't raise tomatoes like that 'studious' Tandy." Nevertheless, he does spend more than his share in playing the age-old game of bridge with his cohorts on the football married roster—Roberts, Spurlin, et al.

He has been trying to learn golf under the patient guidance of this same Roberts—George that is—but according to the latter, "He is a poor student." (He lost five balls the last time he played and decided to give up the game.

Henry is at present a physical education major, due to receive a degree next March. After that he plans to remain in Chapel Hill for a master's degree. However, this will be his last season of eligibility as a Tar Heel footballer.

West Photographs Now on Exhibition

An exhibit of the photographs of Joy Griffin West opened last week in the small gallery of Person Hall and will continue through July 30. It is devoted exclusively to the use of the human form in creative studies. The gallery hours are 10 to 5 on weekdays, 2 to 5 on Sundays.

Mrs. West's work has been termed creative photography by some critics and contains character portraits of many paintings, including Boardman Robinson, James Lechay, Arnold Blanch, Stuart Edie, Paul Burlin, John S. DeMartelly, and Philip Guston.

Her two years of work include honorable mention in Cranbrok's national photographic salon; nine prints in photographic exhibition tour under auspices of P.S.A.; fifteen prints hung in group show in the Dayton, Ohio, museum, the Newark, N. J., art institute, and the Cincinnati art museum; one-man shows in the galleries of the Flint, Mich., museum; New Hampshire State Library; Kingswood School, Cranbrook, University of Iowa; and Colby Junior College in New Hampshire.

Mrs. West is continuing her photographic work this year in Mexico, Central and South America.

Renewal of Driver's Licenses Compulsory

All drivers, according to a new state law, are required to renew their licenses at least once every four years. Robert S. Weathers is assigned to the Chapel Hill area and administers the test every Wednesday from 8:30 to 4:30. He may be contacted in the court room at the Town hall.

All persons whose names begin with either A or B have until December 31 to complete the tests, at which time the C-D phase of the tests by name will begin, lasting for the following six months.

The examination consists of eye, written, oral, and road test on State driving and traffic regulations. Information manuals are available for those persons whose names will soon appear for the test; however, others, whose names are not imminent, are discouraged in doing so because the immediate supply is limited.

The North Carolina law requires all out-of-state residents who reside in this state as much as 90 days are required to hold a license for this state. These students may also take the tests here.

ROBERT LEE BORUM

Scholarship Awarded To High Point Student

The Scholarship committee of the University announced today that Rodney Lee Borum, a graduate of the High Point high school, has been awarded the Marvin B. Smith, Jr., Memorial scholarship.

Borum won the scholarship in competition with a large group of young men from leading high schools of North Carolina. The scholarship carries an award of $400 a year for four years or a total of $1,600.

This scholarship was established by Mr. and Mrs. Marvin B. Smith, Sr., and their daughter, Elise, and son, J. Harold, in memory of Marvin B. Smith, Jr., a leading young businessman in the textile industry, whose career was cut short by his premature death a few years ago.

The first award was made in 1946 to James Hugh McArver from the Gastonia high school. Another scholarship will be awarded in the spring of 1948 to a high school senior graduating at that time.

Borum, the winner this year, made an outstanding scholastic record in the High Point high school and won many other honors during his high school career.

The basis of the Smith scholarship award is ability, character and promise of future success. The winner must also be dependent, at least partially, on his own efforts to secure his education and must be planning his training with a view to a career in business. The scholarship committee said Borum ranks high in all of these respects.

Sound and Fury to Present Musical Comedy Next Week

"Weep No More," Sound and Fury's forthcoming musical production, is featuring some of the most unusual personages on the campus. The show, which is to be given next Thursday and Friday evenings at 8:30 in Memorial hall, is expected to be one of the best shows the group has ever presented.

Pete Strader, set and costume designer, is one of the talented many. Pete studied under Jo Mielziner, one of New York's top designers, and has worked with Sound and Fury in other shows of the past. Besides his designing ability, Pete is a natural comic and the forthcoming production is featuring two of Pete's skits, including the much-to-be-talked-about Chaucer skit. Writing, directing, and acting in radio for three years, as well as directing summer stock and little theatre production, Pete has a future ahead of him as a major in dramatic arts.

Song Writer

Frank Matthews, a music major, is another talented student. In 1945, while in the Hawaiian Islands, he composed a song, Candlelight, written in the Glenn Miller style, and played by Bob Crosby's orchestra in a Glenn Miller memorial concert. This song will be featured in "Weep No More" as well as another one of Frank's originals, "Embrace Me." Doug Gardner will do the vocals on the first, and Betty Hoffman on the latter. The latter is Frank's first attempt to write emotional music, although he has been writing and arranging for many years in the past.

Besides the works of these two, other feature numbers include Coline Smith's rendition of "Love for Sale;" Buddy Robinson, the boy with the dancing feet, who has done much in the Special Service Division of the Armed Services, will be featured in a rhythm-tap routine of "A Pretty Girl is Like A Melody;" Forrest Covington, the boy with the deep bass voice, will sing "Old Man River" as the public likes it; the fascinating dancing of Grey Adams and Dolly Donelson will be headline features to "Puttin' on the Ritz;" Fred Hedrick will offer his captivating rendition of "If I Love You." These are but a few of the features of "Weep No More," and tickets may be purchased from members of the cast or at the booth at the Y daily.

Pop Concert by Summer Band Scheduled Tomorrow Evening

Will Close Group's Summer Activities

The 40-odd piece summer University band, concluding nearly five weeks of activity, will present a pop concert under the Davie poplar tree on campus tomorrow evening at 6:45 o'clock. The program will include a variety of marches, semi-classical and modern compositions.

Director Earl Slocum will direct the concert, and it will be his last performance in that capacity until next fall. Hubert Henderson, assistant director of the band, will take over when the summer musicians resume rehearsals next session.

Band Program

Two marches will get the program underway, followed by "Atlantis," "The Fortune Teller," and "The Night Was Made For Love." After another march, the band will play "Manhattan Serenade," "Rhythms of Rio," and then conclude with a final march selection.

This will be the first public appearance of the University band group since last spring, when the well-known full band presented its annual concert. During the past year, the Carolina band reached its prewar size and standard for the first time in several years, and it took its place as one of the finest organizations of its kind in the entire South.

Previous Recognition

Both from a concert and marching standpoint, the University band received wide recognition, probably its greatest acclamations coming after outstanding performances at the Sugar Bowl classic in New Orleans January 1 of this year and at the Carolina-Tennessee football game at Knoxville back in the fall.

According to Slocum, who has been directing the Carolina band for a number of years, the entire 90-piece group that was together at the close of the spring quarter will return to school five days early in September in order to get in a week's drills in preparation for the season football opener with Georgia here in Kenan stadium.

Fall Registration Now in Progress

Pre-registration for the fall quarter is now well under way. General College students began consultations with their advisers yesterday, and all others who have yet to register will hold interviews with their deans between today and Friday.

Friday is also the last regular day of General College pre-registration although some advisers will be available as late as Saturday morning. All students now enrolled who have not filled out the necessary green forms of class schedules, even if they are to attend the second summer session, are urged to complete registration for September at this time. Appointments can still be made with advisers at the information desk in South building.

Registration for the second summer school term is still in progress. Those here for the present term who have already pre-registered for the next session beginning July 23 may make any changes in their courses by following the usual drop-and-add procedure through their faculty advisers, deans, and Memorial hall until July 22 or between July 24 and 26, inclusive.

Those attending the present term who have not yet to register for the forthcoming summer session may do so through the drop-and-add procedure referred to above as soon as possible.

Students not enrolled for the present term, before being accepted for either the second summer session or the fall quarter, must first meet the requirements of the admissions office and then register through their faculty advisers, deans, and Memorial hall no later than the first day of the desired term.

This registration schedule does not apply to the law school and the school of public health, both of which will announce specific details for their students later.

Stardusters to Play At Candlelight Dance

A Pre-Exam Hop will be held this Saturday night in the Candlelight room, Bill Shuford, Graham Memorial director, has announced. Music is to be furnished by Harry Hinson and his 5-piece "Stardusters" orchestra from 8 till 12 o'clock.

COURSE IN FRENCH CONVERSATION

Eligible students interested in registering for a class in French conversation (French 51) for the second term of summer school should see Dr. Alfred G. Engstrom immediatley in Murphey 309. Courses will be offered at 9 and 11 a. m.

UNC Coeds May Participate In 'Miss Durham' Contest

All Carolina coeds and Chapel Hill girls between the ages of 18 and 28—unmarried—who wish to enter the State Junior Chamber of Commerce beauty contest for Miss North Carolina are invited to appear, in bathing suits, at Kessing pool Thursday at 1:30 p. m.

Representatives of station WDUK and the U. S. Army recruiting service, along with other sponsors from Durham, will be on hand to select their entries for the contest for "Miss Durham" to be held there Friday night, August 1, at the Duke Park pool.

At least three local entries will be selected by sponsors for the Durham contest, and each entry will be awarded a bathing suit of her own choice.

One Carolina beauty has already been entered in the "Miss Durham" contest. Hallie Dockery, who was graduated here last June, has been entered under the sponsorship of Durham radio station WTIK.

Betsy Crisp, last year's winner, will reign as queen until she crowns the new "Miss Durham."

Winner of the "Miss Durham" title will enter statewide competition at Wrightsville Beach August 16-17, when "Miss North Carolina" will be selected. "Miss North Carolina" will go to Atlantic City, N. J., to compete for the title of "Miss America."

Any Carolina coed entering the "Miss Durham" contest should plan to be here through the second summer session.

Hugh Mitchell, Ex-UN Legal Adviser, To Speak On CCUN Program Tonight

Graham, Eller Will Be Heard

Former State Senator Hugh G. Mitchell, Statesville attorney an a past legal advisor to the United Nations Security Council, will be the principal speaker at a special introductory program of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations in Hill Hall this evening at 8:15.

Mitchell will speak on the subject "United Destruction or United Nations."

Appearing under the auspices of the recently organized University Chapter of the Collegiate Council for United Nations, Mitchell is the first speaker to address the local group. President Frank P. Graham and Student Body President Tom Eller also will appear on the program, which will be open to the public.

Introduction by Kan

The speaker will be introduced by Lincoln Kan, student moderator and state president of the CCUN, who recently returned from New York, where he attended the formal installation ceremonies of the national organization and observed United Nations activities first hand in company with UN officials.

The auditorium will be decorated with flags of many nations, and girls attending the Institute for Cultural Relations, now in session at the University, will act as usherettes, dressed in the native costume of many countries.

The program will be broadcast by the Tobacco Network com. WDNC Durham; WBIG, Greensboro; WMFR, High Point; and WRAL, Raleigh. Station WPTF, Raleigh, and WBT Charlotte are tentatively planning to carry the broadcast, either directly or by transcription.

TWO DORMS CLOSED

Ruffin and Manley dormitories will be closed for repairs on July 26 and must be vacated by July 28, James E. Wadsworth, housing director, has announced. All students now living in either of those two dormitories may obtain new room assignments for the remainder of the summer in the housing office at 207 South building.

WORLD FEDERALISTS MEETING

The student chapter of United World Federalists will meet in the Grail room, Graham Memorial, at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon. All students are invited to attend.

French House Presents Farce This Evening

L'Anglais Tel Qu'On Le Parle, a one-act French farce by Tristan Bernard, will be presented tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial by members of the French house. The presentation will be free and open to the general public.

First produced in Paris in 1899, the comedy is in nine scenes and has been played with continued popularity at the Theatre-Francais in Paris.

The play has been translated into the principal foreign languages and concerns an eloping couple in Paris, a father in pursuit, and an interpreter ignorant of all languages but his own.

Members of Cast

Members of the cast include Ed Duke in the role of Eugene, the interpreter; John Grier as Hogson, the father; John Young as Julien Cicandel, a love-stricken young Frenchman; Marjory Davis as Betty, Cicandel's young English fiance; Helen Davis as the cashier of the Parisian hotel; Westy Fenhagen as a French inspector of police; Sam Underwood as a bell-boy; and William Evans as a police agent.

The play is being directed by Miss Imogene Riddick, a member of the Campbell college faculty and of the French house staff this summer, assisted by Kai Jurgenson of the Carolina Playmakers staff.

In addition to tonight's play, the French house has one more evening program highlight this week. Tomorrow night, Professor Urban T. Holmes will give a vocal concert at the French house on Rasemary street at 7 p. m.

Included on the first half of Professor Holmes' program will be Le Cor by Flegier, Debussy's Romance, Nuit d'Etoiles, also by Debussy, and Le Mariage des Roses by Cesar Franck.

Closing out the concert will be Vision Fugitive by Massenet, Gounod's Serenade, and Le Font Dans La Poussiere by Joncieres.

UVA Will Sponsor Insurance Clinic

The University Veterans association will sponsor a National Service Life Insurance clinic tomorrow from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. in the UVA clubhouse located behind Lenoir dining hall, UVA President Hugh Wells has announced.

Representatives of the Durham Veterans administration office will be on hand to answer any questions pertaining to NSLI policies, Wells said. The UVA head further pointed out that these representatives will be prepared to give "on-the-spot" service in the form of reinstating lapsed policies, converting to other forms of policies or the changing of beneficiaries.

A similar clinic was held by the UVA last May, when visiting experts handled more than $360,000 worth of policies.

Veterans were reminded by Wells that the deadline for reinstating lapsed NSLI policies has been extended until January 1, 1948. No physical examination or other red tape will cause delay tomorrow in processing veterans who wish to renew or convert their policies, he said.

Laundry Office Holds Refund Applications

Students not enrolling for the second session of summer school may have the balance of their unused laundry deposit mailed to their home address by filling out the request for laundry refund form at the laundry office, 132 E. Franklin street or cashier's office, No. 1 South building, beginning Wednesday, July 16.

Betty Huffman (left) and Coline Smith will be featured vocalists in Sound and Fury's presentation of "Weep No More," which will show in Memorial hall at 8 p. m. Thursday and Friday. Tickets may be obtained at 50 cents each at the "Y" or at the door of Memorial hall.

New S&F Summer Musical Opens Two-Day Run Thursday

"Weep No More", the summer presentations of Sound and Fury, University musical comedy group, will open tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall. Scheduled for a two-day run, closing Friday night, the summer offering of the variety organization is advertised as a combination minstrel-vaudeville show. A 15-piece pit orchestra will play a specially arranged score to highlight and coordinate the various comedy skits and musical numbers included in the evening's presentation.

Tickets for both performances may be purchased from Sound and Fury members at the Y building, or at the door before curtain time.

Student members of the organization who are responsible for the technical details of the show, such as scenery, lighting effects, costumes, and props, are as follows: Pete Strader, John Mc Bride, Colbert Leonard, Bill Sonntag, Marcia McMillin, Ben Fountain, Charlie Todd, Monk Myerson.

Near East Expert To Speak at Hill

An opportunity to become acquainted with a topic high in the agenda of the United Nations will be given students of the second summer session when the Rev. Dr. Theodore Jackman, FRGS, executive director of the Palestine Research Institute, speaks in Hill hall Friday night, July 25.

The speaker, a fellow of the Royal Geographical society of London and a member of the speaker's bureau of the American Christian Palestine committee, is being brought to Chapel Hill under the sponsorship of the Hillel Foundation.

Dr. Jackman, who by virtue of study and observation of conditions in Palestine during the better part of six years is well qualified to discuss the most pressing arguments proferred in favor of a Zionist state, will speak on "Arab and Jews in the Holy Land."

Other campus groups endorsing this presentation include the AVC, Baptist Student union, Canterbury club, CPU, IRC, Intercollegiate Zionist Federation of America, Luthern Student association, Southern Conference for Human Welfare, Wesley Foundation and the YMCA.

The American Christian Palestine committee, the group making Dr. Jackman's appearance possible, is a group of prominent laymen, ministers and educators formed to be the vehicle for the expression of Christian opinion regarding Palestine. Included as chairmen and vice chairmen are Senators Brewster, Mead, Wagner, Magnuson and Vanderberg. North Carolina members include, among others, Dr. Frank Graham, Josephus Daniels, Judge John J. Parker, Dr. James E. Shepard, and Dr. H. Shelton Smith.

Dr. Jackman's talk will be preceeded by movies taken by the speaker while studying in the Holy Land.

Language Exams Set

Examinations for a reading knowledge of French and Spanish for students in the School of Commerce or those planning to enter the School of Commerce will be held Friday at 2 o'clock. French examinations will be given in Murphey 215; Spanish in Murphey 207.

Twelve-City Race

An editorial filler in a state paper is enough to make us realize that the establishment of the four-year medical school and the 600-bed hospital that the Legislature approved for the University of North Carolina may be further away from Chapel Hill than we thought. In the Sunday edition of the Winston-Salem Journal-Sentinel appeared the following:

> Greensboro, armed with a $15,000,000 Cone hospital trust fund, now threatens to go after the U.N.C. medical school and hospital in earnest. Well, they could hitch it to the Woman's College unit in the Guilford city and still have it on a "University" campus.

There are many factors that favor the establishment of the Medical program here at Chapel Hill. Here is the only state-owned medical school in North Carolina. Nearly one-third of the doctors practicing in this state attended here for their first two years of training. With the one-half million dollar five-story medical and public health building that was built in 1939, and the 100-bed modern hospital that the Navy Pre-Flight school built here, we are already underway toward founding the health center of the state.

Chapel Hill has the advantage over Greensboro and any of the other 11 cities in the state that are scambling for the site of the project. Here we have the "advantage of the accumulated faculty of the University; it would be located in a strategic medical center of the state; and it would enjoy a non-partisian administration that some fear might be serious if its location becomes a political football." Such were the views expressed in a Durham Herald editorial. Also here is the Pharmacy school and other scientific departments.

Not only are the Greensboro people armed with the Moses H. Cone hospital fund, but they cite a definite need for the establishment of the hospital and the four-year medical college in the Greensboro vicinity. Their argument that Guilford county is one of the more thickly populated counties in the state has not been unheard, and the fact that the Duke hospital is close to Chapel Hill does not strengthen our position.

The efforts of Greensboro, Charlotte and the other cities that are jockeying with Chapel Hill for the location of the center should give us all the more incentive to prove the values and advantages we have to offer the project.

Look Elsewhere

It appears as though the group of campus personages who last week requested that the Monogram clubhouse be turned over to them as a recreational building for men dormitory residents acted with very little forethought or insight into the existing situation. They are either ignorant of them or disregarded the fact that the athletes need the clubhouse badly and next fall will have their own dining room there and a training table. This dining room has been planned for some time and is already under construction. It is expected to be completed by September.

True, the students need adequate recreational facilities, but attempting to gain possession of the Monogram building at the expense of some 200 lettermen and innumerable other varsity squad members is unjustified and unfair. It is also true that there is a need for recreational facilities now—but the Interdormitory council had best look elsewhere. The council had also had better look more fully into the situation next time before making such a seemingly "final" resolution to the administration. IS.

The law school of the University, which had less than 20 students at one time during the war, now has more than 225.

Life Compared to Chocolate Cake; Choice of Ingredients Is Important

By Russell G. Baldwin

A product is the sum total of its ingredients. A chocolate cake is no better than the quality of the flour and sugar and shortening of which it is composed. It is no better than the blend or ratio by which the quantity of each of its ingredients is determined. So it is with all things; so it is with life.

Human life is the ultimate expression of complexity. All things are its resources; all things await its approval or rejection. Some things are rejected; some used sparingly; some gloried in. Since human life in its primal form is complete within itself, it has, in the final analysis, self-determination. It is the individual human life that determines what it will reject and the quantity of what it will accept. The individual molds his own life either by acquiescence to what is thrust upon him or by obtaining what he wishes to add to his life.

The worth of an individual is determined by what of life he uses and what he spurns. But more, it is determined by his ability to blend the various things which he uses.

What Is Important?

A cake wanting sugar is not sweet; a cake without eggs lacks richness. An individual without humor is bitter; an individual who does not recognize the common bond of kinship with his fellowmen is shallow. What is most important and what is least important? That is the question. To what degree an individual should devote himself to a specific task or goal; by what formula he should tackle life; what is true and what is false—these are questions the individual must answer for himself. His answer will be his judge.

In one sense the whole of life is a huge, pitiable frustration. Only when the most of life is gone does an individual learn to make the most of it. He leaves only an example for others—a chart which none can follow. He hopes it will help those who come after him and yet he knows that each individual must make his own path through the jungle.

One-Way Street

It is well for a person to stop and think; to realize that he is on a one-way street; and, to ask himself if he is making the most of it. Life should contain the right amount of pleasure and seriousness, and the myriad other elements which contribute to happiness. Each day should add something other than age to a person's life. A day in which nothing is gained is a day wasted; life is positive and must be lived as such. Perhaps one of the greatest deceivers in life is misplaced value. It is important that a person realize the utter worthlessness of money except when it is used for the benefit of mankind. Honor and glory are no greater than those who give it. They cannot be stolen or unfairly obtained.

When we see ourselves as we are, and when we recognize the fact that all men are but brothers in life's pilgrimage, we will become more friendly with one another. At Carolina we might even regain the forgotten art of greeting one another when we meet on the campus. One thing is certain—we will get more out of life. We will learn to look forward with hope rather than looking backward with regret. We must choose the ingredients of life with care. It is the simple things—a smile, a simple "hello"—that make life worth living.

Money Raising Stopped

Phi Car Lottery Outlawed By Student Council Probe

Facts: The Student council met Monday night, July 14, to take action on the present fund-raising program of the Philanthropic Literary society. This program consisted of selling tickets at $1.00 each to interested persons. The holder of the lucky ticket was to be the recipient of a new car when the number was drawn at a certain specified date. The proceeds from the sale of these tickets was to be used to redecorate the Phi hall and to restore its art collection. Sale of tickets by the society had been suspended for three days in accordance with a directive issued by the prseident of the student body pending action by this council. Evidence presented by representative members of the Phi disclosed that the Phi had processed on this program without the official sanction of either the student governemnt or of the University administration. The Phi was under the impression that such sanction was not necessary. They had received no indication that such program could be stopped and proceeded on the asumption that it would not be suppressed.

Question: The Student council had to decide whether (1) the program was legal in accordance with any provision known to be in existence at this time applicable to such a case and (2) whether such a program was compatible with the spirit and tradition of student government at the University.

Decision: The Student council unanimously decided to prohibit further sale of tickets by the Phi assembly and that refunds must be made to those who have previously purchased tickets. As to the first question regarding the legal status of the program, the council had no alternative: according to the general statutes of North Carolina pertaining to the University of North Carolina (Part 4 under General Provisions, Section 116-42) ". . .ten pin alleys, bowling alleys, or games of chance shall not be conducted within first obtaining written permission from the President of the University of North Carolina." The Phi had obviously proceeded in direct violation if this provision.

As to the second question, the council felt that the Phi was atempting to inaugurate a program that would set a dangerous precidence in future years. It was the opinion of the council felt that the Phi was attempting way enhance the prestige of student societies at the University of North Carolina.

Blanket Sampling

American Press Favors UMT Recent Analysis Discloses

WASHINGTON—A blanket sampling of editorial opinion in the nation's newspapers indicates that the American press is overwhelmingly in favor of Universal Military Training, The American Legion announces.

The Legion office here disclosed that Universal Military Training legislation is favored by a ratio of 30 to 1 by American newspapers in 36 states and the District of Columbia, according to an analysis of editorial comment received by the veterans' organization from a newspaper clipping service during May and June.

Many Papers Reviewed

During the two-month period, clippings were received from 240 of the 1,763 daily newspapers of the nation. Of the 240 newspapers reviewed, only eight were opposed to Universal Military Training, a program urged by The American Legion for more than 28 years. A Legion research expert said that not even all the eight could be considered as completely or irreconcilably opposed to the training.

The four states in which anti-UMT editorials had been published are New York, Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio. Opinion was stabilized in Minnesota by favorable newspaper columns and in the other states where opposition was found it was overcome by newspapers advocating the youth program.

New York Press Favorable

In a bloc of clippings representing 30 New York newspapers, including seven from New York City, only three newspapers shed editorial criticism on the proposed national defense measure.

Newspapers in two Iowa cities advocated Universal Military Training against one in opposition to it.

A ten to one ratio in favor of the training was noted in clippings from Michigan. Two newspapers in the Wolverine state reversed their editorial policy following the report of the President's commission on universal training.

Sixteen Ohio newspapers urged enactment of UMT; two discouraged it. Two Minnesota papers were in the poll, one on each side of the fence.

HonorCouncil HearsCampus, HonorCode Cases; Presents Five Case Histories and Judgements

Following are several briefs of cases heard recently by the Men's Honor council. A short interim between actual hearings and publication is allowed for the benefit of the defendants, and no names are printed. The report contains only those facts necessary to present a clear picture, though in reality many hours of preparation and hearings may have been involved.

* * *

A student was reported by a fellow-student for a possible violation of the Honor code. The basis of the accusation was that the student had left class for about 15 minutes and had taken his exam paper with him. When he returned he went back through the test instead of continuing from where he was in the quiz book. In his testimony, the accused stated that he had not cheated on the exam, and that he had gone out to think about the questions and have a few cigarettes.

ACTION: The case was dismissed for lack of evidence. Although his actions were indeed highly suspicious, no one actually saw him cheat, and there was no incriminating evidence on his paper. But such actions should serve as a warning to all students that they themselves must aid our system by not merely refraining from cheating, but by remaining above suspicion at all times. Leaving the room for as long a time as the student did in this case, particularly when it was a test that required every minute of class time to complete, certainly would be suspicious.

* * *

In one of the dormitories it had been a frequent occurance that bottles, of one sort or another, would be thrown at random up and down the hall. The dorm councilor had warned that whoever was responsible would be severely dealt with. One student, disgusted with the whole thing, stuck his head out of his door after a bottle had flown by outside and made a remark to the effect that he was fed up with it all. The boy who had thrown the bottles took it as a personal remark, and, after the other had returned to his room, went in after him. Another student forcibly removed him. This occurred several times, blows being exchanged in one instance, and broken glass being picked up but not used in another. The bottle thrower had been drinking and was quite unruly throughout the episode.

ACTION: The student was placed on probation for the duration of his stay here and was denied the privilege of living in a University dormitory for a period beginning 48 hours from the time of sentence until he leaves the University.

* * *

A student came to the Council and said that there was mass cheating going on in one of his classes but that he could not prove it himself. Several other students in the same class agreed with him that they "felt" that something irregular was going on. They all agreed that they would look for and report any student whom they saw acting suspiciously on the next test. However, on the next test all the students who had been suspected before, either took alternate seats from one another or changed their seats to another part of the room. No cheating was reported to the Council then, or at any other time during the quarter, from that class. Word had gotten out about the attitude of these students who knew their duty while truly living under the Honor System, and action by the Council was not necessary. However, this definite planning of turning violators in to the Council, although it served the purpose very well in this instance, should not be the sole preventer of cheating on this campus. The threat of someone especially watching, borders on the proxy system, and self-respect and integrity are not free to act as an influence affecting the proper conduct of students. In this case unnecessary bloodshed was prevented, it's true, and though we're striving for the day when all students will unhesitatingly say something about turning themselves in to a person whom they see cheat, premeditated "laying" for violators is to be discouraged. Let's not have to continue such drastic actions.

* * *

A student on bad-check probation was reported for another check violation. During the course of the investigation it was learned that the student had written other bad checks throughout the course of the year, but that they had not been reported by the banks because he had made them good within a short time after they bounced. The checks were returned for reasons varying from lack of sufficient funds to no accounts in the bank on which the check was written. When a check, endorsed by the student, returned because of no account, he was always the one to make the check good—never the person who had originally written the check. In some instances persons who supposedly had written the checks could not be located. In others, they denied that they had given him a check. After allowing the student time to locate these people, which he didn't, he was called before the Council again and swore under oath that at that time he was in no trouble anywhere because of bad checks. The Council had other knowledge of bad checks written by this student, however, and knew that he was aware of their having bounced. He did not know that the Council had this information.

ACTION: The student was suspended indefinitely for lying in the Council room and continued bad check practices.

Frisky Fred Outstanding On Grid And Track Alike

By Leon Mitchell

While wandering by the way of Kessing pool late one evening we couldn't help but notice a tall, loosely jointed figure wearing a sweat suit. He was heading for the swimming pool.

We stopped to investigate this unusual procedure and discovered it to be Fred Bauer, one of Carl Snavely's most promising of returning lettermen.

Fred hails from Palmyra, New Jersey, is married and has an apartment in Victory Village. He graduated from Palmyra high school in 1944 and upon graduation was voted the Most-Outstanding-Athlete of his class. Being one of the few four-letter men (football, basketball, baseball, and track), he ranks as one of the best athletes to represent that school in years.

He entered Carolina soon after leaving high school and as freshman end in 1944 he made his first College letter. He also won his letter in track that year and his javelin heave of 190 feet still stands as the Southern conference record. A torn muscle in his arm restricted him to limited service this year.

After a year of college he left for service, and during his stay in the Army he played end for the Camp Blanding, Florida squad. And moving on from there he played baseball with the Ft. Meade, Maryland team which won the Second Army baseball championship, played at Ft. Knox, Kentucky. In over 70 games of play he ended the season with a batting average of .342.

Returning to Carolina in 1946, too late for the gridiron season, he had to wait for the winter and spring parctice sessions. It was during these practices that he demonstrated a lot of natural fotball talent, and as a result of his showing in winter practice he was shifted to wingback. During spring practice he quickly adapted himself successfully to his new position.

Fred Bauer loves football and takes its work very seriously. He is very aggressive and possesses a wealth of ability. And it is very likely that he will command an important part in Carl Snavely's plans come next football season.

Staycock Tops 'Men of Mullis'

Softball Playoffs Continue This Week

The intramural department announced yesterday that the water carnival, originally scheduled to be held this Friday night, has been cancelled because of the lack of interest shown by the student body. Intramural directors Walter Rabb and P. A. Lee expressed reluctance in cancelling the event, and plans are now being molded to hold the carnival at an early date during the second summer session.

The bait casting tournament, which was to have been held in conjunction with the water carnival, will be held at 7:30 p.m. Friday night according to the original plans. All contestants and all those interested in the event should report to Rabb at the outdoor pool on Friday night.

At the same time the first game of the softball play-offs get underway on Monday with Staycock taking a 7 to 3 decision, to hand the Men of Mullis their first defeat of the summer. W. Gerriger, on the mound for Staycock, allowed the Mullis batsmen only four hits while his mates were reaching Pete Mullis himself for eight bingles. The Men of Mullis, playing weak defensive ball afield, also failed to display any power at the plate, and never seriously challenged as Staycock gradually built up its seven run total.

Today's game will match the Men of Mullis against the loser of Tuesday's contest between Staycock and the Grads, with the final game of the play-off to be played on field No. 7 at 4 p.m. Thursday.

Rain interrupted play in the final match of the tennis tournament on Monday, but Charlie Lambeth and Milton Cash are scheduled to meet at 4 p.m. today on varsity court No. 13 to determine the campus novice singles championship. Stratford and Lambeth will face Smith and Aenchbacher on the same court Thursday for the novice doubles championship.

The intramural officials are already going ahead with plans for a program for the second summer session, which will include practically the same offered during the first session.

"Captain Bob" To Turn Sailor--King Wins First Start For Bums

R. A. "Just Call Me Captain Bob" Fetzer, the quiet power behind the helm of Carolina athletics, is headed for a new experience Friday. In fact, he is headed for two new experiences. It all came about when Fetzer—normally known as Coach Bob—accepted an invitation by the Navy department to participate in the last part of the Naval ROTC summer cruise now in progress in the Caribbean sea and the Atlantic.

Lt. Comdr. W. J. Manning, one of the Naval science instructors in the Carolina NROTC program, will take "Captain Bob" to Norfolk Friday, and from there he will be flown in a Navy transport plane to San Juan, Puerto Rico, where he will board one of the Navy's newest heavy cruisers now taking part in the summer NROTC activities.

When the director of Carolina athletes makes the plane jaunt to Puerto Rico, it will mark his first journey into "the wild blue yonder," and to put it in his own words he is "quite excited over the whole thing." His cruise on the high seas will also be his first, although he confesses that he has been "off shore" on fishing excursions off the North Carolina Atlantic coast.

This is the first sophomore NROTC cruise under the new Naval program for the training of reserve officers, and it is in conjunction with this new program that "Captain Bob" is being taken along in addition to several educational leaders from other colleges having the NROTC arrangement.

While he is on the cruise, which will take him to Guantanamo, Bermuda and end in New York on August 8, Fetzer will observe the midshipmen at work and drill. He will also see them in the actual practice of firing in gunnery drills at sea.

There are quite a few Carolina students on the cruise, as well as most of the officers from the local unit. Included is Commander Schnable, the Carolina executive officer who was one of the Tar Heel football team's most ardent followers last seasn.

"Ahoy, "Captain Bob," anchors aweigh!

A comparatively unnoticed relief hurler for the Brooklyn Dodgers strode out from his usual position on the far end of the Bum dugout Sunday and began warming up. The home crowd at Ebbets field thought little or nothing about it, but after the game with the Cincinnati Reds had been in progress for a few innings they began to sit up and pay keen attention. Clyde King, an almost unheard-of Dodger, was pitching himself a whale of a ball game.

This same Clyde King is the young man who attends Carolina in the off-season and comes from the little town of Goldsboro not too many miles east of here. Katey—as his friends know him—went on to set the Redlegs down on six hits and one lone run . . . But that wasn't the whole story. He wanted to hit, so hit he did—to the tune of driving in three of the nine Brooklyn runs. Two of them he sent in with a rousing double.

It was the first start of the season for King, and it boosted greatly his chances for more similar performances under the flag of Brooklynites.

It's hard to mention Clyde King without mentioning Claude Crocker, who went to the Dodgers at the same time that the Goldsboro youngster made his debut. But it's a different kind of news about Crocker, of Winston-Salem. Crocker, who started off the season with Mobile in the Class A Southern Association, has been at Asheville for the past few weeks and day before yesterday asked to be put on the voluntary retired list by the Dodger farm system because of a sore arm which has grown out of a dugout accident at Mobile earlier in the year.

The Rodgers and Rodgers duo is no more. It's now a trio. Mrs. Hosea Rodgers, wife of the Tar Heel football star, gave birth day before yesterday to a six-pound daughter in Watts hospital in Durham. Mother and child are fine—but Hosea, he won't be back to normal for weeks . .

Simmons Third In National Decathalon, Off To Europe

NYU Ace Wins Third Straight Crown; Tar Heel Shows Continued Improvement

By Leo Wagoner

Floyd "Chunk" Simmons, competing against a group of the nation's most versatile athletes, has again proven himself one of the finest tracksters to ever matriculate at Carolina by finishing in third place in the National A.A.U. decathlon at Bloomfield, N. J.

Simmons compiled a total of 6,580 points to trail Irving Mondschien of N. Y. U. and Lloyd Duff of Ohio State. Mondschien garnered 6,715 points, nosing out Duff by 10 points.

The Tar Heel won the javelin throw with a toss of 117 feet 5⅞ inches. In the high hurdles, Chunk's specialty, he finished behind Duff in the slow time of 14.9 for the 110-meter dash. This is 0.6 of a second slower than his effort of 14.3 in the National A.A.U. meet at Lincoln, Neb., recently. The grind of competing in all the events slowed Simmons down considerably.

The Carolina speedster will leave New York by plane tomorrow to take part in the Olympic warm-ups as a member of the Central and Southern European squad. Accompanying him will be the same Mondschien who won the decathlon this weekend.

Simmons will add his talents to the European team in the hurdles, dashes, and relays. This is the first time he has ever competed in such an an event and it may be a strong point for inclusion of his name on the Olympic list for 1948. This was also the first attempt for Simmons in the decathlon and any future entrants will have to look to their laurels in further competition.

Vic Seixas Loses In Denver Finals

If he keeps going as he has during the last three tournaments, Carolina's Vic Seixas is going to become to be known as the original "five set" man of national tennis. Vivacious Vic, who was runner-up to Gardner Larned in the National collegiate tourney, lost his most recent five-set match Sunday when Seymour Greenberg of Chicago bounced him out of the Colorade Open in the finals.

Greenberg and Seixas had teamed together the week before to go to the finals in the National Clay Court doubles in Salt Lake City, Utah, and the tournament finals Sunday at Denver wound up Seixas' activity on the western tour. He is at home now in Philadelphia before going to Seabright, N. J., next week for another contest.

Seixas, who is ranked 16th in the nation, will participate in the National Amateur tournament in Forest Lawn, N. Y., the first part of September. He is working out at present on grass courts in Philadelphia in preparation for the Forest Lawn matches, which are also played on grass.

Cranford Named Health Group Head; Kay Kyser Cited for Outstanding Work

H. C. Cranford of Durham, UNC alumnus and former editor of the Carolina Magazine, was named executive director of the North Carolina Good Health association at the first annual membership meeting in Greensboro last week.

Cranford, who succeeds Harry B. Caldwell of Greensboro, is the former director of publicity for the association. He announced following the meeting that the association would launch a campaign in the state's 33 counties which have no hospitals in order to start construction as soon as possible.

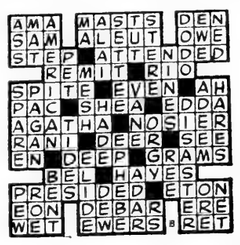
Also at the meeting, Kay Kyser, Carolina's famous movie and radio star, was cited for his outstanding work with the Good Health program during the past year. Josephus Daniels of Raleigh presented a silver tray to Kyser "on behalf of all the people of North Carolina for his magnificent contribution to the Good Health program."

Dr. Thomas A. Parran, surgeon general of the United States Health Service, told the group at the meeting in Greensboro that he had approved the plan for hospital construction submitted by the North Carolina Medical Care commission, making the state eligible for federal funds for the program.

KAY KYSER

H. C. CRANFORD

Parran pointed out that North Carolina was one of the first two states in the country to submit its medical and hospital care plans under the provisions of the Hill-Burton Hospital Construction act. He expressed the opinion that this state may be the first of the 48 to receive the funds to be made available by the federal government under the terms of the act. Indications are that North Carolina might receive $17,000,000 through these provisions.



Attending the session were 295 state leaders, representing more than 100 civic, business, social, agricultural, health and industrial organizations. Dr. I. G. Greer, president of the Good Health association, presided.

PRE-DENTAL SOCIETY FORMED

A local chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon Pre-Dental society was established at the University last Monday evening. Charter members of this newly founded recognition society were: Wilma C. Anderson, Charles L. Berman, Wilford A. Caldwell, William S. Ketchan, William G. McFarland, Jr., and William Lee Saunders.

The next meeting will be held on Monday evening, July 28 at 7 p. m. in Roland Parker Lounge of Graham Memorial. All interested pre-dental students are invited to attend.

Issues of the Daily Tar Heel for the past year may be picked up without charge any afternoon in the DTH business office, second floor of Graham Memorial.

'Crackers' Migrating

Georgia may, from now on, know that the only "Crackers" are not its own personal property.

Dean Paul Chapman, of the Georgia State Agricultural college, in explaining about the mass migrations from the farms of the South told the Institute for Commercial Organization Executives at the University that "'Crackers' are about as plentiful now in Florida as they are in Georgia."

Emergency Classrooms Ready for Autumn Use

Five of the emergency wooden classroom buildings now being constructed on the University campus are already in use by various departments, John S. Bennett, supervisor of University building, said yesterday.

"The library and the school of public health have each pressed two into service, and the law school is now using one," he explained.

In the outlining construction progress on the 28 barracks-type structures procured from Camp Forrest, Tenn., Bennett said 16 of them have been finished by government contractors and turned over to University authorities.

"These include the two public health buildings beside the medical school, one back of the law building, two for the library, three for the music department, three for the Romance language department, three for storerooms at the power plant, and two for the commerce department."

Under the identifying system set up by the University for the new class buildings, the structures closest to regular University halls will be lettered as annexes of that hall. For example, the three new annexes built next to Hill hall will be designated as "Hill—X", "Hill—Y", and "Hill—Z", respectively.

Bennett explained that after the University receives the finished external structures erected by the governmental workers, the former must do all the inside work; such as bringing in heat, water, and installing any seats and blackboards as needed.

"The entire number should be completely finished and ready for use by the start of the fall quarter," Bennett concluded.

college delegates to a meeting held for that purpose in New York. A second meeting took place last June, in which plans were formulated for an extensive program. Chapters are now being organized in most colleges throughout the nation.

At the June meeting, Chapel Hill was designated as North Carolina state headquarters, with Lincoln Kan, Carolina student delegate, as chairman. Officers have been set up here, and far-reaching plans are underway, including a United Nations Week in the fall, which will feature an outstanding figure in the U. N., possibly Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt.

The purpose of the CCUN is to promote the U. N. in every possible way; to distribute information concerninig the activities, functions, and problems of the U. N., and to acquaint the public with the vital importance of this world organization.

A dinner sponsored by the Institute on Inter-Cultural relations will be given this evening at 6:30 at the Carolina Inn in Mr. Mitchell's honor. The Institute is working in close cooperation with the CCUN on the task of promoting the United Nations

Tar Heel Discontinued For Next Summer Term

A.D.A. Organizer Set to Give Talk On Monday Night

Barney Taylor, World War II veteran, prominent member of the American Veterans committee and field secretary for Americans for Democratic Action, will speak here Monday evening at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge of the student union.

According to Clarence Barbour, chairman of the local chapter of A.D.A.'s subsidiary organization, students for democratic action, Taylor is coming to Chapel Hill to organize an A.D.A. chapter here. He was persuaded to do this by Winston Broadfoot who met him at the AVC national convention in Milwaukee last month.

Everyone Welcome

"Taylor is primarily interested in signing up Chapel Hill residents at Monday's meeting but all students are most welcome to attend," said Barbour.

Americans for Democratic Action and its affiliate, Students for Democratic Action, are national organizations with hundreds of charters all over the nation. A progressive, political-action group, A.D.A.'s membership includes such outstanding liberals as Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

Veterans Advised On VA Procedures

All veterans who drop out of school at the end of this session, whether graduating or otherwise, should check by 208 South building to have their subsistence pay stopped, Veterans Advisor Carlyle Shepard announced.

Shepard also announced that veterans may file applications for leave of absence pay if they plan to enter school again this fall. Forms for this procedure may be obtained in Shepard's office, 208 South building.

Veterans who registered at the University on June 12 for the first time under the G.I. Bill of Rights and who plan to attend the fall quarter are requested to report to the veterans registration section in Memorial hall July 24. At that time these veterans should fill out a "declaration of intentions" form which will expidite receipt of subsistence checks in the fall.

WAGER'S BOOK PUBLISHED

Paul W. Wager of the University department of political science has written a 124-page book on North Carolina titled "North Carolina, the State and Its Government." The book has recently been published by the Oxford Book company of New York and is on sale at bookstores here.

Classes for Second Session Set To Get Under Way Thursday

Registration Is Expected to Reach Total Of 3,600; Dormitory Space Still Available

The second summer session will open next Thursday with all regular classes meeting as scheduled. New students for the coming term will register on the preceding Wednesday, Director Guy B. Phillips has announced. The term is slated to close on August 29.

Pre-registration for the second term stands at approximately 3,600 students, and officials estimate that new registration will raise this total to 3,600 or 3,700.

Director Phillips said there is still dormitory space for a small number of new enrollees.

"A number of courses which began this term will be continued through the second," he continued, "and new students may take these courses even though they missed the first period." Phillips explained that most of the courses falling in this category are those providing for the renewal of teaching certificates and for general professional purposes.

Several new visiting professors will arrive on the campus to teach special courses during the second session. The English department leads with eight, representing colleges and universities in all parts of the country, while the Education, Zoology and Music departments will have two each. The Departments of History, Law and Psychology each will have one visiting educator during the second summer session.

Graham Memorial Continues Service to Summer Students

Graham Memorial is continuing in many ways its services as center of summer camp activities, and in addition is now lining up attractions from the summer entertainment circuits for the campus pleasure-seekers.

Tonight, Harry Hinson and his Stardusters orchestra will play for dancing in Graham Memorial's Candlelight room, which is located in the basement of the building and is frequently referred to as "the coolest spot on the campus."

The Candlelight room is open each week night from 8 till 11 o'clock and from 8 till midnight on Fridays and Saturdays. Music for week-night dancing is furnished by the "juke-box" but if enough interest is shown, a band will be available on weekends. A snack bar is operated to provide cold drinks and sandwiches. There is no admission charge and stags are not only allowed but will be extremely welcomed.

A bridge tournament is held every Tuesday from 7:30 till 11 o'clock under the direction of Hal Peacock, who also conducts an instruction class every Monday night in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. Beginners and novices are encouraged to take advantage of this opportunity to improve their game.

Other Facilities

Other recreational facilities of Graham Memorial are limited at present due to the expansion of the student body and student activities. However, facilities are now available for ping pong, chess, checkers, playing cards for bridge, and pinochle. A varied assortment of magazines and newspapers can be found in the main lounge.

Another popular feature is the Music Lounge on the second floor. A Zenith record player is available, and music lovers can check out their favorite albums from the main office. This room may be kept for one hour normally, but when no one else is waiting it may be kept longer.

On Sunday, August 3, Graham Memorial will present the Ebonaires, formerly known as the Deep River Rhythm Boys, to the campus in Memorial Hall. The Ebonaires are quoted by many persons as being America's foremost male quartet, and are now in their 19th year of touring the United States and Europe. These noted singers are especially known for their renditions of such famous songs as "Shortnin' Bread," "Wagon Wheels," Braham's "Lullaby," and "Asleep in the Deep," and many others. The Ebonaires appeared here last summer and were well received.

Many organizations meet daily in the various lounges and office rooms of Graham Memorial but there is still room for other groups. Arrangements and reservations can be made in the main office.

Chapel Hill Children Present Art Exhibit

An exhibition of summer art work by Chapel Hill children will open in the main gallery of Person Hall Sunday and continue through July 30.

This exhibit will feature the work of the children taking the six-weeks course at the elementary school. The classes consist of two age groups: 5 to 11 years of age and the high school group, and are under the direction of Joseph Fidler, James Moon, Francis Powell, Arnetz Joyner, and Joyce Jones. (These are under the supervision of Mrs. Howard Thomas, visiting instructor from the University of Georgia).

Featured in the 5 to 11 age group will be designs and original work in tempera, crayon, paper mache, clay, and stencils.

The high school work will include designs, wood-cuts, sculpture of waste materials, and paper mache masks, with special emphasis on design.

The public is cordially invited to attend the exhibit. The gallery hours are 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. on weekdays and 2-5 p. m. on Sundays.

Expert on Palestine Affairs To Speak Here Next Friday

The Rev. Theodore Jackman, executive director of the Palestine Research Institute and a member of the speaker's bureau of the American Christian Palestine Committee, will speak on "Arabs and Jews in the Holy Land," in Hill hall Friday night at 8:30 o'clock.

The speaker, who is a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London, has studied and observed conditions in Palestine for almost six years.

A number of campus organizations are cooperating with the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation in sponsoring his appearance here. Among them are the American Veterans committee, the Baptist Student union, the Carolina Political union, International Relations club, Intercollegiate Zionist Federation of America, Southern Conference for Human Welfare, Wesley foundation, YMCA, Lutheran Student association, and the Canterbury club.

The American Christian Palestine committee, national sponsor of the Rev. Mr. Jackman, is composed of a group of prominent laymen, ministers, educators and others, whose purpose it is to "express Christian opinion regarding Palestine."

Dr. Jackman will illustrate his talk here with color movies which he took while studying in the Holy Land.

TWO DORMS CLOSED

Ruffin and Manley dormitories will be closed for repairs on July 26 and must be vacated by July 28, James E. Wadsworth, housing director, has announced. All students now living in either of those two dormitories may obtain new room assignments for the remainder of the summer in the housing office at 207 South building.

Dormitory Groups To Sponsor Dance Next Friday Night

A floor show consisting of an all-professional cast, under the direction of "Bud" Robinson, will be the highlight of the Interdormitory dance next Friday evening from 8 to 11:30 o'clock. The affair will be informal.

Jimmy Marshall and his Carolinians, local campus orchestra, will play for the event, which will be held in Woollen gymnasium.

The dance is being sponsored jointly by the Men's and Women's Interdormitory councils, to help raise funds for the erection or purchase of a dormitory recreation shack, where dormitory groups can hold informal social functions. Other organizations on the campus, town students, and fraternities will also be able to use the shack when it is not being used for dormitory-wide functions.

Tickets for the dance may be purchased from dormitory presidents and they will be on sale at the "Y" Thursday and Friday from 11 till 12 and 1 till 4.

Miriam Evans is president of the Women's Interdormitory council, and Frank Hassell is president of the men's group.

House Addresses Di, Phi Societies

"Life at Carolina was rougher when I was an undergraduate here thirty years ago," said Chancellor R. B. House in an address Thursday night before the quarterly banquet of the Dialectic and Philantropic societies. "A student would think nothing of firing a revolver into the air several times," the Chancellor cintinued.

Challenging the students to spend some time every day in reading for the sheer love of great literature, the Chancellor advised, "Pick your favorite poets before you are thirty-five."

Important Elements

"Reading, writing, and speaking are elements of the spirit and the soul," House believes.

When asked a question on labor-management relations, the Chancellor replied, "That's Frank's department; I would not want to comment. My field is theological unrest and agrarian doubts."

House thinks that students today are more interested in politics and goverment than were the students of thirty years ago, and consequently modern students have more social responsibility. "The Carolina Political union and the University Veterans association would think nothing of sending a resolution to the president of the University informing him that the slop buckets in Old East need emptying." Thirty years ago we would not have thought of that.

Gym Dancing Classes Continue Next Term

The physical education department will continue to sponsor dancing classes at 7 o'clock every Tuesday and Thursday night in Woollen gymnasium throughout the summer, Dr. Oliver K. Cornwell, physical education director, has announced.

American and Latin dancing classes directed by Bill Townsend have proved so popular among summer students thus far that a wider terpsichoreal program is scheduled for the next six weeks. Townsend has slated a new beginning division to start next week on Tuesday and Thursday nights at 7 o'clock.

Advanced dancing will also be continued free of charge. Waltz, foxtrot, jitterbug, and polka steps will be taught on Tuesday nights from 7 to 9 o'clock while the more popular Latin dances including rumba, tango, and samba will be practiced on Thursday nights during the same hours.

Difficulties of Printing Cause Shutdown Until Next Autumn

Lack of Personnel at Local Printshop Said To Be Reason Paper Will Not Be Published

By Bill Lamkin

Publication of the Tar Heel has been discontinued for the second summer session due to difficulties encountered in the printing of the student newspaper, it was made known yesterday through a statement by the University Publications board.

J. Merritt Lear, faculty adviser to the Board, explained that every effort was made to continue publication of the Tar Heel on the present semi-weekly basis. But the Orange Printshop, where the paper is printed, has declined to renew its contract for the second session because of a shortage of personnel.

Pugh Cites Reasons

W. M. Pugh, manager of the Orange printshop, said he was ceasing publication because several members of his staff have recently resigned, leaving him with an inadequate force to continue. He pointed out that his head floorman and a linotypist left about two weeks ago. Another linotypist is critically ill in a Durham hospital, he said.

Pugh said he was also short on newsprint.

An effort was made to get the Tar Heel printed by a Durham plant, but investigation proved that the shop was not equipped to handle the job.

Lear has assured DTH Editor Barron Mills that plans are well under way toward getting the paper printed next fall on its regular daily basis.

Statement by Mills

Following is a statement by Editor Mills:

"We regret that we will have to cease publication during the rest of the summer months due to circumstances beyond our control. Next fall the Daily Tar Heel will again appear, complete with syndicated material (Li'l Abner, Bill Mauldin cartoons, etc.) and a 24-hour United Press wire service. Perhaps the brief interlude will give us the time we need to whip together a bigger and better publication."

Humor Editor Hodgson Wants Summer Stories

Tookie Hodgson, editor of "Tarnation," new campus humor magazine, requests potential staff members to submit any manuscripts they may have for the first issue next fall.

Hodgson states that due to an early November deadline, he wishes to obtain all of the material that he can during the summer months. Articles may be mailed to the Daily Tar Heel office, since Editor Hodgson is not in school during the summer months.

RESERVE OFFICERS MEETING

The Chapel Hill chapter of the Reserve Officers Association will hold its July meeting in the Carolina Inn Monday evening at 7:30. Major E. R. Rankin, chapter president, has invited reserve officers of all services to attend the meeting.

Shepard Is Elected To Red Cross Post

Carlyle Shepard, University Veteran's adviser, has been elected to succeed W. D. Carmichael as chairman of the Chapel Hill Red Cross executive committee, the nominating committee reported to the annual meeting of the local Red Cross last week in the Carolina Inn.

A unanimous vote of thanks was given Mr. Carmichael for his fruitful work as chairman during the last two years.

Hazlett Cited

Captain E. E. Hazlett received a citation from the national headquarters which expressed appreciation for his work as chairman of the membership drive. "Due to the fine work of the committee members and the enlightened public spirit of the community," announced Captain Hazlett, "the total contributions were 70 per cent above the quota."

University President Frank P. Graham was called upon to say a few words concerning his recent election to the National Board of Governors of the American Red Cross. Reminiscing, he said that when he was a student the local quota was $400 and that later, when he was chapter chairman, it was $700. Today it is $4,000. "At first, I wondered what I was doing on the Board of Governors," he said, "but I soon saw I was being appointed to committees which deal with labor and racial problems."

Housing Office Urges Quick Fall Applications

J. E. Wadsworth, University housing office, has urged all students who will attend the University next fall who have not yet made room arrangements for September to contact the housing office in 207 South building as soon as possible.

With the enrollment estimated at 7,250, approximately 3,000 students will have to be situated off campus. Dormitory space for men is now being assigned with the dates of entrance into school and of room application considered.

The University has a total of 3,907 accomodiations in the following catagories: men's dormitories, 2,131; quonset huts 580; Nash and Miller halls, 186; women's dormitories, 678; and Victory Village (exclusively for married couples), 350.

Food, Labor Prices Climbing Fast at Lenoir; Other Facts Presented by Legislative Group

(Report on Lenoir by the Legislature Fact Finding Board)

To the student body the Legislature Fact Finding Board makes the following report on food and conditions prevailing at Lenoir hall. This is the first in a series of reports to be made at future dates to acquaint the Student body thoroughly with cost conditions in Chapel Hill.

The basic price of food has gone up roughly 20 percent and the cost of labor by act of the legislature has also gone up 20%. However, the price of food to students has gone up very little in Lenoir hall. This is in rough, the gist of the Legislator's report on Lenoir hall.

Lenoir, Stacy, McIver Self-Liquidating; Fact-Finding Board Checks Food Gripes

Million Meals

During the last nine months Lenoir has dished out about one million meals to the student body at a cost to them of about fifty cents per meal while Lenior hall, as of March of this year, showed a deficit on the books of $13,045 dollars for the fiscal year.

What that means in money terms to Lenoir hall is this: Lenior Hall along with Stacy and McIver Dorm is operating as a self-liquidating unit. Out of the total cost of all three, Lenoir hall must pay $224,602 dollars as its share. Present plans call for the complete liquidation of the debt by 1959 at the rate $12,000 per year. At the same time Lenoir hall must pay for all new equipment that it gets, meet payrolls, and buy food. Food cost alone durmg the last six months accounted for 25% of total revenue while wages and salaries accounted for 36.4%. That leaves 7.6% of the total revenue to make new improvements and pay off the debt.

Numerous Complaints

During the course of the Board's investigation we heard numerous complaints on all matters touching on food. We have tried to find the answers to them all. Numerous suggestions have been made by the Board to the management at Lenoir hall and many of its suggestions have been followed.

One of the most interesting points about Lenoir Hall is the small number of complaints about the food. It is a known fact that a cafeteria serving thousands of meals daily cannot always be perfect. When the food served is not up to standard it is up to the student to complain. Those complaints are needed and will be appreciated by the management, for they are guides to him about conditions to which he cannot possibly know all the answers.

The Board suggests to the students that you inform the Lenoir hall staff when you do not think food is what it should be. Complaints to your roommates will do absolutely no good because they are not operating the cafeteria.

Students can do a lot toward improving conditions in Chapel Hill if they make their suggestions and complaints to the proper people. The Board stands ready to investigate wherever and whenever it is possible.

Quonset Question

The prospect of once again having to take up residence in the Quonset huts is not a thought that the former occupants like to face or stomach—especially when they learn that new students will be comfortably housed in dormitory rooms.

To put it mildly, the former residents who will have to take up quarters in the Quonset area believe that they are getting a "snow job" when they are told they are being put there out of necessity. This under ordinary circumstances, would be enough to appease them, but when they learn that freshmen who have just graduated from high school, freshmen veterans, who only recently returned from overseas, and even transfers from other colleges are being offered rooms in the dormitories, they are just a little leary of the fairness in the priority system for obtaining rooms.

It is not a question of veteran against non-veteran, but that of spending your college career in a Quonset hut. If there is any possible way of getting the men who have served their time in the huts moved to more comfortable quarters, then it should be done before the fall term.

If it takes even the drastic step of abolishing the plan to designate Alexander dormitory as a Freshman Dorm then it must be done.

Face-Saving Gesture

Although a grievous injustice has been partially rectified by the Ahoskie Kiwanis club's face-saving gesture of belatedly presenting Harvey Jones with an automobile, a blot remains on the record of Ahoskie, Kiwanis, and the state.

Ahoskie Kiwanians have claimed it was all a mistake, and no racial discrimination was intended. But the fact that no tickets to the raffle were ostensibly for sale to Negroes makes it abundantly clear that discrimination was intended. And when Jones was callously refused the car which was rightfuly his, discrimination of the lowest and cruelest sort was evident.

The questionable legality of raffles and the racial equality question are not the subject here; the question is the basic human rights supposedy existing in this country, and human decency and fairness, qualities in which certain of us seem to be lacking.

One gratifying result arose from the incident. That was the wave of protest from the people of the state and nation, Kiwanians included. The majority of North Carolinians and Kiwanians do not condone the cheating of Negroes. Perhaps the guilty Ahoskians will use that as an object lesson.—B. A.

Party Movement, Pavement Wails Enliven Mudville

By Dan Sapp

Mudville is muttering this week about matters old and new. Among the old is the stock question, "When are the roads going to be paved?" According to a village council representative, Tom Crittenden, the order is in. All that you have to do now is sit back, gird up your shock absorbers and await the inevitable.

Another old mutter which has taken on wail-like tendencies is the anti-party movement. There are parties and PARTIES, the latter variety is occasioning the wails. I still don't think parties can be controlled by legislation; as a matter of fact I doubt that anything could control last week's orgy (short of blasting). There is a thoroughly groundless rumor circulating that reverberations from this particular blow-out broke a whole set of shot glasses in Durham.

A new mutter with constructive results comes from the village. In a group meeting last week the families of Jackson Circle voted to build a supervised play area for the children. This week's meeting produced reports of concrete action by the committee and the area should soon be in operation. Supervision will be by mothers who volunteer for certain periods during the week.

* * *

Our household hint for this week involves the story of an ingenious lady and her decorative cat. The lady had a new blue linoleum laid in her bathroom, the cat was in a walking mood and walked through the bathroom, but he walked through some spilled white paint first. Oddly enough, the lady liked the effect so she put him back in the paint and threw him back in the bathroom, at this point the cat lost interest but the lady didn't and continued the operation until she achieved the desired effect. Remember, all you need is a bathroom floor, a can of paint, and a cat, preferably with four legs and a good disposition.

Constitutional Violation

Eller Accused of Errors In Treatment of Phi Case

By Bob Morrison
(President of Phi Assembly)

Tom Eller, president of the student body, made at least one false statement and several false interpretations in his treatment of the Phi Assembly Art exhibition. The student body should be made aware of these indiscretions by their president.

Eller said in referring to the Phi Art exhibition: "The funds are not being handled through the Student Activities office." (p. 1, col. 3, DTH, July 12).

Eller's statement is totally false. The original purchase of the automobile was made with a Student Activities check and all income was duly receipted and deposited with the Student Activities Fund. The records of the transactions are open to any student who cares to examine them at the Activities office in Graham Memorial.

Eller made the above statement in print, and the error was called to his attention in a letter directed to him, and he was asked to retract that false statement, but he has declined to do so.

The July 12 DTH headline read: "Phi Society Auto Lottery Is Suspended." At that date that statement was totally false; upon investigation, we have learned that the student newspaper printed the article in good faith, relying upon the information received from Eller.

By giving erroneous information to the newspaper, Eller caused the paper to print: "Sales of tickets . . . have been suspended for three days in accordance with a directive issued by Tom Eller.". The Phi did not choose to obey that "directive," for the organization was aware that Eller had no such power to issue a directive, and by doing so he acted in violation of the Constitution of the Student Body, which in Section 2 of Article III specifically enumerates the powers of the president. The power to force students to cease and desist is a power reserved by the Constitution to the councils acting only after a fair trial. (See Article II). Student freedom is challenged if Eller so dictatorially interprets his powers, and the Student council should act to curb him.

The tone of Eller's remarks was generally libelous to a respected campus organization which is approximately as old as the University. The publication of false statements and the assumption of despotic and unconstitutional tactics by its president is unbecoming to the honor of this student body; because the president has refused to apologize after being given an opportunity to do so, it was felt that the truth must be stated through this DTH article.

Write Away

Don't Get Stale

Dear Editor:

Records show that many very valuable and interesting courses are given the next six weeks for which few people have registered. Of course, it's hot, and everybody wants a good time and doesn't want to get academically stale by grinding! the nose at the academic wheel all year; however, there are some creative courses that are too valuable to pass up.

Frequently in summer school the University is fortunate in getting unusual instructors that we do not have the benefit of during the academic year; one of these instructors is the instructor in creative writing (the short story course) for the next six weeks, Hugh Holman.

Mr. Holman is one of our local professional writers. He will have particular appeal to anyone who has written or tried to write mysteries (either stories or plays) as he has published five books and has three more ready to be published; a prolific author and an entertaining person.

Low Morals, Greater Power Present World with Danger

By Jimmy Wallace

This is the last column. Many will sigh with relief. Others will regretfully regret it. Some will be sad.

It is traditional for "last columns" to be devoted to eulogies of long dead issues and administrative immortals. This, I believe, is characteristic of the very young who grow very old too soon. There are, fortunately or unfortunately, many problems of more significance than waving Alma Mater goodbye. The problems are collegiate, both numerically and in their effect.

Facing Life

The valedictorian who stands on the high school stage and speaks of "dark clouds on the horizon," and going forth to face life, is a pathetic and cliched sight to behold, but his words hold some truth. The collegian who fights for a "new world" is vigorous and colorful. Regrettably, he will probably become a cynic shortly, a hapless figure composed of frustrated and subdued juices whose ideas of justice become confused with ideas of fair play and law. A dilemma of the soul.

Restless World

The world, this summer, and it does not take an academician to perceive it, is restless. Perhaps it is the heat generated by climate and ideologies. Perhaps it is the cold, due to lack of calories in the Eurasian body. Or the Nature of Things. There seems to be adherents to all the points of view.

The three-hundred year span of "enlightenment," encompassing Protestantism, liberalism, or if you will, "individualism" threatens to come to a hasty conclusion. The schizophrenia of living in one world and thinking in terms of another, recently concluded, is slowly intruding into the lives of everyone. New circumstances have always given rise to new sets of values. History is heavily laden with "periods of transition" from one accepted situation to another.

It was only natural that sooner or later there would come a situation which would demand an immediate transition. Now that the time for the transition has come, each added instant will cost us dearly. Needless to say, we are running up a frightful account.

Explosive Situation

Individual morality and national morality, being what they are today, namely, a little lower than they have been for many, many years, and national power being multiplied by a factor of ten million, necessarily confronts the world with an explosive situation. When we apply the rules of the nineteenth century to the realities of today, we find that the shoe does not fit the foot. Most governments realize this, but are content to withstand blisters and bunions temporarily. The shoe to which we are accustomed will not fit the Russian foot. (It is not sufficiently warm and water-proof.) The Russian shoe is too heavy and hard for our dainty pedal extremities. The French would prefer a sandal or no shoe at all, and the English would like a shiny buckle as their concession to tradition. Wanted: one shoe for a very strange foot.

Thus we wander on, understanding nothing, wanting something yet undefined, while Entropy, biology, Nature, and God perform tasks which are postulated but not explained.

The temperature at the center of an atomic bomb explosion is several billion degrees hotter than a Chapel Hill summer.

Meat for Minski's

'Weep' Proves 'Peep' Show But 'Blues' Number Sincere

By Bob Sain

Last night, after the little men with the well-known shovels had cleared the stuff off Memorial hall's stage, where Sound and Fury had flung a combined minstrel-oleo shindig, the participants in the show could well have tucked their thumbs in the vests or bras (depending on gender) and boasted of a job well done. Director Ben Kistler had thrown everything from low burlesque to even-lower Chaucer into the production, thereby—theoretically—pleasing everyone.

Sex was the keynote.

Anatomy Discussed

Kistler and Pokey Alexander, end men for the minstrel show, must have culled the files of every burlesque house from Oakland to Boston to compile their gag-book. The end men left nothing to the imagination. It was with considerable surprise that I discovered they were not going to distribute foelthy post-cards. Bust, backside and various other portions of the anatomy were exhaustively discussed.

Forrest Covington's wide-ranged baritone capped the minstrel act with two well-chosen songs—neither risque.

Grey Adams opened the Oleo section, polishing up an old Astaire song-and-dance number: "Puttin' on the Ritz." He was accompanied by a chorus line of six coeds who maybe should have stood in bed. Though the muse Terpsichore slighted them somewhat, nature helped out by filling adequately their scant costumes. (The Moore twins of the chorus line were especially effective. They exhibited great dramatic talent in one five second parade across the stage.)

Chaucer Up-to-Date

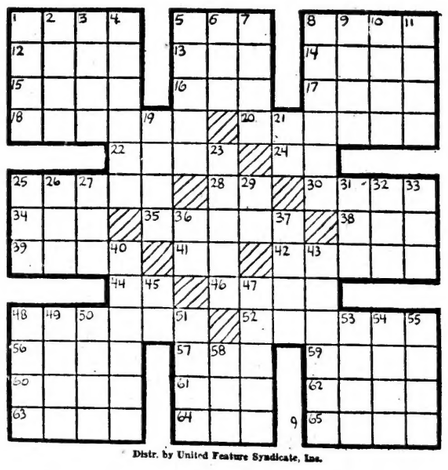
Pete Strader, obviously under the influence of heavy doses of Henry Morgan, wrote and took part in two clever, short comedy skits—one satirizing a radio soap opera, the other bringing Chaucer up to date and down into the belly laugh relam.

Music in the oleo section was handled quite well by Coline Smith (with anatomical accompaniment), Betty Huffman and Fred Hedrick.

Evidently saving the best for last, Director Kistler closed the show with a "Birth of the Blues" production.

Brilliant Blues

The Blues sequence was brilliantly done. Credit should go to Kistler and Strader again, for attempting to handle the subject seriously. Strader's atmospheric set was impressive.



Betty Huffman presented two blues tunes with more than sufficient sincerity. Bill Corley and Grace Blades contributed an effective dance sequence.

Though most of the show was meat for Minski's, the blues portion was excellent, even hinting at serious art.

Carolinas' AAU Swimming Session Opens Here Today

Grid Practice Opens Sept. 1

Georgia First Foe For Local Eleven

The 1947 Tar Heel football team, already dubbed by many as the team of destiny from the University of North Carolina, will officially open practice for the season Monday, September 1, it was announced yesterday by Head Coach Carl Snavely.

Southern conference rules reinstated this year outlawed summer drills, and this practice September 1 will be the first for the Tar Heels since the annual Blue-White game late last spring. The Carolina candidates will have exactly four weeks to whip into shape for the season opener with Georgia's powerful Bulldogs, victors over the Tar Heels in the New Orleans Sugar Bowl classic last January 1.

It will be the toughest schedule in the history of Carolina football that faces the Tar Heels next fall, an intersectional game with Texas in Austin coming up right on the heels of the Georgia encounter. The Snavelymen will also meet such teams as Tennessee, Duke, William and Mary and Wake Forest.

For the Tar Heels, what is probably the strongest squad in history will be on hand to greet Snavely, with Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice leading the pack that includes such backfield stars as Walt Pupa, Hosea Rodgers, Jim Camp, Jack Fitch, Joe Wright, Don Hartig, Paul Rizzo and many others.

Also, such linemen as Len Szafaryn, Art Weiner, Sid Varney, Maywood Fowle, John Tandy, Larry Klosterman, Dick McDonald, George Roberts, Max Spurlin and Ted Hazelwood will be on hand in addition to a host of other veterans and newcomers.

It should be the greatest year Carolina football has ever seen, barring all accidents—Beat Georgia!—Irwin Smallwood.

Mural Department Maps Plans For Next Session

Final Results Of First Term Play Announced; Managers' Meeting Set

The intramural office announced plans yesterday for its intramural program for the second summer session. The new program will include most of the sports played during the first session, with competition in most sports beginning during the first full week of the second quarter.

An important meeting of all intramural managers has been called for Monday, July 28, and all minor details pertaining to the program will be worked out at the time. Any last minute entries may be made at that time, since July 28 is the deadline for all entries in softball and men's singles and doubles tennis matches. Since the Daily Tar Heel will not be be published during the second session, softball schedules will be mailed to the intramural managers, and tennis and horseshoe pairings will be posted on the bulletin board located between the gym and the Tin Can.

Softball play is scheduled to get under way on Wednesday, July 39, and the first horseshoe matches are slated for Wednesday, August 6. Only doubles matches will be held in the horseshoe tournament.

Competition in the tennis tournament will be divided into five different categories, with the men's singles and doubles split into novice and open classifications as during the past quarter. Also to be played are women's singles and doubles, in addition to mixed doubles.

Plans for the water carnival, originally scheduled for July 18 but postponed due to a lack of interest, will be discussed at the manager's meeting on July 28. The date for the carnival will be announced at that time.

The Grads No. 1 team defeated the Men of Mullis 10 to 8 on Thursday to capture the softball championship for the first term.

Charlie Lambeth and Ray Morris ran away with the tennis honors, figuring in both the singles and doubles championship. Lambeth won the regular season with a 10-0 record, and teamed with Tom Stratford to take the novice doubles championship.

Morris of the varsity team won the open singles championship. Representing Emerson Fieldhouse, Morris and Don Peck had little trouble taking the open doubles tournament.

The horseshoe championship went to Red Gerringer of Oakwood Drive.

Seixas Advances In Penn Tourney

Vic Seixas, Carolina net ace who is touring the summer tennis circuits, continued his exhibitions of fine tennis during the week as he battled his way to the semi-finals of the Pennsylvania State men's grass court tourney.

Seixas advanced to the round of four in the Quaker event by virtue of a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Nick Carter of San Francisco.

The bronze Philadelphian, the defending titleholder, will have several tough barriers in his path to another championship in the persons of Sidney B. Wood and Earl Cochell, both of New York.

Following this tourney Seixas will take part in several more small events before moving on to the National singles and doubles championships to be held in mid-August.

Grads Capture Softball Title

"Men Of Mullis" Meet Match 10-8

The Grad No. 1 softball team remained undefeated in summer school competition Thursday afternoon when the winners of league No. 1 toppled the Men of Mullis, 10-8, to gain the campus championship.

It was the second loss in a row for the Men of Mullis, who finished the regular seaso nwith a 10-0 record, and superior hitting power was the deciding factor in the victory for the Grads.

With a 6-4 lead going into the last of the fourth inning, the Grads put on a burst of power and shoved across three runs which proved to be the winning margin.

The Men of Mullis rallied in their half of the sixth frame for four runs, but it went for naught as they failed to score in the top of the seventh. It was a lack of punch at the plate that kept the Men of Mullis under control. Taylor Thorne and Pete Arnez combined to give up only four hits to the Mullis crew.

Thorne and Ralph Adams led the Grads at the plate, each connecting for a home run off Pete Mullis in the second inning. Mullis went the route for his team, allowing 11 safeties in the seven-inning engagement.

Staycock defeated the Men of Mullis 7-3 earlier in the tournament.

Score by innings:

Men of Mullis	220 004 0	8	4	5
Grads No. 1	024 310 x	10	11	5

Mullis and House; Arnez, Thorne and Rechenbeck.

SNAKE PRICES CUT

Chicago (UP)—Among other price slashes, live snakes are down from 30 to 17½ cents a pound, reports Robert Bean, director of the Brookfield zoo. The drop came during a lively war between two snake handlers competing for the zoo's business.

National Junior '400' Relay Slated As Top Race On Card

Over 150 Contestants Expected To Enter In Boys', Girls', Junior, Senior Groups

The local swim session will reach its peak this afternoon as over one hundred and fifty mermen and maids vie for honors in three open classes and in the men's national junior AAU 400 yard free style relay.

The event getting underway at three o'clock will be the biggest outdoor session ever held in Kessing Pool and will draw a field from throughout the Carolinas and from as far north as Maryland.

The biggest spectacle in the Carolinas' AAU sanctioned meet will, of course, be the National junior relay, which will be one of the last three races of the 20 some odd program.

An admission price of twenty-five cents will be charged at this afternoon's swimming meet, it was announced yesterday by meet director, Dick Jamerson.

Teams entering large numbers of swimmers will be High Point, Chapel Hill, Greensboro, Wilson, Tarboro, and the host University team. Other entries have been received from smaller clubs consisting of only one or more contestants.

In the Boys' and Girls' divisions, the Chapel Hill entries rule as favorites to regain the crown they carried off last year, while in the junior and senior events the University squad seems formitable enough to cope with whatever competition may arise.

Such outstanding performers will be on hand as Mike Morrow, Buddy Crone, Pete Hexner, and possibly Billy Kelly.

New Swimming Pool Plans Are Announced

The outdoor pool will be opened for its regularly scheduled hours during the examination period, the University athletic department revealed yesterday.

The pool will be closed only one day between terms, Wednesday being set aside as the nonoperating period.

Pool hours for the second session will be the same as the first. Any changes will be announced later.

Simmons Off To Europe

Floyd "Chunk" Simmons, for two years the star hurdler of Carolina track teams, left New York by plane Thursday for Europe, where he will participate in meets throughout the central and southern part of the continent. Simmons is one of the nine nationally known track stars picked to represent the United States on the European tour.

CAA Workshop Exhibit To Be Presented Here

An aviation education workshop sponsored by the Civil Aeronautics Authority will hold a five-day exhibit at the University July 28-August 1. The workshop programs will be presented in the afternoons, in a building as yet unnamed by University officials.

According to Guy B. Phillips, director of the summer sessions who arranged for the aviation display through John E. Sims, assistant to the regional administrator for aviation training, various Department of Commerce officials will give lectures, display publications, and show films on the history, use, and future of aircraft. A representative of the Link Aviation Devices corporation is to give demonstrations with a Link pilot trainer for blind flying practice.

The purpose of these exhibits, as outlined by Sims, is to acquaint the general public with the fundamental principles of flying, the dangers and problems that confront the aviator, and new trends in the field of aviation.
